If more folks would remember the old saying, "Don't put off until tomorrow what you can do today," there's no telling how much better off they'd all be. And the worst thing about it all is that folks usually put off the most important things until a later date. For instance, there are a lot of folks who don't feel like they should who put off doing something about it. Luther Harris, 516 Chestnut St., Bowling Green, Kentucky, didn't feel good for a time, but he acted when he heard how HADACOL was helping people suffering from nervousness, aches and pains and run down condition caused by deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin. Yes, Mr. Harris started taking HADACOL and now he says he feels good.

Luther Harris

Here is what he says:

"For quite some time I was nervous and run-down, and I suffered from aches and pains. I was weak, and I could hardly do a day's work. I started taking HADACOL and from my first bottle I felt better. Now I feel good, and I can do a good day's work. I am still taking HADACOL and I wouldn't do without it. I praise HADACOL very highly."

HADACOL Attacks Real Cause

Remember, HADACOL is not a quick-acting product that only attacks the symptoms of your ailments, but actually relieves the real cause of these disturbances when due to such deficiencies.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 family economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. Adv.

Kidney Slow-Down May Bring Restless Nights

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, headaches, dizziness and loss of pep and energy. Don't suffer restless nights with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

DOAN'S PILLS

Do you suffer distress from 'Periodic' FEMALE WEAKNESS which makes you NERVOUS several days 'before'?

Do female functional monthly ailments make you suffer pain, feel so strangely restless, weak—at such times, or just before your period?

Then start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound about ten days before to relieve such symptoms. Pinkham's Compound works through the sympathetic nervous system. Regular use of Lydia Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against this annoying distress.

Klemme Softball Team Has Plans For Summer Season

SOFT BALL TEAM HAS BEEN ORGANIZED FOR SUMMER ENTERTAINMENT

At a meeting held by ball players and fans at the Fire Station Thursday evening, the matter of organizing the Soft Ball team was taken up and it is now definitely assured that Klemme will again enjoy some fine ball games throughout the summer.

"Stub" Lewis was named as business manager of the team, and Harvey Hubbard will act as manager of the team.

The prospects are good for a winning team again this year.

Businessmen and softball fans should get back of the team, both with your moral and your financial support. It takes a certain amount of money to run the team. Some new suites are needed, along with balls, bats and field supplies. So if you feel like "kicking-in" your donation will be appreciated.

As soon as a schedule is made out the list of games will be published.

ELL, AVERY, TWIN LAKE, LIBERTY FARM BUREAU PROGRAM APRIL 27TH

On Friday evening, April 27, four Hancock County townships will hold another of their information type of meetings. Because of the mis-understanding and the lack of information regarding the school Reorganization Program that seems to be prevalent among our people, the Hancock County Farm Bureau is sponsoring an "information" meeting which will include the townships of Ell, Avery, Twin Lake and Liberty.

Arrangements have been made to have several members of the county board of education to take part in the discussion period. Mr. Andregg, director at large, and V. A. Cook, director from Avery township have promised to help on the program. This is an apportunity for any of you folks to ask questions on phases of the program that you do not understand.

This is the second of a series of our township "information" meetings that has been held in Hancock County by the Hancock County Farm Bureau. The first one was held in Britt in February and the topic of discussion was "Responsibilities of Farm Bureau and the Extension Programs."

The four townships, Ell, Avery, Twin Lake and Liberty are planning a meeting of this type each month, with one township being responsible for each month. Ell township, with Laurence Greiman director is taking the month of April and will plan the meeting.

Remember the date and place, Friday night 8:00, April 27th at the Klemme Grade School Basement.

BUSINESS MEN TO HAVE A SPECIAL MEETING FRI. EVENING

There will be a special meeting of business men at the Grade School basement this Friday evening. There are a number of things of importance that need to be taken up.

Every business man in Klemme should make it a point to be present. Be there . . . this is YOUR meeting.

UNSIGNED LETTERS WILL NOT BE PUBLISED

If the person who wrote the article "Here Is A Gripe" will come into the office and sign his or her name, we will publish it. The Times will not publish unsigned letters.

The article referred to had a lot of good merit and why the person who sent it did not sign his or her name is beyond me.

Mr. Whitford will take over his new position on June 1st with the summer concerts and band festival.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Warm weather is here. Time for bike riding, roller skating, baseball and lots of other fun outside for the kids.

Sure its fun to play outdoors and it's good for you, too. But, as "Safety Sake" points out in this week's posters, the street is no place to play.

Your Iowa Safety Congress reminds all Iowa children that streets were made for cars and trucks. You'll have more fun and more room, playing in your yard or on a playground.

And remember, too, autos are bigger, faster and heavier than you are.

When you do have to cross the street, follow these safe walking rules:

1. Cross only at corners or marked cross walks.
2. Look left and right for turning cars before crossing.
3. Obey traffic signals and the policeman and safety patrol.
4. Never walk into a street from behind a parked car.

When you ride your bike in the streets, the same rules apply to you as to a car. Use hand signals, ride in a straight line, keep to the right curb and stop at stop signs.

So follow "Safety Sake's" advice. Remember: The street is no place to play!

MARCH MOST UNPLEASANT IN HISTORY

Des Moines—The official findings now are out on that recent unpleasant Iowa experience—the month of March.

Here is what the Iowa weather bureau says about it in a summary issued Thursday:

1. It was the coldest March since 1912 and the 10th coldest of record since 1873.

2. In many localities the lowest temperature of the whole month occured on March 21, the first day of spring.

3. It was the wettest March on record in Iowa. Average precipitation for the state was 4.22 inches.

4. At least 18 deaths were attributed to the storms—6 in traffic accidents and two in heart attacks brought on by shoveling the heavy snows.

5. Warm rains the end of the month released much of the accumulated moisture and caused widespread flooding by interior streams.

6. In the month's worst storm—that of March 10-13—the snow fell continuously for 85 to 90 hours and intermittently for 100 hours with snow depths of 22 to 27 inches accumulating locally in the northwest and southeast.

The weather bureau, which normally regards the hard facts of midwestern climate with a calm, professional detachment, was even stirred to an expression of deep feeling. Said the bureau in conclusion:

"There were no regrets that the storm-tossed month of March 1951 had finally come to an end."

PRE-SCHOOL ENROLLMENT MEETING APRIL 25

The Klemme Public School will have its annual pre-school enrollment for 1951-52 school year on Wednesday, April 25th, at 2:00 P. M. in the Grade School Building.

The minimum age requirement to enroll in Kindergarten next year is that the child must be five years of age by November 15, 1951. We urge all parents who have children entering kindergarten, next year to attend this meeting. Mrs. Joan Utt our present teacher has been re-hired and will conduct this meeting.

SERVICES FOR FORMER KLEMME RESIDENT HERE THIS THURS.

Funeral services will be held this Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock for Miss Augusta L. Lenz, 85, of Minneapolis, Minn. Burial will be on the family lot in Ell Township beside her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lenz.

Miss Lenz, who is a former resident of this community, is an aunt of Mrs. Harry Gibbs, Mrs. C. A. Arnold and Miss Minnie Lenz.

HANCOCK COUNTY RURAL YOUNG PEOPLE MET APRIL 9TH

Marie Book, 1950 Iowa Rural Exchangee, was the guest speaker at the regular Hancock County RYP meeting, April 9 held at the Garner REA building. She showed slide pictures which she took in the Netherlands and also gave a very vivid impression of life in Holland. She lived with three different families during the five and a half months stay. Holland is very beautiful with flowers and shrubs and their agriculture in many places is carried on very much like Iowa with modern equipment. Their children are the hope of their nation she said.

Jacob Tilma, youth exchange from Blya, Holland, was also present at the meeting. He is living at the Fred Mollander farm of Garner and expects to remain there through the summer months.

Fifty six young people from all over the county answered roll call. The president, Connie Burgardt, announced a banquet and dance to be held by the Kossuth County RYP, April 17, at the Plantation Ballroom at Whittemore; and a Winnebago County Banquet and Dance, April 25 at the Forester Hotel at Forest City. It was decided to extend the membership drive until the next meeting, May 14th. After the meeting, a movie "It Takes All Kinds" was shown, followed by games, square dancing and lunch. Betty Bussa, Doris McKean, Paul Devine and Roger Martin served on the recreational committee.

Trolling With Motorboats Now Legal In Iowa

The trolling bill recently signed by Governor William S. Beardsley has become law, and fishing by trolling with a motor has become legal in all state-owned waters in which fishing is permitted, except in artificial lakes of less than 100 acres. On the following artificial lakes, motors of five horsepower or less may be operated: Bacbride, Beed's Lake, Lake Wappello, Swan Lake, Geode, Lake Darling, Union Grove, Three Fires, Ahquabi, Allerton, Backbone, Palisades-Kepler.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Joe wagged his head as the car passed him. That driver was going too fast for this early morning fog. Glancing down, Joe checked his own speed—30 miles an hour. Fast enough, in the fog, for a semi-trailer rig with a load of cattle on board.

He wasn't too surprised when he topped the next hill and saw the car that had just passed him, wedged against a car which had apparently just pulled out of the county road. Joe rolled his truck to a stop just behind the cars, which were blocking most of the road, jumped out and ran to check the occupants.

"Anybody hurt?" he called. The two drivers of the smashed cars crawled out and took inventory. Outside a few bruises and a cut lip, they were all right.

"We'd better get these cars off the road," said Joe. "C'mon, we can get 'em separated, then I'll push 'em with my truck."

Five minutes of tugging by the three of them pulled mangled metal apart enough to free the cars.

"Well, that ought to do it," said Joe. "I'll get in the truck and push while you steer. But wait a minute while I set out some flares."

He just turned toward the truck when all three heard the whine of tires, approaching at high speed.

"Get out O' the way," screamed Joe. "He's gonna . . . "

The rest of his words were drowned in a screech of brakes and a rendering crash. Everything was still for a second, then cattle started to bawl in pain and fright.

The highway patrol was waiting when the wrecker arrived to pull a flattened bale of metal, once an automobile, out from under the rear of Joe's truck. The ambulance was late, but it was pretty obvious that it need not hurry.

Who's to say what the primary cause of the crash was? It was a pretty common combination—poor visibility, coupled with too much speed and complicated this time by a few minutes' delay in putting out flares, by a man who played half the role of Good Samaritan.

TWO KLEMME MEN NAMED OFFICERS ON GARNER V. F. W.

At an election of officers and installation ceremonies of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Garner on Tuesday evening, April 10th, the following new officers took over:

Commander --- Robert Denney
Sr. Vice Comm. ------ Kenneth Kluckhohn
Jr. Vice Comm. - Ambrose Kern
Quartermaster, - Dr. H. G. Voetberg
Post Advocate -- Curtis Riehm
Chaplain --------- Curtis Jante
Sgt. At Arms ---- Aaron Wille
Trustees, Arnold Hampel, Geo. Kern and Earl Henschen.

Kenneth Kluckhohn and Aaron Wille are the two Klemme men named on the staff of officers.

RURAL WOMEN'S DAY APRIL 24TH

The Hancock County Rural Women's Day which is held annually will be held at the Memorial Building in Britt, Tuesday afternoon, April 24th at 1:30.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED MOTHER-DAUGHTER BANQUET HERE

Two hundred and twenty-three women and girls were served at the Mother and Daughter banquet held at the Klemme Methodist Church Friday evening and sponsored by the Naomi Circle with Mrs. D. P. Anderson as chairman.

The tables were beautifully decorated with candles, fiesta nut cups and printed fiesta napkins and with vases of sweet peas.

Men of the circle worked in the kitchen, dishing up the delicious food and boys of the church served as waiters, and all did a splendid job.

After the dinner all went to the auditorium for the program which consisted of community singing; a couple of numbers by some little girls; a duet by Mrs. Wesley Patterson and daughter, Paige and also a duet by Mrs. James Carlson and daughter Candice.

Miss Jacobs, of Forest City was the main speaker on the program and showed very interesting colored slides of the Holy land.

The meeting closed with a song and prayer.

Kindergarten Took Train Ride To Garner Wednesday

Mrs. Utt and her Kindergarten pupils all went to Garner on a Rock Island train Wednesday. It was the first train ride for many of the children and they really got a big thrill out of riding on a real train. Mrs. T. G. Ahrenkiel and Bobby also went with the group.

One of the school busses later went to Garner to bring home the young travelers.

SEVERAL ARRESTS MADE THE PAST WEEK, TRIED IN COOK'S COURT

The past week was a busy week in Mayor V. A. Cook's Court when several persons were fined for traffic violations.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Cook held Court and heard two cases. Adeline Medaus plead guilty to driving another person's car without a driver's license on the streets of Klemme Sunday evening, April 8th. She was fined $15.00 and costs, the fine being suspended pending good behavior. The 14-year old girl was paroled to her father, Edwin Medaus until she is 18 years of age.

The second case heard was that against Vincent Zrostlik, who plead guilty to driving on the streets of Klemme on Sunday evening, April 8th without a driver's license. He was given until Wednesday to procure a license, which he did. He was fined $5.00 and costs.

Friday afternoon Sheriff L. M. "Dutch" Brower brought Virgil Ruiter, Kanawha, into Mayor Cook's court charged with reckless driving. Ruiter plead guilty to driving a Pontiac car, license 41-2725 on the streets of Klemme Sunday evening, April 8th in a reckless manner. He produced his driver's license, No. 939,740 in Court. Mayor Cook fined him $50.00 and costs of $9.75. $25.00 of the fine was suspended pending good behavior.

Saturday morning Carrol Bock of Klemme, was brought into Mayor Cook's court charged with disturbing the peace on Friday evening. Bock was arrested by Marshall Smid upon information filed by Wilbur Haefner at whose place of business Bock was creating a disturbance. Bock was fined $40 and costs, $25.00 being suspended upon good behavior.

SERVICES HELD MONDAY FOR WM. BUEHLMEYER

Last rites for William Buehlmeyer, 71, were held at the Klemme Methodist Church Monday afernoon with the Rev. E. Morris Egeland conducting. The Wellemeyer Funeral Service was in charge of arrangements.

Interment was in Ell township Cemetery with Albert Priebe, Carl Wille, Ben F. Greiman, Verner Priebe, Lloyd Lau and Walter Lau as casket bearers.

Obituary

William Buehlmeyer was born January 15th, 1880 at Elkport, Clayton County, Iowa, the first of two sons born to his parents, Wm. and Christina Lau Buehlmeyer.

When William was four years old and his brother Ben was one, a double tragedy occured which broke up their home.

First the mother died of appendicitis at the age of 27 and then the father died suddenly.

The two children thus orphaned, were taken in by their grandparents, Christian and Dora Lau, who provided a home for them until they were grown.

In 1892, the family moved to Klemme; where William completed his common school education, and also attended Religious Instruction at the German Methodist Church, and was confirmed May 12th, 1895 during the pastorate of Rev. Gotlieb Haefner, his memory verse, (Mathew 5-7.) was "Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy"

William Buehlmeyer was a farm hand, and worked for Herman Priebe for 35 years, and then when Mr. and Mrs. Priebe moved to Klemme in retirement 15 years ago, they brought their faithful servant with them and gave him a home until his years ended.

William Buehlmeyer never married and was content to remain with the Priebe family for a half century.

Mr Buehlmeyer died suddenly Friday morning, April 13th, 1951 reaching the age of 71 years and 3 months.

He leaves two aunts:

Mrs. Dora Greimann, Garner Route 4 and Mrs. Lena Reusch, South Haven, Michigan and a host of cousins and other more distant relatives.

COUNTY 4-H FUN NIGHT HELD APRIL 7TH

The annual Hancock County 4-H Fun Night was held in Garner at the High School on Saturday evening, April 7th.

The evening program was started with a tap dancing number by Bonnie Mach, Sharon Newell and Judy Juhl with Mrs. Chet Stille accompanying them. A film "Helpful Henry" was shown by Paul Henderson, county extension director. Janice Paulson of the Boone Buzzers Club played two numbers on her accordian.

The remainder of the evening was spent in playing group games The 325 people attending were divided into 12 groups. A point system was used for each game with the groups finding their totals at the close of the evening. The Pink Phyllies won first. Members of the Rural Youth Group were leaders for each group and girls and boys 4-H leaders conducted the games.

Singing was lead by Paul G. Shurts followed by the Grand March which lead everyone to the lunch which was served to conclude the evening.

The county 4-H girls and boys officers, Mrs. Joe Burgess and Donald Burk acted on the committee to select and prepare the games that were played. They also acted on the registration and ushering committees.

Ike Snubs Dewey

ONLY A FEW insiders know it, but Governor Dewey has been coldly snubbed by General Eisenhower.

Ever since Dewey announced his support for Eisenhower for the 1952 presidential nomination, the governor has tried to arrange a political chat with his prize candidate. However, Ike artfully dodged each overture, and has sent back word that he was "too busy" or "just leaving town" or "ill."

This cold-shoulder treatment has finally gotten under Dewey's skin and caused him to describe Eisenhower in colorful—but unprintable—language. Dewey still regards himself as head of the Republican party and is furious at Ike's polite rebuff.

One of Ike's bosom army pals explained the Dewey snub this way:

"It's all very sim.ple," he admitted to this column. "In the first place Ike just doesn't like Dewey. Secondly, Ike's political backers have told him that the New York delegation to the Republican convention is in the bag—regardless of where Dewey stands."

The ironical twist is that Dewey not only is committed to Eisenhower publicly, but is a leading supporter of Eisenhower's foreign-policy point of view inside the Republican party.

Note—Ike's dislike of Dewey goes back to the spring of 1948 and the bitter struggle over the GOP presidential nomination. While Ike was flirting with the idea of accepting a draft, he received word that the Dewey forces were collecting a "file" for use against Eisenhower in case he became an active competitor for the nomination.

Aiding Guerrillas

A secret decision to aid China's 1,500,000 anti-Communist guerrillas has been made by America's top policy group, the national security council. Under this decision, U.S. agents will contact guerrilla leaders on the mainland and offer limited armed aid for raids on Communist strongholds and supply lines. This plan would follow the pattern of assistance to Greek and Yugoslav guerrillas in World War II.

Authentic reports from the mainland say the Chinese guerrillas, some of them former nationalist troops, are in actual control of vast areas in the south and northwest of China. With Communist defeats in Korea, the guerrillas have launched bold attacks throughout China. Pekin's red dictator, Mao Tse-Tung, has imported Soviet experts to run the "anti-bandit extermination campaign." Some reports claim that up to half a million Chinese have been killed or arrested in this campaign in the last year.

Meanwhile an argument still rages inside the security council on arming, for use in Korea, the 600,000 trained and partly equipped troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek on the island of Formosa.

The chief advocate of aid to Generalissimo Chiang is General MacArthur. He cabled Washington that with Chiang's troops he would have a sufficient force to drive to the Manchurian border.

However, the opponents in the state department and the pentagon claim that Chiang's troops would desert, that Chiang is discredited in Asia, and has no control over the guerrillas.

Sopping the Gravey

While small firms have been left out in the cold, the giant corporations have been sopping up all the gravy in defense subsidies.

Already the big companies, such as U S. steel, have been granted over two billion dollars in tax subsidies for defense expansion. Yet at the same time, applications from small firms and newcomers are gathering dust in government offices.

These government subsidies are in the form of accelerated amortization — or rapid tax write-offs—on new plants which the government approves for the defense effort. The certifying agency is the national production administration, which has been giving big business all the breaks.

For example, U S. steel, through its subsidiary, Carnegie-Illinois, has obtained over $300,000,000 in tax write-offs for one plant at Morrisville, Pa.

The truth is that small business is getting a worse deal than labor from mobilization boss Charles Wilson.

War Notes

The Chinese Communists are pouring reinforcements into a new line north of the 38th parallel. They are using the German system of replacing battalion for battalion instead of man for man . . . Meanwhile, General MacArthur has been begging the joint chiefs of staff to double American replacements to Korea, which have been averaging about 14,200 per month. A 50 per cent increase has been agreed upon

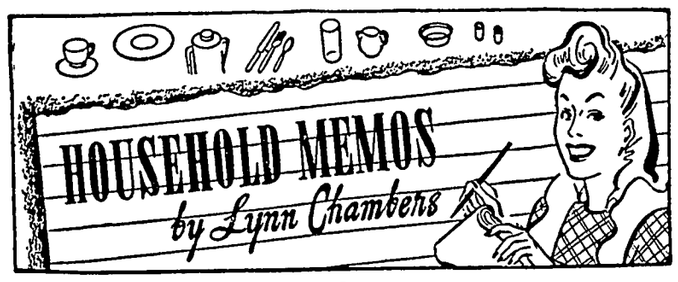
DES MOINES COOK WINS 11 AWARDS AT 1950 IOWA STATE FAIR

Mrs. Fred R. Lamp of Des Moines, Iowa, is a grandmother who loves to garden, keep house, and win cooking prizes! She has been doing the latter for more than twenty years! Her latest awards were won in 1950 at the Iowa State Fair, where she took eleven different prizes for her food exhibits.

With that record, Mrs. Lamp is a real champion. And like so many champion cooks, she depends on Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast. "It is so fast-rising," she says, "gives me grand results, too!"

It's true! Yeast-raised treats are delicious and nourishing. Nothing can top their delectable flavor—nothing makes more of a hit with the menfolk.

When you bake at home—use yeast—Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast. It's the best ever . . . easier to use, faster dissolving. Buy a supply soon—when you bake at home, delight your family with yeast-raised goodies.



Let Salads Provide Zest to Mealtimes On Warm, Lazy Days

PROVIDING APPETITE stimulating zest in family menus is the goal of every thoughtful homemaker when the lazy days of spring arrive. Since the best of appetites lack enthusiasm at this season, the tonic of good food nicely served can be the most effective of tactics.

Gay salads, bright as the first spring flowers, are one good way of reviving food interest. Let them be menu accompaniments, main dish salads or dessert-salad combinations.

Keep them fresh, crisp and cold. Chill the plates for the salad as well as all the individual ingredients for several hours before preparation time. Handle as little as possible to prevent a wilted look, and the natural goodness of the foods will do the rest.

Citrus Salmon Salad
(Serves 4)

1 pound canned salmon
1 cup cabbage, finely shredded
½ cup pineapple, cut in pieces
16 grapefruit sections
¼ cup green pepper, cut in strips
2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
Lemon juice
French dressing

Flake the salmon in large flakes. Arrange a bed of shredded cabbage on salad plates. Place salmon flakes, four grapefruit sections, pineapple, green pepper strips and hard-cooked eggs on cabbage bed. Sprinkle lemon juice lightly over all. Serve with French dressing.

Baked Sea Food Salad
(Serves 6-8)

½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup minced onion
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup cooked flaked crab meat
1 cup cooked shrimp
1 cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
2 cups corn flakes
¼ cup butter
Paprika

Combine green pepper, onion, celery, crab meat, shrimp, mayonnaise, salt and worcestershire sauce; mix well. Place the mixture in individual shells or shallow baking dish 9" x 9". Cover with corn flakes; dot with butter, and sprinkle paprika over top. Bake in a moderate oven (350°) about 30 minutes. Serve with slices of lemon.

Continental Salad Bowl

Watercress
Lettuce leaves
Curly endive
Peas
Raw cauliflower tips
Kidney beans
Julienne American cheese
Salad dressing

In separate sections of a salad bowl place watercress, lettuce leaves, curly endive, peas, cauliflower, and kidney beans. Serve with a bowl of julienne American cheese and a bowl of salad dressing.

Chow Mein Salad
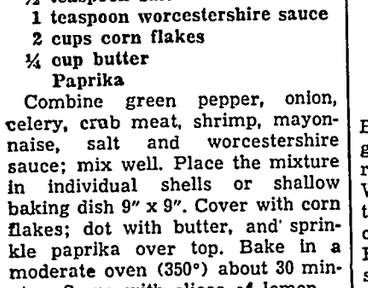
(Serves 6-8)

2 cups finely cut cooked chicken (or pork and veal)
1 cup drained, canned bean sprouts
1 small can water chestnuts, sliced
½ cup diced pineapple



Carry out a green and white combination in your salads for warm Spring days with this salad-dessert loaf made of gelatin, fruit juice and fruits. Bread and butter sandwiches made with cookie cutters are excellent to serve around it for a dessert luncheon.

Spice Cake Beverage
*Recipe Given

½ cup diced celery
1 tablespoon minced pimento
1 cup canned peas
Salt and pepper to taste
Shredded young green onions
French dressing

Combine salad ingredients, season to taste with salt and pepper. Then toss lightly with French dressing. A tart dressing will be most appropriate. Chill and serve.

Salad-Dessert Loaf
(Serves 6)

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon melted butter
⅓ cup mild vinegar
3 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
Few grains cayenne, if desired
⅔ cup milk
2 tablespoons canned pineapple juice
1 cup prepared fruit
1 cup evaporated milk, whipped

Soften gelatine in cold water. Beat egg yolks and salt. Add vinegar, sugar, butter, cayenne, paprika, and pineapple juice gradually. Whip lightly. Add milk and cook in top of double boiler until of custard consistency, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and dissolve softened, gelatine in hot custard mixture. Chill, stirring occasionally while cooling. When mixture begins to set, fold in whipped evaporated milk and fruit, cut in small pieces (orange, cherries, canned pineapple, grapefruit, peaches, pears, or any desired fruit combination.) Turn into a large mold that has been rinsed out in cold water first, and chill. When firm, unmold on platter and garnish with green pepper. Trim platter with salad greens. Serve with open-face sandwiches, if desired, for dessert luncheon.

Frozen Cranberry Peach Salad
(Serves 8-10)

3 cups diced peaches
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup mayonnaise
2 packages cream cheese
1 cup canned cranberry sauce
½ cup whipped cream
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped nuts

Drain and dice peaches. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Blend together mayonnaise and cream cheese. Then blend in cranberry sauce, mixing thoroughly. Fold in whipped cream, salt, peaches, and chopped nuts. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze until firm. Garnish with walnut halves. Cut in squares. Serve on lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise or whipped cream.

A chilly salad that looks as cool as it's meant to be includes orange slices, sliced, Bermuda onions and cucumbers. Have the greens chilly, too, and serve with Thousand Island dressing.

Flake the crabmeat and blend with diced cucumber and mayonnaise. Serve on thick ripe slices of tomato perched on thin slices of toast.

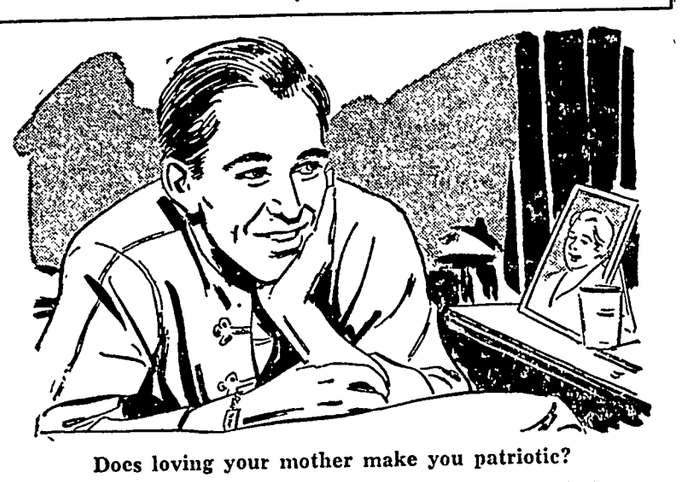
Cream your lobster for a change and serve on top of rice. A sprinkling of slivered almonds and cocoanut makes an epicurean dish of this.

For a lovely seasonal dessert that's pretty as well as delicious, place scoops of lime sherbet in meringue shells and serve with thickened pineapple syrup.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Patriotism Stems From Security

By Lawrence Gould



Does loving your mother make you patriotic?

Answer: This is the suggestion of an eminent psychiatrist and certainly love of your country is not inborn in the sense that love for yourself is. It seems likely that the friendlier and more secure a baby finds the home that he grows up in, the more he'll tend, as he grows older, to widen his devotion to it so as to include his larger home or country. Conversely, it is doubtful where children of unhappy homes are likely to be patriotic. It is interesting that in "The Traitor", Mr. William L. Shirer depicts his central character as the child of a domineering and unloving mother.

Can any ailment be "completely cured"?

Answer: Probably not in the sense that your condition will be the same as if you had never been ill. Every thing that happens has enduring consequences one way or the other, and doctors today prefer to use words like "arrested" or "remitted" rather than "cured". But in many cases, overcoming physical or mental illness leaves you better off than before—you may have developed an immunity which protects you from further infection, or may have developed a degree of insight (self-knowledge) which you would not otherwise have had a chance to gain.

May a doctor make his patients ill?

Answer: Yes, though unintentionally, says Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, Professor of Psychiatry at the University of Colorado. A doctor may cause an illness or make an existing illness worse by the way in which he examines patients, his manner toward them or his attitude toward their symptoms. This will be because he does not recognize the emotional factors in illness, cannot treat minor emotional disorders if he recognizes them, or fails to realize how large a part his own feelings and behavior play in both the cause and the cure of disease.

Importance of Proteins in Daily Diet

By Dr. James W. Barton

I MET ONE of my old schoolmates recently and he asked me how he looked. I told him he looked well, if not better, than when he was a youngster. He gave me a triumphant smile and said, "Well, I'm a vegetarian!"

I asked him if he drank milk, but I received no answer.

Milk is as much an animal food as meat and from the standpoint of protein (now considered our most valuable food) milk is richer in protein than meat itself.

Protein foods are the source of what is known as the amino acids which are needed for growth, repair, reproduction, and, what is equally important, needed for the juices used in the various body processes of stomach, liver, kidney, heart, bloodvessels.

While most of us think of animal proteins as the only proteins, we are learning from outstanding nutritionists that vegetable proteins are also needed in an all-round diet.

In the British Lancet, Dr. D. P. Cuthbertson states that it is now known that repair of tissue where proteins are needed is only possible where all the required acids are available together in the right proportion at the same time. In addition to these proteins the carbohydrates (bread, sugar, potatoes) must be used daily as carbohydrates, in addition to supplying energy, help burn up the proteins, thus making full use of the valuable protein eaten.

It is a remarkable thing that adults have learned to eat about the right proportion of proteins, 14 to 15 per cent of their total intake, but unfortunately many children do not eat enough of them. Also our teen-agers, adolescents, because they can often choose their own diet, do not eat enough proteins and are satisfied with starch foods which, while giving plenty of energy, do not supply the building material or repair material needed at this age.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Odd Jealousy

ONCE THERE WAS a sweet, good, hardworking wife and mother whose husband was disagreeable. For years she put up with it. She was snubbed and hurt, and the children—she had four children—were snubbed and hurt, and a wide circle of kinsfolk and friends used to say, "Isn't it a shame the way Harold treats Marlise?"

Harold was a successful lawyer; his work was entirely in his office, he rarely went into court, and he always thought he didn't want court work. Marlise thought it was her job to stick to him in spite of her trembling hands and filling eyes and shaken heart because of home and children, and because "that was the way Harold was." He was a generous husband and father in whatever money and effort could do, he stood well in church and social life, and was genuinely popular. But at home he made life difficult; the children were silent when Daddy was at the head of the table, and Marlise was nervous and explanatory.

Marlise had a wise mother. I never met her, but I know she was wise. After a rather painful scene at which the older woman was present, when Harold had been more than usually cruel in words and manner this mother said something like this:

"Marlise, Harold is jealous."

"Mother!" Marlise said, shocked, "you know I've never looked at another man. You know how I love Harold, in spite of all his difficult moods, and how I live for the boys and little Marie-Louise."

Jealous of Everything

"I'm not speaking of another man," her mother said. "I'm speaking of everything. Everything. Harold's jealous of his sons and of the baby, he's jealous of your calls on me and your affection for your brothers, of your telephone calls and your woman's club, of your Red Cross morning every week and your canasta group. In short," this mother may have concluded, "of the works."

". . . Harold is jealous . . ."

Marlise took this to heart,, didn't believe it, and decided to prove that her mother was wrong. It so happened that her brother was having a birthday that week and she had decided to give him a very smart type of jacket. On the birthday she said to Harold, "You had to have your coat, too—yours is a little nicer than Jack's because it somehow looked more like you," and she presented him with a jacket. Harold merely said a gruff, "how come?" then, but next day he wore the jacket to the club lunch and she heard him saying, "Marlise picked it out for me" to more than one friend.

A great light broke over Marlise. She went seriously into the business of spoiling Harold. When he next commented on a case she said casually, "Hal, I never heard you plead in court. If you do on this case, let me come down and listen."

"Bore you to death," said Harold. But an hour later he telephoned home that the case would come on in an hour, and when she shifted her program about, abandoned everything, and went down to court, she found that the bailiff had reserved a seat for her.

An Evening's Walk

A night or two later, when he came home nervous and jaded, she let him eat his dinner, and then asked him to walk about the block with her in warm spring dusk and get some fresh air. They rather got in the habit of doing this, and if the boys suggested that they go along she would say, "No, this is Daddy's and my time together; you children are out all day while he's shut up in the office, and you can walk any time."

Harold began to talk more freely at the family dinner table about his work; Marlise had gained a real knowledge of it now; and gradually the children came to realize that at any cost Daddy came first with mother, and to temper their demands accordingly.

And the whole trouble at the Rosses' solved itself, and grew—as the solved problem always grows—into a better state of affairs than if there had been no problem to begin with.

Of course, if a man and his wife are genuinely sick of each other's company, and fundamentally incompatible, then the task of reconstruction is harder. But love is a fluid and unpredictable element. It can spring up with sudden devastating force between two who believe they are enemies; one moment of it can wipe out years of coldness and hurt. We human beings are all pretty much alike in our essential makeup. Many a couple who part in bitterness and disillusionment lose, in a divorce, the very thing which they are seeking—love.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

BADLY WORN LAUNDRY TUBS

Question: The smooth finish—assumed to be cement—has worn off the bottoms and a short distance up the walls of our laundry tubs (twin) They have been in use since 1940. Now the coarser material. fine gravel, is exposed and from time to time small particles are found adhering to the wash I shall appreciate your giving me any suggestion which may be translated into a method of repairing this damage

Answer: If not too rough, you might be able to smooth the surfaces by rubbing with a coarse abrasive stone. If this fails, you might call in a competent concrete worker. He may be able to clean the surfaces with a muriatic acid solution, rinse with water and put in a layer of cement mortar. If he does not think this idea practical, you could have a sheet metal (tinsmith) worker cut a sheet of stainless steel to fit the bottom of the tubs The sheet should be taken out after each washing for thorough rinsing with clear water and the tubs should be allowed to dry out Of course, the better plan would be to have good modern porcelain tubs put in, and get rid of the old ones

INSULATION IN ATTIC FLOOR

Question: Please advise whether it would be of any value to place waterproof paper between the joists in the attic (i.e. the ceilings of the rooms below) before pouring or blowing in the insulation material. I intended to do the work myself and would appreciate your advice, since it will require considerable additional work to lay the paper, and unless it will make the insulation more effective, I do not wish to go to this extra expense If you do consider this waterproof paper an advantage, would you tell me what type to use?

Answer: Your plan is entirely correct, for the paper would act as a "vapor barrier" and protect the insulation from any penetration of moisture from the house air, rising through the ceiling plaster. Get what is called vapor-proof paper, for not all water-proof papers are vapor-proof. Your dealer in insulating materials will have it in stock. After putting in your insulation, cover the material with tar paper or other strong paper to protect it from dust. (Insulating batts and blankets come with a vapor-proof covering.) Or you can lay flooring instead.

Child's World Is Wonderful

Carmelita Plonka

The world that children live in is mighty wonderful . . . filled with little daydreams and hopes and joys that make the older folks sometimes wish they were school-age again. But boys and girls have their ups and downs, too, particularly when they are not feeling well. Ten-year-old Carmelita Plonka, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Plonka of 3202 S. Aberdeen, Chicago, Ill., was not feeling good recently and was just too listless to get the most out of her school days. Fortunately for Carmelita, though, her grandmother suggested that her mother give her HADACOL, because she had heard how much it was helping children deficient in Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin. Now Carmelita feels fine and her mother says she has a big appetite.

Here is Mrs. Plonka's statement: "My daughter Carmelita, who is 10 years old and in the fifth grade, had always been underweight and I had to positively force her to eat. She had no interest in food whatsoever, but I knew that she had to eat. When we were visiting my mother in Missouri over the Christmas holidays she suggested I give Carmelita HADACOL. I bought a large bottle of it that same day and was amazed at the change in Carmelita. Her appetite picked right up and she now eats three hearty meals a day plus in-between snacks. I have really praised HADACOL, and highly recommend it for everyone."

HADACOL can help you, if you suffer such deficiencies. Ask your druggist for HADACOL today.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 family economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. Adv.

NATIONAL SHOE REPAIR MONTH

KLEMME SHOE REPAIR

RAPE PASTURE IS GOOD GRAZING CROP FOR HOGS

Farmers who need a good first-year grazing crop for their hogs this year will find that rape pasture will fill the bill, says C. S. Dorchester, the Iowa State agronomist.

He reports that from early July until after fall frost, this succulent, high-protein pasture crop will carry from 16 to 25 hogs per acre, depending on soil fertility and supplemental feeding. Dwarf Essex is the variety recommended in Iowa.

The crop can be planted alone or sown with oats as a companion crop, Dorchester says. Oats will make pasture for the hogs early as long as the ground is firm enough to prevent injury to the rape seeding when the hogs are turned in.

When oats are planted as a companion crop the agronomist suggests disking them in first. Then sow the rape pasture at the rate of 5 or 6 pounds of seed per acre. If the soil is moist, harrowing will be enough to cover up the seed, but on dry ground the agronomist suggests cultipacking after harrowing.

FARM ACCIDENTS HIGHER THAN IN INDUSTRY

With the rate of farm accidents nearly twice as high as that for industry in general, Gilbert Guenther, president of Hancock County Farm Bureau, this week urged all operators of farm machinery to be extra careful as the spring planting season gets into full swing.

Mr. Guenther cited individual carelessness as the greatest cause of all types of accidents. "Everybody seems to think accidents happen only to the other person," he said. "Safety on our highways and in the fields is a 'must', if we are to cut down this great loss of life and large numbers of injuries and property damage each year."

"The Farm Bureau resolutions, written by members from every county in the state, calls for a study of the problems of developing suitable lighting and signal equipment to designate slow-moving vehicles such as tractors on Iowa's highways," Mr. Guenther said.

The county Farm Bureau president also pointed out that the resolution on safety asks for uniform highway signs and markers in all the states to "Protect life and property."

The resolution further calls for an increase in the number of highway patrolmen in Iowa. Farm Bureau's safety resolution would finance this addition to our highway patrol force by increasing the cost of individual drivers' licenses in the state, Mr. Guenther said.

PROPER EATING HABITS IMPORTANT FOR CHICKS

Teaching baby chicks proper eating habits is one of the important steps in building a high-producing laying flocks, says W. R. Whitefield, Iowa State College extension poultryman.

He suggests putting feed out on paper flats and keeping feeders filled to the brim with baby chick starter for the first two days to be sure all the chicks find the feed.

Some scratch feed on top of the mash hoppers for the first 2 days also helps the chicks get off to a good start.

Keeping plenty of feed before the chicks helps them learn early to balance their own rations. Whitefield advises against feeding whole oats or shelled corn until the chickens are 8 weeks old.

As the chicks grow, adding feeders will supply the extra feeder space the chicks need and will avoid the necessity of running to the brooder house several times a day to keep feeders filled. At least 1 inch of feeder space is needed per chick for the first 4 weeks, then 2 inches until the chicks are 8 weeks old and 3 or more inches thereafter.

To cut down feed waste and provide plenty of space, change to feeders that are 5 or 6 inches deep and 4 feet in length when the chicks are 4 weeks old, Whitefield suggests.

TREATING SEED HELPS IMPROVE GARDEN CROP

Treating garden seed before it is planted this spring is one way in which Iowa gardeners can help insure getting a good stand. Mason Reger, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College, says treating will prevent "damping off" fungi from causing the seed to rot in the ground or from causing the young seedlings to topple over.

Some seedsmen put out packets of seed already treated. They are usually marked and should not be treated again. Seeds that aren't treated should be treated by the home gardener.

This can be done with one of several dusts. Either Arasan or Spergon will do the job, says Reger. Semesan will also do, but it is not recommended for lettuce.

Reger recommends treating packets of seed by tearing off one corner of the package and putting in as much dust as will stay on the tip ¼ inch of the blade of a penknife. Then the torn corner should be folded over and the packet shaken to mix the seed well with the chemical. It will then be ready to plant.

For treating larger packages of seed, a level teaspoon of Arasan or Spergon dust or else ½ teaspoonful of Semesan to the pound of seed is recommended.

Most of the dusts carry the manufacturer's directions on the package and these should be followed when they are given.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten New

On Wednesday the Kindergarten took a train ride from Klemme to Garner. We had to leave for the station at 8:30 o'clock. A school bus took us to the station. On the way to the depot at Garner the boys and girls saw many interesting things. A bus met us at the Garner depot and brought us back to school. I want to thank Mrs. Clifford Anderson and Mrs. T. Ahrenkiel for going along with us and helping us. Mr. H. A. Moe, who was the Conductor was very nice to the boys and girls. He gave us a box of candy on the train and he also gave us a box to take home with us.

We had a little boy visit our room on Thursday and on Friday. He was Jimmy Ozburn from Marion. He came to school with Natalie Thompson.

Second Grade News

Sharon Bachman has been absent this week with the measles. We hope she will be back with us very soon.

If anyone visits our room during the next two weeks, no matter what time of day, even at noon and recess you would find us all extra busy. This is because we are spending a lot of our extra time getting ready for a program.

Cathy Finnegan brought a moth to school that had just emerged from his cacoon. We watched it lay sveral eggs, then after a while it died. It was very interesting. We hope to see the eggs hatch into caterpillars.

Third Grade News

Our room has now acquired a Spring Time Theme. Across the front of our room we have spelled out the words "Spring Time" by using the various forms of flowers in bright cheerful colors. Around the flowers the boys and girls have placed their friends of spring time such as birds, bees, squirrels and butterflys. The children enjoyed creating their own versions of the different objects.

Vegetable men have taken over our bulletin board. In Geography we have been discussing the vegetables which are grown in truck farming districts.

Two of our children have celebrated birthdays by treating the boys and girls. We want to thank Maurine Johnson and Billy Greiman for their treats.

Miss Ruth Stille Honored At Pre-Nuptial Shower Sat.

Mrs. Bob Hartzell gave a pre-nuptial miscellaneous shower at home Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Ruth Stille of Des Moines.

Miss Stille's girl friends were invited and all enjoyed an informal afternoon of games and visiting. Miss Stille received many nice gifts from her friends.

Mrs. Hartzell served a nice lunch later in the afternoon.

Former Pastor Visited Here Monday Afternoon

Rev. Harry E. Whyte of Rockwell City, visited for a short time in Klemme Monday afternoon. Rev. Whyte was on his way to Hayfield, Minnesota, where he owns a farm.

Rev Whyte reports that Mrs. Whyte is now quite well after a trip to the hospital last year. Their son is now a Freshman in Morningside College.

The present beautiful Methodist Church was built in Klemme during the pastorate of Rev. Whyte who devoted a great deal of time and effort on the project. While visiting with the Editor Rev. Whyte remarked: "I was on the job every day, and I know it was very well built."

CO-OP. CLAIM MEMBERSHIP OF 10 MILLION

Washington—At a time when co-operative tax exemptions are under strong attack in congress, the Co-operativ League of the U. S. reports that co-ops now have total memberships of more than 10 million families.

The league explains that these are membership figures and that many families belong to more than one co-op. Therefore net co-op memberships may be much smaller.

League Executive Secretary Jerry Voorhis, is presenting the figures, argued that, "American co-operatives are an essential part of the American economy and represent democratic, non-profit business enterprise owned and controlled by the people who use the associations."

Boasting largest membership were credit unions with 6 million members and assets of $1 billion. The credit union had loaned an impressive total of $700 million. Thirteen co-operative insurance companies had 4,500,000 members and had $1 billion life insurance in force. They admitted assets of $130 million and annual premium income of $85 million.

Seventy co-op group health plans had 750,000 members and gave $15 milllion worth of medical care annually. Three thousand farm and rural home supply co-ops have 2,500,000 members and do a yearly $2 billion business. One thousand rural electric co-ops have 3,500,000 members who pay $225 million annually for electricity. Five thousand recently formed rural telephone co-ops have 300,000 members and do business at an annual rate of $5 million.

Five hundred farm production credit associations have 450,000 members and $900 million outstanding in loans. City consumer co-ops number 1,000 with 500,000 members and an annual $100 million business Fifty co-op housing associations with 15,000 members handle at least $9 million in housing yearly. Farm marketing co-ops number 7,000, have 4 million members, and do $7,800 million worth of business yearly.

One newspaper co-op is listed, the associated press with 2,000 newspapers involved but no figures on dollar value. Small business men, burial societies and students are other minor types of co-op. enterprise.

It's Still Winter In North Iowa

The calendar says "Spring," but the weather man continues to dish out a lot of winter weather. Snow and rain again fell here last Wednesday and Thursday. A light skiff of snow fell Sunday with lowering temperatures and Monday morning the thermometer was around 30 degrees here.

This news is for the benefit of our readers in California and the South. You lucky folks.

CATFISH SEASON OPENS APRIL 15TH

The channel catfish season opens April 15th and continues through November 30th. Catch possession limit on channel catfish is 8, with all size fish caught being legal. Most streams are comparatively high, and the water is cold. The best early baits are expected to be natural foods, including garden worms, nightcrawlers and minnows.

There is a continuous open season on minnows, except no minnows may be taken in the state-owned lakes for trout streams.

There is a continuous open season on bullheads with no catch limit or minimum length limit. Other fish on which there is a continuous open season include sheepshead, redhorse, gar, suckers, gizzard shad, mooneye, goldeye, carp, buffalo, quillback, carpsuckers, dogfish, eel, burbot, and chubs.

INCREASE FARM INCOME BY GROWING SEED CROPS

A lot of farmers are missing a good bet by not having a seed field on the farm, says Joe L. Robinson, research agronomist at Iowa State College.

Robinson thinks that many farmers who have clean fields and good seed-cleaning equipment could add to their incomes by producing crops for seed.

Any farmer who is interested in producing good-quality seed can do all right if he starts with clean fields, says Robinson. The main thing the farmer must remember is to keep the variety and crop pure. If he chooses a weed-free field, cleans the drill and doesn't mix the seed, and plants the crop far enough from other crops and varieties, chances are he'll produce good seed.

Any grower who wants to "certify" seed should send an application to the Iowa Crop Improvement Association, Ames.

Those interested in producing certified seed in 1951 can obtain the Certification Handbook and application blanks from county extension office, Robsinson says.

Alexander the Great wept because he had no more worlds to conquer.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

Nebraska Rural Safety Project Wins Traffic Engineering Award

How one state reduced automobile accidents 91 per cent in one year at a dangerous rural highway intersection at trivial cost, simply by removing an unwarranted traffic signal and installing stop signs and warnings, has been voted the best example of traffic engineering results submitted to the Association of Casualty and Surety companies in its 1950 competition for traffic officials.

First prize of $100 was awarded to J. Edward Johnston, of Lincoln, Neb., state traffic engineer, Nebraska department of roads and irrigation, for his entry in the second annual "Getting Results Through Traffic Engineering" contest sponsored by the association's accident prevention department. It showed how accidents have been nearly eliminated at the junction of highways U.S. 30 and Nebraska 15, near Schuyler, where 32 accidents had injured 13 persons in eight and a half years. Only one very minor accident occurred during the first year after the change was made, compared with 11 during the preceding 12 months.

The important contributions to greater highway safety being made by the nation's traffic engineers and officials are indicated by seven case histories of results, including Mr. Johnston's, published last year in the accident prevention department's bulletin, "Getting Results Through Traffic Engineering."

By actual count, according to Thomas N. Boate, the association's director of public safety, the 1950 examples of engineering results prevented 70 accidents, nine deaths and 61 injuries in comparable periods after safety projects were completed in five cities and on two rural highways in seven states—Tennessee, Louisiana, North Carolina, Virginia, Nebraska, California and Michigan.

Nine deaths and 65 injuries had occurred in 90 accidents at locations studied by traffic officials before the changes were made in the seven projects outlined in last year's bulletins. There were no deaths, injuries were reduced to four, and only 20 accidents occurred after the changes were made, Mr. Boate said.

IN THE ASSOCIATION'S annual competition, major factors considered by the judging include effectiveness of a project in reducing accidents and traffic delay or congestion, and relationship of the value of benefits to cost of the improvement made. The example submitted by Mr. Johnston showed that the prize-winning Nebraska rural crossroads project enabled the authorities to increase the speed limit from 25 to 35 miles an hour, thus expediting traffic at the same time accidents were reduced 91 per cent.

Eight times as many accidents had occurred at the Schuyler, Neb., intersection as were experienced at a similar location on U. S. 30 where only stop signs were used to control traffic, a study revealed. Analysis showed that fixed-time signals were not justified, so the lights were removed and 48-inch reflectorized stop signs and stop ahead warnings were erected to control traffic on Nebraska 15.

Other successful traffic engineering projects published in 1950 by the Association, ranging in cost from $5.50 to $30,080, included: establishment of a four-way stop in Nashville, Tenn.; channelizing and installing signals at Y-intersections in Los Angeles and Charlotte, N. C.; bus rerouting and signal retiming in midtown Norfolk, Va.; instituting mid-block transit loading zones in the central business district of Shreveport, La., and re-signing a rural junction near Grand Rapids, Mich.

The 1951 "Getting Results Through Traffic Engineering" competition, which again offers a $100 award for the best example submitted, is open to all engineers, police and traffic officials. Entries should be sent at any time during the year to the Accident Prevention Department, Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, 60 John Street, New York 38, N. Y.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

FRANK SINATRA, recently returned from Florida with a fine tan and great enthusiasm for performing in a hotel, as he did there, has done well in all fields of entertainment but one; so far he has never appeared on the legitimate stage in New York. Probably he'd tackle the assignment if it was offered, and turn in good performance. He loves to work, especially in television; has his own show, on CBS, the network which also carries his radio series. And he is booked to make "Meet Danny Wilson" for Universal. He talks well about show business, but really goes to town about Jimmy Durante; you should hear him!

Since Virginia Mayo and her husband bought their ranch in Arizona they have had 312 applications for jobs from cowboys; ten of them even offered to work for bunk and board if Virginia was going to be on hand.

Alan Young is one of the happiest young men in California since Howard Hughes managed to make a deal with Paramount and get Young for "Androcles and the Lion" When Young was in New York he hardly dared hope the deal would go through, and everybody from Jose Ferrer down was being talked about for the role of "Androcles", for which Alan is perfect.

THE FICTION CORNER

LOVER'S QUARREL

By Laura M. Welch

I MUST HAVE been about ten or eleven, a rather intense little girl with a twenty year old sister whom I adored. She was in love with a young druggist, a handsome young man and she always kept a large photograph of him in the center of our upright piano, usually with a small fluted bowl of pansies or violets in front of it. Bess had been going with another young man in town and Clyde had had another girl; then suddenly they only made dates with each other.

3-Minute Fiction

One night about one o'clock my sister came upstairs to the room we shared and came to bed and cried nearly all night. Several times I asked her what was the matter and she'd say, "Nothing, honey, go back to sleep."

I knew she and Clyde had been to a dance and I was sure they had quarreled. The next morning she still wouldn't tell me why she had cried so much.

Later on in the day I went into the parlor to practice my scales and there was his photograph right there in front of me. I couldn't bear to look at it. He had made my sister cry. He had hurt her dreadfully and I hated him. I hated him so much I couldn't bear to see his picture.

I took the picture and slid it along the baseboard behind the piano. I gave it a hard shape and was sure it would never be found again.

Two or three days went by. My sister was still sad. I wondered if she and Clyde would ever make up their quarrel.

"It was a hateful sort of thing for him to do," Bess said. "I know he's just laughing to himself, thinking how he put it over on me."

Some of her friends got together and decided to do something to help them make up. They came down to the house and brought Clyde with them, stayed a short time and went off leaving Clyde and Bess together. But it didn't do any good. Clyde left early, too, and my sister was just as sad as ever.

One day I heard her talking to one of her girl friends. "It was a hateful sort of thing for him to do. He could have asked me, you know. That would have been the honorable thing to do, even if he had wanted to give it to another girl." She swallowed a sob and went on, "I know he's just laughing to himself, thinking how he put it over on me."

I didn't have the slightest idea what she was talking about.

THE WHOLE TOWN was interested in the quarrel. They'd been expecting a big church wedding with all the fixings and were disappointed. As for myself, I just got madder and madder.

One morning I was sent uptown for the mail and met Clyde on the street. I started to go by him without speaking, which I knew was very rude, but I didn't care if it was. He reached out and caught my hand.

"Look, honey, don't be mad at me," he said. "Don't you know this thing is hurting me too?"

I said angrily, "You made her cry."

He turned a little pale and looked very serious. "Did she really cry, Becky?"

"Yes, she does . . . did, I mean. That's why I took your picture and hid it behind our old piano.

"You took the photograph?"

I nodded. "It's behind the piano."

"And all this time I thought she took it away because she was going to put another one there."

Quite suddenly I began to understand. "And she thought you took it to give to another girl."

He took my hand again. "Look, I'm going home with you, Becky. Will you tell Bess what you've just told me?"

I nodded. And we went home together and I told her. There was a wedding after all.

I'm a very conservative fellow.
I watch the parades ander by.
I'm neither red-blooded, nor yellow,
I don't break a leg on the try.
I'm never in headlines or columns,
I haven't a good batting eye.
And yet I'm the top of this country—
I'm only the average guy.

I'm the unknown that nobody looks at.
I never get public attention,
My wife is the woman I love.
My name is a blank to the millions,
To those who take life on the fly.
And yet I'm the top of this nation—
I'm only the average guy.

The Two Mysteries

St. Petersburg, Fla.—There are two baseball mysteries in this land of palm and pine, gulf and grapefruit, citrus and circus, sun and sand. The two mysteries are the Boston Red Sox and the Brooklyn Dodgers. People wander into their camps, look over their lineups, wander out and keep asking: "Why don't they win 90 per cent of their games? What's the matter with 'em?"

Grantland Rice

The Red Sox have the hardest-hitting, the greatest run-scoring team in baseball. Williams, Doerr, Pesky, Stephens, Boudreau, walloping Dropo, Goodman—no wonder opposing pitchers turn pale. To their 1950 staff the Red Sox have added Bill Wight and Ray Scarborough, two fine pitchers. How can they lose? How could they lose in 1947-1948-1949-1950? They could not—but they did despite a great manager, Joe McCarthy.

Tom Yawkey has bought them everything except General MacArthur and the Marines. Do they expect Yawkey to do the pitching and hitting?

I have been one of many who saw the Red Sox at work in Florida in recent seasons who knew their past performance charts—and so picked them. I am now one of many who won't pick them until they can prove they can win big games in a pinch. This is where they have failed—under heavy pressure. Why? I don't know. But they have. They have blown in the stretch—and the stretch is all that counts.

Joe Gordon, a great ballplayer, said to me last June in Philadelphia, "They are the greatest looking ball club I ever saw at Fenway Park. They are minor leaguers on the road, a whipped, beaten bunch." Who can explain that? The records prove that Gordon was right. They look good enough to win the A.L. pennant by 10 games this season. They may not finish third. Along with many others I can't pick a team that should win by eight or 10 games, and can't win by even one game. There is more to a baseball team than hitting and pitching. A ball club can have spirit and a soul as well as a lone competitor.

Case of the Dodgers

The Brooklyn Dodgers last season were very much of the Red Sox type. They had all that it takes—but they didn't take it.

I was sitting with Eddie Sawyer, headman of the Phillies and in my book one of baseball's all-time managers. Eddie was picking the Dodgers.

"How can you beat 'em?" he asked, "with all that man power—everything?"

"How did you beat 'em last year?" I asked. "They still had a much better ball club."

"Take it this way," Sawyer said. "Look at the ballplayers I have—the Giants have—the Braves have. How can you beat out a club that has Campanella back of the bat, Hodges on first base, Robinson on second, Reese at short, anybody at third, with Snyder and Furillo in the outfield? Plus such pitchers as Newcombe, Roe, Branca, Hatten, Barney, Banta, Bankhead, Palica—on and on—working in droves? They had everything last year—and they'll have it this year. Who is Musial worried about? Furillo and Snyder. Or Robinson. In my book Hodges is more dangerous than Musial. He was against the Phillies. Much more dangerous."

The Dodgers have the best cast in baseball with the exception of one overlooked spot, pitching.

Sport and Business

Sport and business are supposed to be on opposite sides of the field. They are supposed to be two entirely different transactions along the brief road of life. But in recent years they have almost blended so that it is hard to say which is sport and which is business. As a result, old-fashioned amateur sport has just about vanished from the map.

This applies to college football, college basketball, championship tennis, golf to a certain degree.

College football is practically a semi pro sport where it often costs $250,000 to run a team for one season, and gate receipts pass or approach $1,000,000 for nine or ten-game schedules. Basketball, too, has been moving into larger receipts and bigger palaces.

Taxpayers Bear Expense of RFC Deals and Frauds

By Wright A. Patterson

GENERAL VAUGHN'S bestowal of refrigerators on favorites was but a piker operation compared with the natural mink coats presented to White House stenographers for influence in securing loans for corporations from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The mink coats have figured prominently in the senate investigation of the R.F.C. scandal that has kept Washington and the entire nation aghast for several weeks. But like other scandals of the past that newspaper and radio reporters have dug out of unusual graft conditions, nothing will come of it all.

The White House stenographer has her fur coat and will keep it. The Democratic national committee has collected considerable sums with which to finance the next national political campaign, and it will be used for that purpose. Numerous "fixers" have been paid extravagant sums for their services with directors of the R.F.C. Indirectly the American taxpayers bore the expense through the R.F.C. loans, which are financed by the federal government.

It is reported in Washington that grand jury indictments against R.F.C. directors and the "fixers" will be sought. Such indictments may be voted, but, in all probability, convictions will not be obtained by the Department of Justice. Regardless of the sensational evidence produced by the senate committee, nothing will happen. The committee findings will be a political "whitewash." The senate will refuse to confirm the directors for a new term, and they will pass out of official life and quite possibly accept lucrative jobs with some of the numerous corporations to whom they have made extensive loans of government money.

Such a procedure would be but a repetition of other similar instances of the past. During the last war, for example, reporters dug out the evidence of large scale graft on the part of contractors on the international highway through Mexico and Central America. They provided the names, places, amounts and methods. The statements they printed could well have been the basis for libel suits if the statements were untrue, but no such suits were instituted. A congressional committee undertook an investigation. For a few days there was much fuss about it all. Then the subject disappeared from the newspapers, and the investigation stopped. Nothing happened. The grafting contractors kept their ill-gotten gains, the tax payers paid the bills, the investigation was called off. It was interfering with the game of politics and politicians.

Another instance in which reporters dug up the evidence was the installation of radar protection for Hawaii. The installation was to be made under the direction of a German who was an engineer officer in the American army. For various reasons of the German officer, the installation was delayed, and that delay resulted in the Pearl Harbor disaster.

After the reporters had investigated and printed their statements accusing the German officer with deliberately delaying the installation, a congressional committee undertook an investigation.

Again there were grounds for libel suits, but the suits were never filed. The congressional investigation lasted for a few days, and was then dropped. The German engineer officer was assigned to another job, in connection with the construction of the Alcan highway. Later, he was promoted and sent to Germany with the army of occupation.

Such were two examples in which there was convincing evidence. There was a similar situation in connection with the construction of the Alcan highway, and the oil development project that went with it. In that case a four-star general was involved. It, too, was whitewashed by a congressional investigation.

The President has sent to the senate for confirmation the five directors of the R.F.C. There is hardly a chance of senate confirmation, but they will be allowed to get out to be rewarded with lucrative jobs from some of the corporations to which they have made loans of the peoples' money. Such is partisan politics.

Frankly, the front has a facade that only a doting mother could love—especially when Lotus is yawning an impersonation of the Grand Canyon. Between the front and back are three-and-a-half tons of hippo. Incidentally, if you've never seen a hippo before, we ought to tell you that the front end of Lotus is at the left. Oh, you're welcome!

God In a Nation

Lesson for April 22, 1951

WHEN IS GOD IN THE LIFE of a nation?

Dr. Foreman

It depends on what you mean by the question. God is the Ruler of all nations, and Judge of them all. But some nations have been far more conscious of the true God and obedient to Him than other nations have.

God's Name on Paper

GOD CAN be mentioned often, yet not count for very much in a nation. For instance, His name can be on the money, it can be in the state ceremonies, it can be in the constitution, or if there is no constitution, the monarch may be said to rule "by divine right."

But such things may be no better than formal. The money can pass from wicked hand to wicked hand, it can be used for godless purposes by men who do not have God in all their thoughts. The name of God in public ceremonies (such as oaths of office) or in the constitution may mean no more than decorative designs on a letter-head. The king ruling by "divine" right may be a cruel and corrupt man.

Religious-sounding songs, such as "God Bless America" or "God Save the King", can be sung by rascals. No, God in a nation's life must be more than a name on paper, green or white.

God in Great Men

GOD BEGINS to get into the life of a nation when He gets into the lives of people. It is not disparaging the common man to point out the plain fact that as between one believer in God who is obscure, and another who is prominent and powerful, the latter means more in the long-run life of a nation.

It was so in the era of Moses That was a time of religious confusion, just as it is today. Doubtless there were many humble persons at that time who had a living faith, but if it had not been for Moses, the nation of Israel would never have been a nation, but would have shrunk back into the ruck of little no-account tribes, never to be heard from again. When we hear that even Moses' own brother was so stupid or bad as to lead the people in worshipping a gold-plated calf, we can imagine what the masses of the people were like.

If the United States and Canada can be called Christian nations today, it is because we can point to men on both sides of the line who have been not only high-calibre, influential men, but also men not ashamed of their faith in God.

An American congressman who is respected by friends and opponents alike, has said it is more important to him to know what God wants than what his constituents want. Most governors of states profess religion; and some of the best of them practice it. What America would have been without such men, one can only guess; certainly far worse than it is.

God in Laws and Lives

GOD CAN also be in a nation's laws. It is true, we cannot run a modern nation or municipality on the laws of Leviticus, and nobody wants to, not even the preachers and rabbis. Still, the laws of a land either reflect the will of God or they do not. So far as the laws of a nation are in line with the teachings and truth of Christ, so far God is in the life of that nation.

But the question is not finally: What do the laws prescribe, but do the people respect the laws? God does not get deeply into the life of a nation until He gets into the homes of high and low alike.

If the nation of Israel ever became godly, they had Moses to thank; yet he himself was under no illusions as to the people he left behind him. "I know that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you." (Deut. 31: 29.)

It took centuries of toil and patience on the part of God and His prophets to change Israel from a nation mostly indifferent to God, to a people mostly God-fearing; and the change took place only as homes changed.

Is ours a Christian nation today? The answer is not in our constitution, not in our leading men, not in our history or laws or traditions; the answer is in our homes. When the cry goes up "Back to God!" the place to start back, and the place that counts most, is our homes.

Labor Adopts Grass Roots Program; Revision of Farm Parity Suggested

GRASS ROOTS MANIFESTO—Seven hundred small town unionists met in Washington recently, adopted a seven point manifesto, and departed for the Main Streets of America determined to marshal the support of consumer groups, including ladies' clubs, service clubs and farm organizations behind their program.

The home town unionists based their manifesto on the thesis of "equality of sacrifice for all groups." In a statement issued at the close of their meeting the group stated: "We are shocked by the cruel disregard being shown for the interests of everyday American families. We are shocked by the privilege and favoritism bestowed on a single group—big business."

One of the major points of the "grass roots" labor program: "Labor, the farmers, small business and independent consumer groups must be given full representation on all mobilization and stabilization agencies at the policy-making and administrative levels. By so doing, the government can inspire renewed public confidence and public support of controls which otherwise will be hard to take."

MAIN STREET ECONOMY—Although the situation is not too clear at the moment, there seems to be shaping up in congress a battle over the administration's budget that will strike at the Main Street level of the nation before it touches many other segments.

The joint congressional committee, which reported on the nation's economy and the proposed budget, recommended a new study of farm-price supports and reduction of federal grants to states.

Specifically, the report cited next year's budget estimate of $2,883,000,000 in federal grants to states for highways, public welfare, health, school lunches, agricultural-extension services and agricultural experiment stations, vocational rehabilitation, airports, and other services. All of these services are on the Main Street level and a cut will be felt immediately in the home towns of the nation.

Of all the questions considered in the report, farm parity was the most explosive. The report declared that legislative remedies must be sought to correct a condition which now exists by which prices increasing the cost of living and the cost of defense are geared to the industrial practices which have for many years driven up prices of industrial commodities.

Farm parity, invented at the depths of the depression, is geared to the price of industrial commodities. Revision and modernization of the law will undoubtedly be one of the big questions facing the congress.

HIGHER STILL—Every time the bureau of labor statistics announces its index figures on the cost of living they are always higher, even as administration officials repeat the old refrain that leveling-off is "just around the corner."

The bureau's newest figures reported the cost of living up 1.3 per cent, setting another record. The figure was pegged at 183.8 per cent of the 1935-39 base period. This was 8 per cent higher than the level of June, 1950, before the Korean fighting began, and 9.5 per cent above a year ago.

Meanwhile, there were indications that the people in the home towns may be developing some consumer resistance to high prices. The commerce department reported a 3 per cent decline in retail sales. Department store sales were reported down 4 per cent.

Unofficial reports told of a slackening of consumer buying, possibly because many persons had stocked up heavily last year and possibly because of price climbs.

THE BORROWER—Russia flatly refused recently to return 670 American naval and cargo ships she "borrowed" under the World War II lend-lease program. The Soviet went so far as to state that the United States really does not need the ships.

Reduced to a common denominator, it is like a home town neighbor borrowing your lawn mower and refusing to return it after he has clipped his lawn, and having the nerve to tell you you don't need it anyway, because your lawn doesn't need cutting.

The ships are only one of the lend-lease problems with Russia. The Soviet still has an over-all $11 billion unsettled lease-lend account with this nation.

MACARTHUR UNDER FIRE—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who seems to have a knack of making controversial statements, again threw the state department and the United Nations into an uproar when he asserted he stood ready at any time to confer in the field with the commander in chief of the Chinese and North Korean forces to end the war and "find any military means whereby the realization of the political objectives of the United Nations in Korea, to which no nation may justly take exceptions, might be accomplished without further bloodshed."

The state department immediately asked the defense department and the White House to curb the general's authority to issue diplomatic overtones. The controversy was taken up in the U.N. and MacArthur was criticized by British and French newspaper.

Strong-willed MacArthur, who does not believe in hiding his genius under a blanket, had nothing to say about the criticism of his latest statement. If the state department and the United Nations persist in their demands that MacArthur be silenced permanently, it might mean that pipe-smoking Doug will have his wings clipped for the first time in his long career.

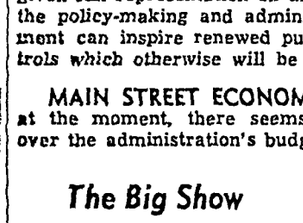
DRAFT CALL CUT—Home town draft boards were notified that their April quotas had been cut in half. The army ordered a quota of 40,000 for the month instead of the previously announced 80,000. Enlistments, running higher than were anticipated, and fewer casualties in Korea than had been feared were given as reasons for the change in the induction rate.

The army at latest reports was only about 100,000 men short of its present goal of 1,500,000 men.

Meanwhile, a congressional spokesman said the army should be able to halt the draft within 18 months and set up its universal-military-training program.

The Big Show

Sen. Estes Kefauver, (above), emcee of the senate crime investigating committee hearings in New York, provided the nation with its greatest show during recent weeks when his committee played to 15,000,000 television fans, and starring such underworld-gambling bigshots as . . . . .



Jake "Greasy Thumb" Guzick, who refused to talk.

Frank Costello, who keeps $40,000 in cash in his home.

and James J. Carroll, who told unsympathetic senators that television cameras scared him. The public liked the show so much it objected when a few stations switched to a brief Easter religious service.

THE AMERICAN FARMER

Farm Plant Value Pegged at 91 Million

American farmers now own 91 billion dollars worth of land, buildings, live stock and equipment. This gigantic food "factory" turned out approximately 30 billion dollars worth of produce in 1950, or a third of the value of the "plant" itself. In 1900 and even in 1910, American agriculture produced only a sixth of its own physical value in a year. Even in prosperous 1929 it produced a little less than one-fourth of its "plant value," a recent survey revealed.

The farmer has accomplished these gains through a 900 per cent increase in his investment in tools and machinery since 1900, and by use of better methods, better seed, better livestock, and more fertilizer, the report stated.

Iowa's "Modern Art"

We Iowans seem to be getting into this argument about "modern art".

Have you noticed the letters in the papers lately? One claims modern art is communistic. Another says that anything else is old and "stuffy".

Well, we have lots of fun, blow off steam, and no one gets hurt. We can take the ones we like, and leave the ones we don't.

I say pictures are a matter of personal choice. And there's no use trying to force a person to like just YOUR kind.

Isn't that a good rule to follow in everything else, too. I hear arguments about television. But for the folks who like it, that's fine. Same goes for hats, politics, makes of cars . . . or neighbor Ed's preference for coffee, and mine for a temperate glass of beer.

Just so we don't try to DICTATE our personal ideas to the other fellow . . . in art or anything else . . . we'll all get along fine.

Rep. Eckels Sums Up Bills Enacted In Session At D.M.

REP. PENN ECKELS RETURNS HOME FROM LEGISLATURE

Sums Up Some Of Important Legislation Enacted During Session

Hancock County Representative Penn Eckels of near Britt called at the Times Office Monday afternoon.

Mr. Eckels considered the session just closed as being one of the best in the years he has been at Des Moines. Mr. Eckels summed up some of the important matters in which the people of Hancock County would be interested in, as follows:

Outstanding Accomplishments Of Legislature

1. No tax increase.
2. Unemployment and workmen's compensation bill.
3. H.J.R. 10, appointing a committee to study and investigate Iowa Old Age and Survivor's Insurance.
4. Increasing Iowa Highway Patrol.
5. Oppropriating $700,000 for sewage system at the Iowa Great Lakes and Clear Lake.
6. Anti-Gambling Bill.
7. No backward step in our building program.
8. Important trucking bill--overloading. $83,000 to $250,000 scale and operation.
9. Abolition of retrenchment and reform committee and transferring powers to budget and financial control committee.
10. Municipal Code Bills.
11. Schools:
$17,500,000 aid; $5,000,000 land tax credit, which applies to all agricultural land of 10 acres or more and also applies to all school districts over 15 mills. (Same as last 2 years.) Gave local districts the right to levy school tax sufficent enough for their own purposes and recognized the right of districts to organize or consolidate among themselves which gives more home rule. Increased appropriation to Ia. City and Ames 20 per cent over two years ago, and Cedar Falls 18 per cent.
12. Appropriated two million dollars additional for social security and old age assistance and A.D.C.
13. Appropriated $8,000,000 Soldier's Bonus for World War II Veterans.
14. Increase compensation for county officers.
15. $200,000 appropriated for vocational training.

There were two bills that will interest the people of Hancock County in the future. The one that would appoint the State Superintendent of Public Instruction passed the House but not the Senate.

The other bill that would levy 15 mills tax on all property in the county for school purposes. This bill passed the Senate but not the House.

I have had the privilege to serve as Representative of Hancock County for the past three sessions. I have not missed one day in attending these sessions.

ASKS DAMAGES FOR INJURIES

Kenneth Zwald has field suit in district court at Garner against John Albers and Carol Albers in which he seeks damages totaling $25,050. Zwald alleges in his petition that on April 15, 1949, when he alighted from his stalled car two miles west of Klemme and was walking eastward, he was struck by an automobile owned by John Albers and driven by his son, Carol Albers.

Zwald alleges that his knee and leg were severely injured and his kneecap broken and that he will always be permanently partially disabled.

He asks damages for medical care, pain and suffering and loss to his earning capacity. A jury trial is requested.

VOWS EXCHANGED — Miss Wilma Lauden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lauden of Goodell, and Marvin Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lindsay of Alexander, were married at the home of the bride by the Rev. Vernon Jaberg, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed Church of Klemme.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. George Gerdes, Garner, brother-in-law and sister of the bride.

The couple will be at home on a farm near Alexander.

SERVICES HELD THURS. FOR MISS AUGUSTA LENZ

Augusta Lenz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lenz, was born July 29, 1865 at Lowell, Wisconsin. At the age of three years she came with her parents to Flood Creek, Iowa. Later they moved to Klemme, Iowa where she lived until the death of her parents. She came to Minneapolis to make her home with a sister Caroline Thiel and her daughters, Anna, Tillie and Martha Thiel, who shared their home and gave her loving care in her declining years.

She was a member of Park Avenue Methodist Church, Minneapolis. Aunt Augusta leaves numerous nieces and nephews, other relatives and many friends to mourn her death on April 16, 1951. She lived 85 years. 9 months and 18 days.

Her mortal remains were laid to rest in the Klemme Cemetery on April 19th. Pall bearers, nephews of the deceased, were Ronald Gibbs, Elmer Beier, Clarence Lenz, Clifford Anderson, Elmer Hueneman and Frederick Beier.

Out Of Town People Attended Funeral Here

The following people from out of town attended the funeral services held for Miss Augusta Leng here Thursday afternoon:

The Misses Annie, Tillie and Martha Thiel of Minneapolis; Mrs. Roland Thiel and son, Rickie of Henning, Minnesota; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Koehler of Rockford, Iowa; George Koehler and sister, Mrs. Will Heitz of Charles City; and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ludeke of Meservey.

MAYOR'S COURT

List Of Violations Since Last Publication Of Times

Claude White, Klemme, appeared in Mayor V. A. Cook's Court last Wednesday afternoon and was fined $2.00 and costs for driving through a Stop sign.

Carl Swearingen, Marshalltown, was fined $2.00 and costs for improper backing up and violating U-Turn rule Saturday night.

O. E. Stevens, 712 State Ave., North, Clear Lake, appeared in Mayor Cook's court Tuesday morning and paid a fine of $2.00 and costs for making a U-Turn in the center of the block.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Although Iowa is an agricultural state, there are thousands of Iowans working in shops and factories. Some work in small shops where there are just a couple of men, others work in large plants that employ many people.

Regardless of the size of plant, you -- the employees and owners of these shops and plants -- owe it to yourselves to make ure safety works there too.

Your Iowa Safety Congress reminds you that the safe way to work is the RIGHT way. You'll not only keep yourself and fellow workers from being badly hurt or even killed, but help speed up production to meet the demand of military and civilian needs in these critical times.

Many plants, realizing the need, have set up safety programs to eliminate the danger points and make workers more conscious of safety rules.

The Iowa Safety Congress urges all shops and plants, large and small, to carry on a thorough safety program. The sooner you start, the more accidents you prevent.

Remember: Eyes, hands and fingers are tools you cannot replace!

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

He pushed his sleeve back, held his wrist close to the lighted speedometer, squinted to read the time. A little after nine. Five, ten mintes after. Ought to be home in half an hour.

If he'd known he only had ten seconds to live, he might have checked the time more closely. He might have done several things differently.

Ten seconds to live. He messaged his eyes with thumb and middle finger, trying to rub out some of the sand.

Nine seconds to live. He'd driven almost eight hours since lunch, and was beginning to feel it.

Eight seconds to live. Lousy driving in the rain. Light from your headlights just seems to soak in along with the water.

Seven seconds to live. Probably need a new windshield wiper blade. Old one just spreads the water around instead of wiping clean. Get one tomorrow, or next time it rains.

Six seconds to live. Somebody threw a cigarette out of an oncoming car. The red glow dissolved almost before it hit the pavement.

Five seconds to live. He planted his heels on the floorboard, squirmed back in the seat, trying for comfort.

Four seconds to live. At 60 miles an hour, a car covers 88 feet of pavement every second. Four seconds, 352 feet.

Three seconds to live. Something looked wrong, through the blurry windshield. A tentative dab at the brake stiffened into desperate pressure as he made out an old, unlighted, slow-moving truck ahead.

Two seconds to live. Panic moved in. Turn to the left. No, car coming. Headlights too close. Can't make it. Turn to the right.

One second to live. Horror numbed everything into slow motion. He was floating right into the near corner of the truck bed. He opened his mouth to scream.

No second to live.

It's happened to lots of people. Oh, maybe not just that way, but similar. Drive too long, eyes get tired, reactions slow down. Rain, darkness, a windshield that's hard to see through. Driving too fast. A car or truck ahead that you can't see. It's happend to lots of folks.

It could happen to you.

CIVIC CLUB BACKED BALL CLUB FOR SUMMER PLAY

At a meeting of the Klemme Civic Club held Friday evening at the Grade School Building the Klemme Civic Club gave full cooperation to the Klemme Soft Ball team for the coming summer.

As the Club is in need of new uniforms, business men subscribed individually to purchase 15 new uniforms, while others subscribed funds for other expenses, such as balls, bats and bases.

"Stub" Lewis is the business manager of the team, while Kenneth Kluckhohn assumed the job of team manager.

As there are quite a number of younger players coming up, there will probably be two teams fielded this year and a number of double-header games will be scheduled.

It was also proposed that the lighted field could be used by other teams on nights when games were not scheduled. Because of the expense of operating the field a charge of about $3.00 will be made for the use of the lights.

"Kid" teams are welcome to use the field, but some arrangement will have to be made for paying for the lights. The Civic Club will give a helping hand in this case if funds are available.

TO ENTERTAIN YOUTH RALLY HERE

Rev. P. Gordon Gould

The Youth Fellowship of the Klemme-Liberty Churches will be host to the spring Algona District Youth Rally in the Klemme Church on Sunday afternoon and evening. Registration will be from 3:15 to 3:45 when some 350 young people from the 40 Algona District Churches and their pastor's and counsellors expected to attend.

The afernoon service will begin with a worship service conducted by the local youth fellowship group and will be followed by an address by the Rev. P. Gordon Gould about Alaska and illustrated by a series of Kodachrome slides. The afternoon sessions will conclude with a fellowship period which will include a "singspiration."

Supper will be served by the women of the churches at 5:30 in the basement of the Grade School Building and the evening session of the rally will begin at 6:30. The evening worship period will be in charge of the district officers and then following the installation of the new district cabinet by the District Superintendent, the Rev. Fred Ortmeyer, the Rev. Mr. Gould will bring the inspirational address of the rally.

Mr. Gould is the first native Alaskan ordained to the Methodist ministry, and as a boy was a member of the Jesse Lee Home family, famous Alaskan Methodist Orphange. At present Mr. Gould is field representative of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church for Alaska. The evening offering will be given to Mr. Gould for use in furthering some worthy missionary project in Alaska.

4-H FAIR BUILDING SELECTED BY THE BUILDING COMMITTEE

The 4-H Fair Building site offered by the Garner Chamber of Commerce was selected by the county wide Committe that has been working to get better facilities for the 4-H Show. Members of the Committe are: Fair Board; Floyd Friedow, Kanawha, Fern Huling, Britt; Bud Tienan, Garner; Curtis Greiman, Garner; Aaron Stromer, Garner; 4-H Girls Leaders representatives; Mrs. Herman Ostercamp, Britt; Mrs. Otto Holecek, Garner; Mrs. Dale Newell, Garner, Mrs. Harold Haberkamp, Garner; Mrs. Clarence Faust, Britt; Boys 4-H Leaders representatives; Forest Eckels, Britt, Forest Bennett, Corwith, Dale Brede, Klemme, Merle Hall, Garner; Farm Bureau Board representatives; Gilbert Guenther, Britt, Donald Dean, Corwith, Anno Abbas, Britt, Frank Bredlow, Garner, Francis Sandry, Kanawha.

Two farmers Aaron Stromer and Gilbert Guenther have already donated $100.00 each toward the first building to be constructed on the site.

The Committee held a number of meetings and tours to observe sites. They also appointed a small committee to investigate buildings now in use by 4-H exhibitors in Winnebago and Worth Counties.

The final decision was arrived at by the committee looking at the standpoint of usefulness over a long period of time. They also considered the amount of money that could be raised any one year to apply on the construction of the purchase of facilities for the show.

The site selected is north of the Milwaukee railroad tracks, east of the via-duct and south of the old highway No. 18 paving. There are 14 acres in the area. It will be available some time during the fall of 1951.

The campaign to raise the funds is now being organized. The committee voted to have the 4-H leaders and the Farm Bureau Director's in each township be the committee that would organize their township to raise the funds. A quota of $1000.00 per township was set as a goal to shoot at.

"FATHER-SON BANQUET" FRIDAY EVENING

Women of the Liberty Woman's Society are busy this week making preparations for the "Father and Son Banquet" to be held in the Liberty Church on Friday evening of this week at 6:30. Land of Promise

Lesson for April 29, 1951

A NATION must have a home. Gypsies are not properly called a nation because their only home is where their wagons make a camp. Professors of political science tell us that among other necessities, a nation has to have a definite and defensible territory.

Dr. Foreman

But the ancient Israelites did not need a professor to tell them that much. They knew it very well When they came out of Egypt they could call their clothes and their tents and their stock their own, but nothing else. Even when Moses had given them laws and religion and an army and an organization, they were still not a nation, for they had no land of their own under their feet.

No Welcoming Committee

SO IT was that what those people looked forward to, for forty years, was the "Land of Promise," where Abraham had pitched his tent, where these Israelites' forefathers had worshipped God.

But their ancestors had owned very little of the land. Abraham owned just enough for a burial plot; Jacob owned a tract which, so far as we know, he never occupied. Yet it was a good land, so good that others, long before Abraham, had settled there.

It has no unsettled wilderness; it was dotted with high-walled, thickly populated, strongly defended towns. There were no "welcome" signs on the highways. All the cities of Palestine were united by one common hate for the invading Israelites.

Two Centuries of War

SOME of our hymns give a wrong impression of Canaan, the Land of Promise. In some of our hymns this life is compared to the wilderness in which the Israelites lived for forty years, the river Jordan is a symbol of death, and Canaan means heaven ("Canaan's happy shore!").

Well, Canaan was not a happy shore. It was a bloody battlefield for centuries. For the Israelites did not occupy the land all at once. Their fight was not won right away, it was not won in a generation. We do not know for certain the date of Joshua, but a date favored by many scholars is in the 13th century before Christ. The "Land of Promise" was not fully and securely in the Israelites' hands until the tenth century.

The whole story, or such parts of it as we find in the books of Joshua and Judges, shows that it was a long struggle, a weary succession of more or less continual wars, climaxed in the final conquests of the fighting king David.

Some Victories are Deserved

DURING those wars, many cruelties were practiced by both sides. If there had been a United Nations at that time, they would certainly have condemned the Israelites for aggression and for war crimes besides.

We may as well admit that the Israelites did not act in line with the Sermon on the Mount. How could they? They had never heard of it. The fact remains that if you, an impartial, invisible observer, had looked down from the sky at all the long struggle the Israelites had to put up to win a homeland, and if you had been asked: Which will win, the Israelites or the Canaanites? There were times when you would hardly have dared to make a prediction.

But if you had been asked: Which side deserves to win? You would surely have said, The Israelites.

God Saw the Future

ANY one who could have foreseen the future both of Israel and the tribes with whom they fought for centuries, would certainly have hoped for Israel's victory.

Comparing all that Israel would mean to mankind, directly and indirectly, with all that would come from their enemies, you would have voted for the Israelites without hesitation. If for no other reason, the Israelites deserved to win because of their religion.

If you can imagine what might have been the sinister results if Israel had been destroyed, and with them all knowledge of the one and holy God, you can see how God could not afford to let His people lose.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Chocolate or butter cakes are lovely when you sprinkle confectioners' sugar immediately after taking them from the oven If sprinkled over a lace doily, the sugar leaves a pattern.

One of the handiest things for dusting a pleated lamp shade is a man's shaving brush

If an oil lamp flickers a lot pour a teaspoonful of salt into the base.

Loose crumbs mixed in through the frosting spoil the appearance of many a good cake. Let cake cool, then brush crumbs with one hand while holding with the other one.

To clean a parchment shade, rub it with a fresh piece of white bread or an art-gum eraser, or with a cloth dipped in milk. In any case, be sure to brace the inside of the shade with one hand while you rub with the other, or you may poke the rubbing hand right through.

Crisp, cooked bacon slivers added to your French dressing give a novel flavor to vegetable or citrus fruit salads. You may also add a bit of condensed tomato soup to it if you like the richness

Add some finely chopped spinach to pancake batter and make spinach pancakes. Serve with pot roast or as a vegetable This is guaranteed to make spinach a favorite even amongst those hard to convert.

Chopped liver seasoned and mixed with bread crumbs and egg makes a first rate main dish especially when the patties are wrapped in bacon and cooked with tomato sauce.

Frostings and icings should be cooled before being spread on the cake; otherwise, they may soak into cake.

An unforgettable filling for popovers or hot biscuits is creamed ham and a garnish of green asparagus tips. Both may be leftovers from Sunday dinner

Frankfurter scallop is easily made with sliced frankfurters and scalloped potatoes. Add about one tablespoon of prepared mustard to each cup of white sauce used.

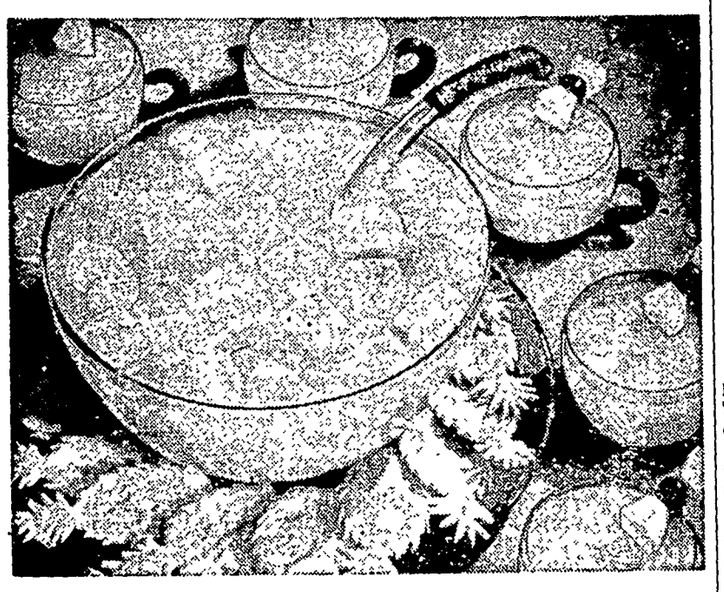
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers



Pineapple Punch Pleases at Parties
(See Recipes Below)

Entertaining at Showers

HAVING A PARTY for a bride-to-be? Or, is there a baby shower on your calendar for a close friend? These occasions, which are really very simple affairs, often put a hostess to the real test: she has to greet a number of people and make everyone at home; at the same time, she must serve foods nicely.

It isn't such a big order if you've planned your food well and prepared it all in advance. This frees you for that important job of hostessing, greeting at the door as well as mingling with your guests.

The food should be all ready to serve, except for bringing in on trays. The table can be set in advance, except for the food, since buffet style is a good casual way of doing this type of party. If you're serving a fruit punch, this can be all set, too, in a large bowl, chilling in ice.

SANDWICHES, cakes and cookies, all go well with the punch, and may be made in advance. Select a colorful punch with fruit flavors which will appeal to your guests:

Spiced Pineapple Punch
(Makes 2 quarts)

- ½ cup sugar
- 1½ cups water
- 4 sticks cinnamon
- 12 whole cloves
- 1 large (46-ounce) can pineapple juice
- 1½ cups orange juice
- ½ cup lemon juice

Simmer first four ingredients about 30 minutes. Strain and add to fruit juices. Chill. Pour over ice just before serving.

EXTRA interest can be added to the punch bowl, or to the glasses in which you place the punch if you do not have the bowl, by serving with pineapple cubes. Just fill the refrigerator ice cube tray with pineapple juice, or a combination of citrus juices with a maraschino cherry in each cube, and freeze until firm.

For a colorful punch cup garnish, spear two pineapple chunks on a toothpick with a maraschino cherry in-between. Cut a little slit in the cherry and fit it over the rim of the punch glass.

Hawaiian Pastries

First make a cardboard pineapple pattern, then cut around it on rich pastry rolled about ⅛ inch thick. Sprinkle the tops of the tiny pineapple designs generously with a mixture of sugar and cinnamon. Place on a cookie sheet and bake in a very hot (450°) oven for about 10 minutes.

IF YOU LIKE to serve small cakes or cookies with the punch, here are two taste-tempting suggestions which are certain to agree with the taste of shower guests:

Fudge Spritz
(Makes 3½ dozens)

- 1 package semi-sweet chocolate
- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup shortening
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons milk

Melt chocolate over hot, not boiling, water; cool. Sift together flour and salt; set aside. Blend the shortening with the sugar. Add the egg; beat well. Add the milk alternately with the sifted dry ingredients. Mix in the chocolate. Put through a cookie press onto an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in a moderately hot (400°) oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

Chocolate Drop Cookies
(Makes 3 dozen)

- 1 package semi-sweet chocolate
- ⅔ cup sweetened condensed milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup nutmeats
- ⅛ teaspoon salt

Melt the semi-sweet chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. Add the milk and vanilla, and stir until thick. Add the nutmeats and salt. Blend well and drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 10 to 12 minutes.

Buttercup Cupcakes
(Makes 9 cakes)

- ¼ cup butter
- 2 tablespoons grated orange peel
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1½ cups cake flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ cup milk
- ¼ cup orange juice

Thoroughly cream butter, orange peel and sugar. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and orange juice. Fill greased cupcake pans half full. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 15 minutes. When cool, frost with:

Orange Frosting

- 1½ cups confectioners' sugar
- 2 tablespoons cream
- 2 tablespoons orange juice
- 1-2 tablespoons grated orange peel
- Yellow food coloring

Blend together ingredients in order given. Add just enough yellow food coloring to give an attractive tint. Beat until mixture has a spreading consistency.

A feather-like cake with a delightful flavor and texture is this novel sponge cake that goes nicely with a party punch. It may be frosted with a boiled icing, cream cheese or butter frosting. Garnish with whole nutmeats.

Applesauce Sponge Cake
(Makes 1 9-inch tube cake)

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- ¾ cup hot applesauce
- 1½ cups cake flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon

Beat eggs until light and thick. Add sugar gradually and beat until sugar is dissolved. Add applesauce and beat well. Add dry ingredients which have been sifted four times. Beat until smooth. Bake in an ungreased 9-inch tube pan in a slow (325°) oven for 55 minutes.

LYNN SAYS:

Combine Favorite Flavors For Tasty Dishes

Minced clams, broth and all that comes in the can, combined with tomato soup and a bit of pea soup make an excellent soup combination. Add a squirt of lemon for spicing the flavor.

Fry some thin slices of ham until they frizzle; at the same time, saute some mushrooms and serve both on French toast for a really good luncheon or Sunday night supper

There are times when you need a first course, so split tiny creamy puffs and fill with lobster or crabmeat, shredded and mixed with mayonnaise.

Extend the chicken with oysters when you want to cream it. Serve on toast triangles or hot, flaky biscuits. If you like cornbread, try these in place of the biscuits.

With fruit salads, there's nothing better than this dressing: mix together 3 parts soured cream, 2 parts chili sauce and 1 part worcestershire sauce. Chill thoroughly.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Early Solution Is Easiest

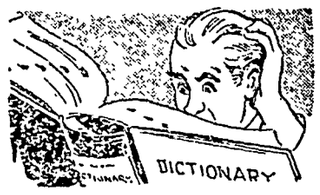
By Lawrence Gould

Should child problems be treated early?

Answer: Yes, says Elizabeth Replogle in Understanding the Child. The head of a large child guidance center is reported as stating that "for a pre-school child, it takes less than six months to correct a problem, and sometimes even one treatment is enough. But it takes nine months for the work to be done in a six- to eight-year-old child, a year to a year and a half to help the child between eight and adolescence, and two to four or more years to help the adolescent with his problem—if then". Yet the difficulty could probably have been avoided if the parents had had enough patience, understanding and love

Will hypnosis give you self-confidence?

Answer: Not really. The seeming confidence you may get from "suggestion", hypnotic or otherwise, is not in yourself but in the person from whom the suggestion comes If someone tells you you have nothing to fear, you will be fearless just as long as you believe him—and no longer. Belief impressed on you by hypnosis may last somewhat longer than if you received the reassurance while awake, but does not change your deeper, unconscious feelings True self-confidence comes only from within, through understanding and rejecting the childish anxieties that have robbed you of it.



Can you think without words?

Answer: Not logically or "abstractly." All the higher mental processes depend on your being able to attach verbal "labels" to your experiences and sensations For example, you must know the word "anxiety" (or an equivalent) to be able to think clearly about the cause and nature of emotional disturbances Tests are said to show that children who are deaf, while normally intelligent, are inferior in thinking power because they know comparatively few words, and conversely, there is a definite relation between the size of your vocabulary and your chance of business or professional success

KEEPING HEALTHY

Decreasing Appetite For Overweight

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN AN OVERWEIGHT PERSON realizes that he is losing his figure, he will give this matter more thought than he will a physician's warning about the dangers of overweight to health and life itself of overweight.

Forgetting that his excess fat came on slowly and gradually, he looks about for a quick method of removing this excess fat instead of removing it by the slow, safe method of eating less food and, if able, taking more exercise

There are certain drugs which reduce the appetite and still allow enough strength to carry on daily work. Two outstanding drugs of this nature are Benzedrine Sulfate and Dexedrine Sulfate. Benzedrine Sulphate, amphetamine, first became widely known because a group of university students found that it removed fatigue and allowed them to study and keep bright for many extra hours. Later it was found that the individual could not only do with less sleep but with less food also because he did not become hungry.

In some cases of overweight physicians consider that the use of a hunger-reducing drug is advisable Some expert advice on this subject is given in the British Medical Annual by a group of physicians In investigating Benzedrine Sulfate and Dexedrine Sulfate, they found that both drugs are effective in reducing appetite, mainly through their action on the brain, but both cause certain side effects which must be controlled by the physician or it may be unwise to use them in certain patients These side effects are dizziness, depression, insomnia, feelings of frustration, dryness and a metallic taste in the mouth. It was found that Dexedrine Sulfate caused fewer side effects than Benzedrine Sulfate.

Both drugs give a feeling of well-being.

Reducing the food intake is always necessary with every method of reducing overweight.

ANNUAL BAND CONCERT A GREAT SUCCESS

The Klemme school auditorium was packed with people who came to hear a very excellent concert given by the Klemme School Band last Wednesday evening.

It was a "Farewell Concert" for Director Stan Bulka, who has been called back into army service. It was one of the best concerts that the band has ever played and Mr. Bulka can well feel proud of the excellent showing of his young musicians.

After the concert the Music Mothers served lunch to a large number of people. As a whole, it was a great night and everyone enjoyed it.

CIVIC CLUB MEETING CALLED TO DISCUSS SUMMER MOVIES

Pres. W. F. Pavey has contacted a company which can put on movies in Klemme during the summer months.

A meeting of business men is called for this Thursday evening at the Grade School Building to discuss the project. This meeting is for ALL business men in own and YOU are expected to be there to voice your opinion, pro or con.

HAVE INSECTICIDES READY BEFORE INSECTS ARRIVE

The best way to beat garden insects out of their summer menus is to have insecticides all ready before the infestation starts.

Once plans for the garden are completed, it's easy to figure out how much insecticide is needed. Then it can be bought ahead of time so it's on hand.

Four rows of potatoes, 50 feet long, will require 1 pound of 3 percent DDT dust or 2 gallons of spray for each application. Four applications are usually needed during the summer. This same amount will also control borers in sweet corn, says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College extension entomologist.

Although DDT is the best insecticide for potato insects, increased demand may cause shortages. Sulfur and lead arsenate, or sulfur and calcium arsenate mixtures may be substituted for dust application. Use calcium arsenate or lead arsenate mixtures with a bordeaux mixture for spraying purposes. These insecticides are more expensive and less effective than DDT, Gunderson adds.

Rotenone will take care of insects that attack most other garden crops. For the average size home garden it will take about 4 pounds of 1 percent rotenone dust.

Since rotenone is produced from the roots of a subtropical plants, it's possible that shipping space may limit the supply this year. In case of a shortage, Gunderson says methoxychlor can be used as a substitute for rotenone for cucumber, squash and melon insects. Use a 3 percent dust for these plants, or 2 tablespoons per gallon of water for spray.

The Three Lives Of A Boy Named MICHAEL THOMPSON

This is Michael Thompson, chased from the yard next door by sharp words. "Don't suck your thumb!" called his Dad angrily—a Dad who didn't bother to ask him what was the matter.

It all happened in "Preface to a Life," a movie shown at the Iowa State College Family Life Conference last week. It could well have been titled "The Three Lives of Michael Thompson," for the movie camera focused on three ways that Michael's parents might have brought him up.

The situations portrayed in Michael Thompson's life struck close to home for Iowa parents and young people attending the Family Life Conference at Iowa State College. In one series of events his father proceeded doggedly to push Michael ahead too fast, trying to make him fulfill all his own ambitions for success.

In another series of episodes, Michael's mother tried desperately to keep him "her little boy" throughout the years of his growing up. The result of both of these courses of action, one forcing him ahead, one holding him back, was an unhappy insecure young man.

Finally Michael's parents cooperated with wisdom and understading, pushed their dreams for Michael into the background and helped their son grow up in his own way, along the paths of his own individuality.

Parents Speak Up

"Then are we to have no dreams for our children?" This question was posed by Dr. Glenn Hawkes of the Iowa State College Child Development Department, who headed up a panel of four parents following the showing of "Preface to a Life."

The answer came from Mrs. Jean Hansen: "Dreams are all right, and we can't help them," she said. "But I learned as my children grew that what I wanted most for them was a happy, well-adjusted life. I found I I had to modify my dreams as we went along—alter my dream to fit my child, not stretch and pull my child to follow the pattern of a dream." Mrs. Hansen is also from the college's Child Development Department.

Michael's unhappy, preconceived idea of what the new baby that was to be his brother would be like brought up another point for discussion. "We often forget or don't understand at all how the world looks to a small child," said Mrs. Alice Palubinskas of the Psychology Department at the college.

Explain Carefully

Blaine Porter, fourth member of the panel, added that this incident shows how children often don't get the idea we're trying to convey, that we need to try a little harder to explain things to them in their terms. Mr. Porter is on the economics and sociology staff of the college.

Discussion also centered on the relationship between Michael and his younger brother when at the start his parents did explain and introduce the new baby in the right way. Instead of making him stay home when he went to play ball with the gang, he happily took him along. When his friends protested, Michael said, "He is not too little, he's MY brother."

The four parents emphasized the main point brought out by "Preface to a Life"—that the attitudes of parents don't just happen once in a while. They carry through in every thing they do and say in regard to their children. This attitude cannot be rigid, it cannot lack understanding and flexibility if we are to help our children grow up into happy, well-adjusted adults.

PROTECT WELL FROM IMPURE SURFACE WATER

Contrary to what most people think, having water tested is the second step in obtaining a safe water supply, according to Merl Whorlow, extension health specialist at Iowa State College. The first step is to make sure that contaminated surface water or near-surface seepage can't get into the well. This involves fixing up well platforms, well casings and other measures to prevent well contamination. If you don't fix up a well so you know that contamination can't get in, water may test pure today but test impure tomorrow or next day, Whorlow says.

Once the well is fixed up, though, have it tested. Additional information on safe well construction is available from the Iowa State College Extension Service at Ames, and information is available on having water tested at the State Hygienic Laboratory at Iowa City.

Killed By Enraged Bull

A valiant collie dog tried in vain to save the life of his mistress last week. When Mrs. John Hayward, 64, was attacked by an enraged bull, the dog drove the animal away but the injuries received proved fatal to Mrs. Hayward. She died in the hospital at Emmetsburg.

BEST TO HAVE TILE LAID BY DRAINAGE CONTRACTOR

A good, experienced drainage contractor has the right machinery to lay farm drain tile quickly and do it right, so it will provide efficient land drainage for many crop seasons. Well-laid farm tile have been in use more than 100 years in New York state.

D. O. Hull, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, says good contractors will lay farm drain tile according to the specifications of the drainage engineer or Soil Conservation Service farm planner who did the surveying.

For 3 years, Iowa State College has conducted tile drainage contractors' short courses to train midwestern tiling contractors in the best drainage practices. Farmers can benefit from this when they receive better drainage installations than were possible from hand laying methods in past years.

Hull says that it was common practice for the old-time hand tilers to lay tile two spade deep, or about 2½ to 3 feet. This was to shallow for most efficient drainage, he continues. Tile should be laid 4 feet deep. The modern machine will cut an even, deep trench through all types of soil. There are no shallow tile laid in hard spots or toward the end of the day.

Hull criticizes a former practice of grading tile by the running water method--where the grade was determined by whether or not water would run in the ditch. A good contractor has surveyed stake lines to guide him. He will get tile to drain with no guesswork, even on very flat grades.

MORTICIAN FILES SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Kenneth F. Boughton, Britt mortician, has filed suit against the Western Mutual Insurance company in district court at Garner asking judgement in the sum of $164.76 on account of windstorm damage on Dec. 18, 1950, to a business neon sign. The plaintiff alleges that the neon sign was covered for such loss by a policy issued by the company.

A Poor Start

It takes an old timer to remember when we had a Spring Season as cold and wet as this one. It means that folks will have to put in long hours of field work when the chance comes and machinery will have to work. We still have some new spreaders, plows, disc harrows and drags, and don't pass up this good used Row-Crop 60 Tractor. The season is off to a poor start, but we have the stuff to get the work done in the shortest time.

Eighth Grade News

The eighth graders have been working very hard the past few weeks and will be for four more so that they might successfully complete their work.

We are coming to the end of our books now and the studies are becoming easier for us also.

The eighth grade class hopes that you people in the community enjoyed reading our newspaper "Junior Hi Fliers." We sold out 100 copies of the newspaper and the proceeds go to the junior high class. Any money left over at the end of the year will be used for the buying of library books for the 8th grade room. We have already purchased 8 new books.

Both the junior high boys and girls will receive a trophy for winning places in athletic tournaments. The boys for 2nd and girls for 3rd in county basketball.

IOWA HAS FEWER, LARGER DAIRY HERDS

Trend Will Result In More Milk Production

Some widespread shifts are being made on Iowa's dairy production scene. The trend is for fewer but larger dairy herds in the state, a decrease in total cow numbers, but more total milk production.

During the past two decades, the number of herds in Iowa has decreased 5 to 10 percent, and the number of dairy cows has dropped 15 percent. Numbers moved downward from 1,310,000 cows in 1929 to 1,088,000 cows last year. There are now fewer dairy cows on Iowa farms than at any time since 1922.

The drop in dairy cow numbers came largely on farms having from 3 to 9 cows, with the number of this size of herd decreasing 20 percent. Some farmers in this group quit dairying entirely; others increased the size of their herds. During the same period the number of herds with 10 or more cows increased, with a sharp increase in number of herds with 20 or more cows.

Total Production Up

These shifts are in the right direction in the opinion of Floyd Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College. He believes the trend toward fewer dairy herds but larger herds will result in more efficient production of a higher quality product.

Production per cow is at an alltime record high. The average milk production of all of Iowa's cows went up from 4,480 pounds per cow in 1929 to 5,460 pounds in 1950. In fact, Arnold points out, production per cow has increased more than enough to offset the decrease in total numbers. This has resulted in an increase in total milk production. Iowa produced 5.94 billion pounds of milk last year compared in 5.87 billion pounds in 1929.

Increased efficiency is also showing up in better use of available labor. Larger herd owners are moving more toward mechanization which is necessary to meet the tightening labor situation on farms.

Improve Quality

Quality is expected to get a boost as herd size increases for several reasons. The dairyman with a small herd of three to nine cows generally doesn't give his cows as much attention as the dairyman with a larger herd. The small herd owner also does not feel he can afford the equipment which helps produce high quality milk and cream efficently.

And the small herd owner is right in his theories, in Arnold's opinion. When dairying is on a large enough scale to make it a major enterprise on the farm it can be developed into a more efficient enterprise.

CARE AT CALVING TIME PRODUCES BETTER CALVES

Providing proper shelter and facilities for calving plus a little extra attention at calving time will usually pay off in a bigger beef calf crop.

Rex Beresford, extension beef specialist at Iowa State College, says a large number of beef calves are lost each spring when they are dropped in the lot where they may be chilled in bad weather, trampled in the mud by other cattle or eaten by hogs.

A cow that is worth keeping deserves a clean, safe place in which to calve. The beef specialist recommends removing the cow from the herd when she shows signs of calving and putting her in a sheltered place. Most cows will take care of themselves and their calves better than a farmer can. However, it is a good idea to keep an eye on them until the calf is clean, dry, and has nursed. After that young beef calves are hardy animals. It is the first few hours that are crucial.

Young calves should be provided with shelter from rain and storms and should have clean quarters with plenty of bedding to help avoid infections, says Beresford. They should also receive a little less milk than they want at first, rather than too much. Cows that are heavy milkers may need milking out a few times until the calf is ready to handle the entire output.

START CALVES EARLY ON CONCENTRATE MIX

Calves should be encouraged to eat a concentrate mixture as early as possible, according to Joe Hineman, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

One way to get calves to eat early, he says, is to put a little of the contrate mix in the pail from which the calves have been fed milk. After the calves once get the taste of the mixture, they will eat it more readily in the dry form.

The concentrate mixture fed to young calves can be extremely simple when good quality roughage is included in the ration. Hineman recommends a mixture such as one made up of 3 parts cracked corn, 3 parts crushed oats, 3 parts wheat bran, and 1 part of soybean, cottonseed or linseed oilmeal. It may also include 2 percent steamed bone meal and 1 percent salt.

Hineman points out that the whole, cracked or crushed grains are more palatable to calves than are finely ground grains.

California Canal Project Moves Water 500 Miles to Dry Farms

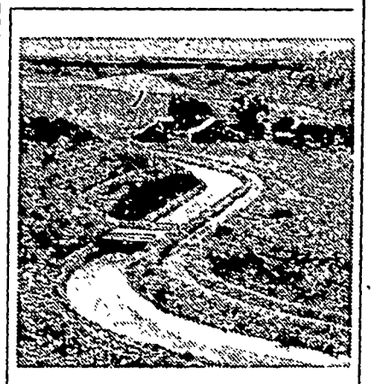
A major milestone in civilized man's elemental urge to control and utilize the fresh waters of the earth will be observed in California from August 1 to 10 with the first full, integrated operation of the initial features of the vast Central Valley project.

This great federal reclamation project, first envisioned when the state still was largely wilderness, stores precious water at the northern tip of the state's central valley basin, and transports it to parched farm lands at the southern end, nearly 500 miles away.



Water for farms, homes and industry is provided by the Contra Costa canal of the Central Valley project, which meanders through a 48-mile course of pleasant valleys and rolling hills along the south shore of Suisun Bay.

The great Central Valley is 500 miles long, 100 miles wide and supports 1½ million people in its towns and on its farms.

To each of the communities along the river channels and project canals (towns like Red Bluff, population 3,800; Tracy, 4,000; Mendota, 700; Lindsay, 4,300; Walnut Creek, 1,500) the arrival of Central Valley water has special significance. Each one of them depends directly or indirectly on agriculture and related farm industries as its main source of income.

Of the 220 different crops grown on Central Valley farms, the principal ones are field crops—including alfalfa, irrigated pasture, sugar beets, beans, barley, cotton and rice; truck crops—including asparagus, tomatoes, melons and a variety of other vegetables; fruits and nuts, including grapes, peaches, plums, prunes, apricots, pears, figs, almonds, olives and oranges. Practically all of these crops are grown under irrigation, except for some barley, almonds and beans.

Over 90 per cent of the gross farm income of the valley is from irrigated crops. Although the production of livestock for slaughter and dairy products is very important, their present production is inadequate to meet local requirements.

ONE OF THE FIRST men to advocate a concrete suggestion for the solution of the area's water problem was Col. Robert B. Marshall, chief geographer for the U S. geological survey. In 1891, when he first toured the inland basin, Colonel Marshall envisioned a great system of dams, canals and other works.

His plan was made public in 1919, and placed before the California legislature in 1921. There followed the "State Water Plan" of 1931, forerunner of the Central Valley project. After the people of California approved the plan, federal assistance was sought. In September, 1935, President Roosevelt allocated funds for the project under the Emergency Relief act. Construction began October 19, 1937, under the direction of Walker R. Young, later chief engineer for the bureau of reclamation.

Individual units of the project have been in partial operation since 1940, but to date the project's initial features have not been operated as an integrated system

One of the other two stars, Ruth Roman, met Mortimer Hall soon afterward, and recently married him The third, Richard Todd, brought his bride to Hollywood for a honeymoon while he appeared in the picture. Now the studio suggests that possibly the picture will have the same effect on audiences that it had on the players, but can't figure how to get statistics.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will make a rare radio appearance on April 20 on NBC (10.45, E S.T.) when Henry Cassidy, the network's director of news and special events, interviews them on the "Pro and Con" program.

Berry Kroeger, of "Young Dr. Malone" and "The Road of Life", was enroute to Hollywood last spring, to appear in "The Count of Monte Cristo", when he was jailed as a wanted convict in Zanesville, Ohio. A citizen recognized his face, but assumed that he had seen it in one of those "Wanted" notices in the Post Office—whereas he had really seen Berry on television.

Phil Baker, now back on NBC's "The $64 Question", says there is no way to rest but by working. He found that out last year. After three decades in show business he decided to take a year-long vacation and do what he had always wanted to—see this country from Walla Walla to Key West. He turned down lucrative offers in order to do it.

THE FICTION CORNER

A CASE FOR THE KIDS

By O. F. Lathrop

SAM BROMLEY replaced the telephone in its cradle with a slam and reached for his broad-brimmed felt.

"I'm going out on this case myself," he told the office girl. "That's the third call in an hour about these explosions and the deputies don't seem to be doing a thing The pavement just blew up over a culvert and broke five windows in the Wright Hatchery near Sunville." He stomped out and got into his car.

3-Minute Fiction

He had an uneasy feeling about these blasts and a very personal reason for investigating them himself. People in little towns all over the county had been calling for the last twenty-four hours. And his son, Tommy, was missing.

"I thought the Rooshians had bombed us," old Ben Grubbs in Claremont had said. "Busted the sidewalk over the crick like eggshells."

Sam drove to all the spots reported and inspected the damage. Sidewalks heaved up, windows shattered, but not a clue. At the Sunville Hatchery he met his deputies.

"What do you make of it, Sheriff? Could be Red sabotage, eh?"

Sam shook his head. "Hoodlums, probably. Not any real damage done." But he didn't say what was in his mind—that it could even be kids' pranks. He thought uneasily again of his own son, Tommy, and that crazy gang of his. Still, it didn't seem as if kids would go that far.

"I thought the Rooshians had bombed us," old Ben Grubbs said. "Busted the sidewalk over the crick like eggshells."

All day he drove around and at supper-time he went wearily home. Somehow the baked potatoes and ham didn't appeal to him.

"Where's Tommy?" he demanded of his wife.

"He'll be coming later," Ida assured him. "He's all excited about these explosions. The fellows have been kidding him about his dad not stopping them. I'm sorry, Sam," she said, as he jumped up.

"Where was he last night?" he persisted. "Out all hours!"

"Oh, just around, as he says Studying at Ted's and they stopped for a hamburger at Joe's place. I believe him, Sam."

BUT Sam put on his hat and went out. He had to know. At Joe's place he got out of the car and went in.

"Tommy in here last night for a hamburger, Joe?" he asked.

"Yep, he was, Sam," Joe answered. Just then there was another low boom and a thud. Sam made for the door. He tracked the sound by the crowd. And there he found Tommy and his gang hovering over a hole in the bridge.

As he came into the light, Sam saw dark rings around his son's eyes and smudges among the freckles.

"I saw 'em, Dad. We've followed that old jalopy till we saw them stop by this creek, and we slipped up and watched. It was that wild bunch from Milville High. They had a great stunt—balloons filled with gas. They light the kerosene-soaked string and then beat it. And by the time the string burns up to the balloon they can be miles away."

Sam scratched his head sheepishly. "As simple as that, eh? But we'll soon have them in jail if you've got the proof."

Tommy looked thoughtful. "Oh, I have. But what those kids need is something to do—not jail. There's nothing for kids to do around these little towns but think up devilry for excitement. People ought to help plan something for them to do instead. I might have been one of them myself."

Sam grinned. "I guess you're right at that. In fact, I thought that you might be in on it."

"Me? Huh! I've been trailing them down because the fellows said my dad was a no-good sheriff, and I knew better. I had to help."

Sam smiled again. "Guess I better put you on as deputy. You had me worried. Maybe we've been going at this whole business wrong-end-to I'll try your angle and see what we can do."

SCANNING THE WEEK'S NEWS
of Main Street and the World

Truman Says He Knows 1952 Plans; Research Group Urges Higher Taxes

CONFIDENT HARRY—Harry S Truman, appearing "fat and sassy", as the home town folks would put it, was back in Washington after his three-week vacation in Florida for a round of activities which included greeting President Vincent Auriol of France, and a speech before Latin-American foreign ministers, meeting in Washington to discuss topics concerning western hemisphere peace and security.

But it wasn't confident Harry's speech making and social whirl that made the biggest headlines in the nation's press. It was his statement that he knew whether or not he would seek re-election in 1952 that threw Main Street voters into a surge of speculation. Mr. Truman told them blandly that he had made up his mind and he would tell "all in due time."

Confident Harry
He'll tell all in due time.

The statement also caused considerable speculation among professional politicians throughout the country, with the majority believing he won't run again. Remembering that Truman is no amateur politician himself, average Main Street voters were about equally divided in their speculation.

One government official, however, backed his belief with a public statement. Michael J. Galvin, undersecretary of labor, said Truman will run and will be re-elected by 56 per cent of the popular vote.

CONSUMER SPENDING— If the Committee for Economic Development, a businessmen's private research group, had its way the people of the home towns of the nation would face a $10 billion tax increase next year.

The group recently proposed increasing federal taxes by that amount, including a federal sales tax. The program was frankly tailored to restraining consumer spending—by the sales tax and higher excise taxes, a surtax on individual incomes, tight restrictions on bank credits, and encouragement of private savings.

According to the C.E.D. the small town income group must pay because "it is these incomes that provide the largest part of consumption expenditures."

TWO YEARS OF DRIVE—Charles E. Wilson, top man of the administration's mobilization effort, in his first report said with two more years of drive and unity, the U. S. should be strong enough to give "reasonable safety against aggression" and a high-level civilian economy at the same time.

For the average American in the home towns of the nation, Wilson listed these necessary efforts: (1) Virtually every qualified young man, upon reaching a certain age, will have to serve in the armed forces; (2) everyone will have to pay more taxes; (3) people will have to wait for some of the things they want to buy—new housing and automobiles; (4) there will be dislocations in the economy and some production cutbacks and unemployment: (5) the technological and social progress of the nation will be slowed down.

Upon one point he was insistent: Inflation must be stopped and the economy controlled. In this category is farming, on which the Main Street of America directly or indirectly depends. He said careful attention must be given to changing the farm-price provisions of the Defense Production Act "in such a way as to accomplish a greater degree of stability in food prices and at the same time treat farmers equitably in relation to the other elements of the economy."

Mobilizer Wilson
Two years of work still ahead.

As for present price controls, he said: "There is no doubt that, if price controls had not been put on, prices would have risen much farther and faster since January than they actually have."

BRANNAN'S PLAN— The people of the great midwest farm belt where pondering the abrupt shake-up in the department of agriculture by Secretary Brannan. The speculation began when Brannan suddenly announced the replacement of Ralph S. Trigg and Frank K. Woolley in the powerful production and marketing administration.

The people of America's bread basket were wondering if the shake-up may mark the start of another campaign to sell the nation on the Brannan plan. The average midwest farmer has not been enthusiastic about the secretary's proposed program.

NEW SYSTEM—On April 30 grocery items comprising more than 60 per cent of the $32 billion spent annually for food in this country will go under rigid margin controls at wholesale and retail levels.

Michael V. DiSalle, director of price stabilization, who announced the new controls, reported the immediate "impact of these regulations will be to reduce prices," but he warned the Main Street housewife not to expect big reductions.

Among the major foods covered in the new regulations are butter, packaged cheese, baby foods, cocoa, breakfast cereals, coffee and tea, flour, flour mixes, canned and frozen fruits and vegetables, jams and jellies, lard, mayonnaise and salad dressings, shortenings, canned meats and canned fish.

Items not covered are fresh milk and cream, fresh meats, bread, fresh fruits and vegetables, sugar, ice cream, soft drinks and candy, along with many less important foods and "specialty" items.

"Chortling" Smith
Sam J. Smith looked aloft and chortled with happiness as a downpour of rain drenched his land in San Antonio's Belgian garden district. Rain which began on Easter Sunday and continued through Monday was a blessing to the parched land and plagued farmers and ranches of the area.

JAPANESE TREATY—The 14 nations concerned with a peace treaty with Japan have received the American version worked out by Ambassador John Foster Dulles.

Generally regarded as a liberal document, the treaty appears in for considerable difficulties before being accepted by the 14 nations concerned. The Soviet Union has taken the position that it does not even want to discuss the matter.

Unexpected British opposition has already been encountered with Great Britain wanting a shipping limitation written into the treaty. The U. S. is opposed to any such clause.

As for the Soviet Union the U. S. has indicated it will negotiate a treaty whether the Russians participate or not.

CLAY RESIGNS—The resignation of Gen. Lucius D. Clay as special assistant to Charles E. Wilson, director of the office of defense mobilization, was viewed by many observers as another move on the government's part to bring organized labor back into the mobilization program.

The way is now open for Wilson to name a representative of labor to a post of equal importance with that of the general to act as liaison between the mobilization director's office and organized labor.

DISAPPOINTING FARM REPORT

1951 Crop Plantings Called Inadequate

A recent report by the agriculture department indicated that farmers were not planning to plant enough crops in 1951 to maintain present levels of food supplies. The report raised the question whether the country is not taking too much for granted about our food production and the possibility of future food shortages, particularly of meat.

On the whole farm prices are good enough to encourage larger crops. Government crop reporters who made the department survey came up with two explanations for reduced plantings: (1) A farm labor shortage and (2) a reluctance to plow up land which,, at government urging, had been returned to grass.

The outlook carries the threat of rigid rationing by next year.

Government May Be Legally Right, Morally Wrong

By Wright A. Patterson

WHAT MAY BE MORALLY wrong may not necessarily be legally wrong. There was nothing illegal in a United States Senator's using his influence to secure a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan for a client of his attorney son, for which the son received a fee of $21,000, but the senator's action was definitely morally wrong.

No court of law would convict him of legal wrong doing, but the court of public opinion—the voters—should convict him of moral wrong. At the next election, when that senator is a candidate for reelection, and all others who have been mixed up in the R.F.C. scandals, regardless of political affiliations, they should be retired to private life.

Such men should not be placed in positions of influence. They are not entitled to public confidence. The Fulbright committee brought these men into the limelight, but that committee cannot convict them as can the court of public opinion. Morally they are guilty as were those in the Harding administration, but they were smoother, and avoided legal wrong doing.

So long as they were only morally crooked the President condones their offense, and sees nothing wrong in the action of those on White House payrolls, and finds no reason for dropping them as public employees. That is the job the voters can do, but to do that it may be necessary to discipline the boss. The R.F.C. and the sale of federal jobs in Mississippi are both sorry messes that call for a thorough house cleaning.

Secretary of State Acheson refused to turn his back on Alger Hiss, convicted of perjury and President Truman condoned Acheson's statement, as he has condoned the actions of White House employees in the R.F.C. scandals, on the grounds they have committed no legal crime. Evidently immoralities have no place in his conception of wrong doing, and such a conception has no place in connection with the presidential job. Like the scandals of the Harding administration, it is a sorry mess.

Joe, Harry and Tom were all subject to the draft, and all three were asking for deferment for different reasons, which each thought was entirely legitimate. Congress has made no definite rule that will apply to those seeking deferment, but instead of doing so, it has passed that arduous duty to the President, thus again abdicating a job that is strictly up to the congress. Congress has abdicated in so many instances that now the President has more authority than has any President in history.

That is not unusual confidence on the part of congress in the present administrative branch of the government, but rather a desire to pass along to the President those subjects that call for careful consideration, or those that might affect votes of the constituents of the members of the senate or house. It is the congressional version of "let George do it."

Such action on the part of Congress is unfair to the President, and it is also unfair to Joe, Harry and Tom. It leaves the decision in their deferment cases in the hands of a partisan politician. It is time that congress was doing the congressional job, the job for which it was created, rather than continuing to "pass the buck" on subjects that call for thoughtful consideration. Now it is up to the President, rather than to the armed services to say who must fight or who need not, and the ward or precinct boss can wield an influence.

As of March 1, the Gallup poll shows only 26 per cent of the people are for President Truman. That is the same poll that predicted his defeat only three years ago, because of which prediction many ardent Republicans lost election bets. It was wrong then, and it might be now.

What do Republicans stand for in the matter of domestic and foreign policies? If the party leaders know, they do not take the public into their confidence in any definite detail, other than opposition to a continuance of the Truman regime. They do not even generally support the American free enterprise system or entirely oppose the Truman welfare state.

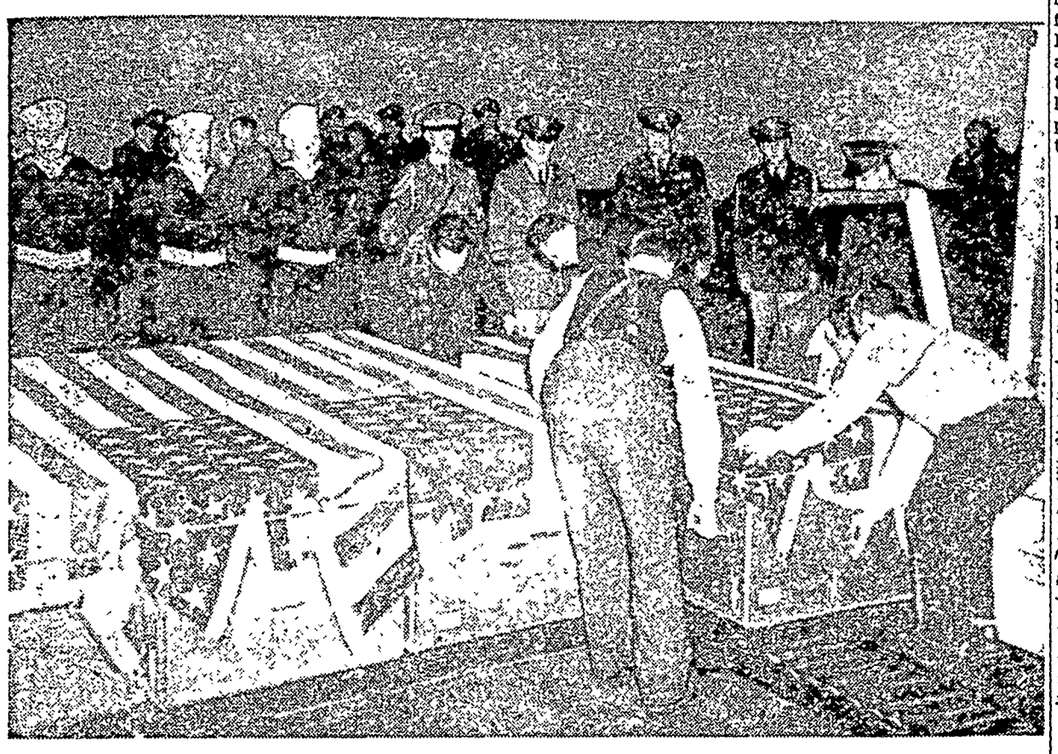
ALLIES DROP ON COMMUNISTS . . . Paratroopers of the 187th regimental combat team (airborne) fill the air as they float toward the Communist-dominated fields during a recent airborne attack north of Seoul near Munsan, Korea. After establishing an allied perimeter at Munsan, the American jumpmen, were joined by a tank-led column which drove northward from existing United Nations lines to the south. As a result of the dropping of the paratroopers in the Munsan area, United States and other U.N. forces were able to begin a new big threat to the Communist flank in that area.



CASKETS OF MARINES KILLED IN KOREA . . . Four of the 57 caskets which arrived in San Francisco recently containing remains of servicemen who fell in battle and were buried in Korea are shown after they were unloaded from the transport General Randall, which brought them home. Standing by the caskets are members of the all-service guard of honor. This marks the first time in history that war dead have been returned to the United States from a foreign theater of war while the fighting continues. Latest reports list about 60,000 American casualties of the Korean war.

FRANCE OFFERS HAND TO U.S. . . . The friendship of the French nation for the United States is symbolized by the extended hand of President Vincent Auriol of France as he and his wife arrive in New York on the Ile de France as guests of the United States government. Behind Mme. Auriol is French ambassador Henri Bonnet. Civic officials and other dignitaries were on hand to welcome the distinguished guests.

PLAYTIME . . . Senator Estes Kefauver, chairman of the senate crime investigation committee, lets his hair down and bounces up and down on a pogo stick for the amusement of his daughter, Linda, 9 (not shown).

REPLACEMENTS FOR EUROPE . . . Boarding an army transport in Brooklyn are some of the first shipment of European replacements. All of the new G.I.'s were trained in army camps throughout the U.S. and processed though Camp Kilmer before assignment to an European area. General Dwight D. Eisenhower has been promised four full divisions for his European army and 95 per cent of that manpower will be assigned through Camp Kilmer, in New Jersey.

OLD CURMUDGEON . . . Harold Ickes, former secretary of the Interior, leaves White House after conference with President Truman. Ickes denied reports that he will be named head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Charmless Girls

SOME GIRLS are born with charm. They attract everyone within reach without much effort. Other girls—well, Olive Russell is one of the others Olive is 23; she lives in Duluth.

"I'm just not attractive, and I know it," says her letter. "I've known it for about seven years. I'm sick and tired of struggling to make people—and especially men—like me, and yet I can't drop out of the world, I can't die, and sometimes it seems as if I simply couldn't live and be so unpopular, so left out of things.

"There's no use cataloguing what I have or what I haven't in the way of looks; I've got all my features in their usual places; I've got hair, I don't wear glasses, ear-drums, a wig or false teeth. My aunt, by the way, who is 45 and has all these disadvantages has just made a very prosperous second marriage.

"I dress nicely, I smile, I listen interestedly to any man who happens to be near me. And without the slightest warning he gets up and walks away to another woman. No man asks me to go to dinner or the theatre, and if I ask a man to dine with my father and mother and me he may come, but he doesn't stay late, and the conversation is general for only about an hour after dinner. If I tell a joke it falls flat. If I buy an expensive coat another girl in the office buys one for $20 85 and it looks just as well. If I propose a plan for a week end, everyone in the office has something else to do.

Left Out

"I tell you," continues Olive's letter, "it breaks you down to be always trying to push your way into good times and normal love affairs and to be always left on the outside. My group—my old college group and present office group—is breaking up into marriages now; homes and babies have become the interest of the day, and where am I? I know just how much young husbands like to have the dear old girl friend drop in and expect to be asked to dinner.

"My mother thinks I'm lovely; she thinks I'm just too fine and intelligent for these ordinary men. She wants me to go to parties and 'just dance around, dear, with everyone who asks you, and don't think too much about it.' Think too much about it! What else can you do when you sit unnoticed, dance after dance, and the music plays and the lights shine, and everyone else is having a glorious time? I don't go to parties any more; my youth is over at 23, and nobody can fool me about it.

"What I'm asking you," Olive concludes, "is whether it would be any better if I went away? It would break my parents' hearts, and mine, too, but I just can't bear to have the thirties and forties begin to go by, and never feel that I've lived at all. Shall I leave home for six months or so, and see if it's different when I come back?"

One Girl's Problem

That's one girl's pathetic problem, and it isn't an unusual one. In every group of girls, in every school, there are a few who really do not attract young friendships and glide easily into young good times, for no discernable reason. Homelier girls, more stupid girls make their way; girls with spectacles, freckles, too much weight or too much height saunter about the campus with attentive squires in tow, but girls in Olive's position appear to be under a malignant spell, and their cleverest efforts don't attract to them the beaus and the good times for which they hunger.

Often they try too hard, too obviously. Often that assumed merriment, those plans, that careful listening are perfectly recognizable. And nothing—such is the hard cruelty of youth—nothing so isolates a girl as the suspicion that she is angling, straining, campaigning determinedly to be popular.

Olive, forget men. Of course you can't. But act exactly as if there were no men about. Don't flaunt your activities and assert that you really are so busy what with Red Cross and Spanish lessons.

Don't say anything at all. Drop out of the picture as you would if you had a delightful husband in the service overseas, and were improving yourself to be even more charming when he comes back.

Or if you don't like that idea, take it the other way. Say to yourself, "I am 23. At 32 I am going to make a really good marriage. I want my husband to have a cultured, gentle, happy busy woman for a wife; a real woman, fragrant and loving and ready for the supreme experiences of wifehood."

Loss of Simmons, Houtteman Felt

By GRANTLAND RICE

A FEW DAYS AGO we spent two successive days with two of the best managers baseball has known in many years. One is a doctor of philosophy with a Phi Betta Kappa key. His name is Eddie Sawyer. The other was Red Rolfe, Dartmouth graduate on the cum laude side.

These may not be the only college graduates managing a big-league team, but they are the highest up on the collegiate laddef Last year Eddie Sawyer led the National League while Red Rolfe ran second in the American, which is no knock at a college education

Grantland Rice

Now after their brilliant campaigns through 1950 they both have the same problem. Each has lost a star pitcher and neither has found a helpful replacement.

"I have to gamble on Trucks or Gray or one of the rookies to help make up these 19 games that Houtteman won," Red Rolfe said

"I'll have to gamble on the rest of the staff picking up the slack," Eddie Sawyer remarked in a r iny-day fanning session. "It might be Ken Heintzelman. It might be Bubba Church. I expect better years from them both."

Outside of the losses of Simmons and Houtteman, the two teams are just about the same as they were last ye. . It so happens both teams face heavy opposition. The Phillies must grapple with Giants, Dodgers, Braves and Cardinals Giants and Dodgers are dead sure to be tougher than uncooked buffalo meat Braves and Cardinals with two flocks of able pitchers can be tougher than rated, with low-grade infields Or at least second-division infields

The Tigers have no one to mow down except the Yankees, bolstered-up Red Sox, and tougher looking Indians. The Yankees have also lost a star pitcher in Whitey Ford. But they had more to start with than the Tigers had.

The Tigers and the Phillies are among the big guesses of the new campaign. I doubt that either can finish better than second. They might finish fourth. But both are pretty sure to finish in the first division

The doubtful spots belong to the National League.

As far as you can see from this late lookout, Gians and Dodgers or Dodgers and Giants should run 1-2. Just at this date we like the Giants. There is time enough to switch before opening day. But when you get to the Phillies, Braves and Cardinals you stumble into an argument. Sawyer believes his team can run 2-3. He can't quite see another pennant with Curt Simmons wearing khaki.

The two big problems are the Braves and the Cardinals. Both have high-grade pitching staffs—and high-grade pitching staffs are major factors.

The Cardinals have Red Munger, who looks better this season, Howie Pollet (an early hold-out), Brecheen, Boyer, Brazle, Lar ier, Staley, Wilks, plus a young left-hander from Vinegar Bend, Ala , by the name of Mizelle Young Mizelle might easily be one of the stars of the season if he is carried along into b' league action.

Here are some of the doubtful spots.

In the Cardinal infield, Red Schoendienst is a dependable factor. Nippy Jones at first is a guess. So is the suffering Marty Marion at short. So is third base. Musial and Slaughter mean a fine outfield.

The Tigers have a thin pitching staff and only fair catching, but the outfield and infield are high class.

The Dodgers' pitching is erratic. Their only dependable starters are Roe and Newcombe. The rest of the team is high grade everywhere.

You never know which way an "if" will move—up or down, in or out. I'd say the Giants had fewer "ifs" than any other team in their league.

The Power Delegation

Practically every member of the Red Sox delegation can break up a ball game on a split second's notice. They have no combination with the power that Ruth and Gehrig carried into action, but they have more destructive force.

Williams and Dropo are not too far back of the Ruth-Gehrig class. And there is also a destructive force in the bats of Bobby Doerr, Johnny Pesky, Vern Stephens, Coleman and others who give an opposing pitcher few resting spots. It makes a big difference when a pitcher can work on a dangerous hitter and then ease up on one of the .250 starters. But when he can't rest anywhere along the line it is a different story.

Last season Bob Lemon had an 11-to-0 lead around the third in one game. But the Indians still lost.

Williams, Pesky, Doerr, Stephens, Dom DiMaggio and Boudreau have been around for quite a spell. They are rapidly getting no younger, as Mac Smith used to say. But they still have better than a single good season left.

HADACOL Is Requested By Nurses

HADACOL Helps Folks Suffering Deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron.

Mrs. Lovett

Registered nurses, in increasing numbers, are showing a keen interest in HADACOL and in the results that are being secured with this great modern formula. Requests have been received from many of these nurses for professional samples of HADACOL and many of them indicated that they recommend the HADACOL formula to patients who are deficient in Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin.

Mrs. L. D. Lovett, a registered nurse who lives at 2205 Walnut St., Philadelphia 3, Pennsylvania, says this about HADACOL:

"I was down in Florida for the past month. I had no energy so several members of my family told me to try a bottle of HADACOL. My sister, who is a nurse, was taking a bottle so I tried a bottle. I feel fine since taking HADACOL. I do private duty here. I am 50 years old."

HADACOL can help you, if you suffer such deficiencies. Ask your druggist for HADACOL today. Only HADACOL gives you that "Wonderful HADACOL feeling."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. Iowan Likes Beards

Before the Iron Curtain, two Iowans asked official permission to travel in Russia.

One listed some high-sounding reasons for wanting to enter Russia. The other just said: "I want to see all the beards."

The one who liked beards got right in. The other was refused.

From where I sit, that proves a mighty good point. It pays to be straightforward, whether about passports, or just getting along with the neighbors.

If a man states his view, and his honest reasons, we respect both. American democracy is built on different people, different views, all merged together.

Sure, we argue politics, but we recognize each person's right to his own opinion. Over the supper table, one may sip a cup of coffee, another a temperate glass of beer . . . and that's the same right of choice we all have.

We like different things . . . but most of all we like our right to come right out and be ourselves, and we try to respect the other fellow's right to the same.

Ruth Stille & Lavon Tue Married Sat. At Methodist

RUTH STILLE WEDS LAVON TUE OF NORTHWOOD

Exchange Vows At Klemme Methodist Church

Miss Ruth Stille, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stille, and Lavon Tue, son of Mrs. Emma Tue of Northwood, were united in marriage in the Klemme Methodist Church, on Saturday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, April 28, 1951. The date chosen was the wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The Rev. E. Morris Egeland performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends.

Maurice Jacobs played nuptial music on the organ preceding the ceremony. He also accompanied Allen Barz, who sang "I Love You Truly" and "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony and the "Wedding Prayer" while the couple knelt at the altar.

Ruth was given in marriage by her father.

The bride wore a cream white suit with brown accessories. Her corsage was pale pink roses.

Miss Lois Stille, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a pink suit with navy accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

Mr. Roger Tue of Northwood, nephew of the groom, was the best man. Both the groom and his attendant wore grey suits.

Ushers were Robert Hartzell, cousin of the bride and Harold Nelson of Albert Lea, Minn., nephew of the groom. The ushers also lighted the candles.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the basement of the church. The table was centered with a 4-tier wedding cake, baked and decorated by Mrs. Mildred Day.

Waitresses were the Misses Grace Hartzell of Britt, Marilyn Ludeke of Clear Lake, and Gladys Sivers and Pearl Showers of Des Moines.

Mrs. Lowell Atwood of Des Moines, friend of the bride, had charge of the guest book, and Mrs. Robert Hartzell was in charge of the gifts.

The bride is a graduate of Klemme High School and AIB College of Des Moines. She is employed at the State PMA office as a secretary.

The groom is a graduate of Northwood High School. After returning from military service he enrolled at Drake University where he is attending school.

The couple left on a short wedding trip and after returning will be at home in Des Moines.

KLEMME MILK RATED VERY HIGH BY STATE INSPECTOR

Inspector W. E. Oberg of the Iowa Department of Agriculture inspected milk at the Klemme Cooperative Creamery on April 16th and reported to manager Kenneth Medin that it was one of the best tests he had made for some time.

Mr. Oberg complimented the Creamery and Mitchell Bock for the way the milk was handled to keep down the bacteria count. It was found that the raw milk delivered to the creamery by Mitchell Bock had a very low count of 5,000. A lot of filk will run up a bacterial count of 30,000.

Mitchell Bock has one of the most modern dairies in North Iowa and extreme care is taken to keep sanitation at as near 100 per cent as is humanly possible. The low bacteria count is a very good indication that Mr. Bock uses extreme care in producing milk for the Klemme trade.

Mr. Medin was also complimented by Mr. Oberg for the sanitary conditions at the creamery and for the very low bacteria count in bottled milk. The entire report indicates that Klemme patrons are getting some of the very best milk in the state.

COUNTY HEALTH COUNCIL MEETING AT KANAWHA

The Hancock County Health Council will meet at the Kanawha Lions Den at 8 P. M. Monday evening, May 7th.

Miss Elizabeth Weiss, District Nurse's Supervisor, of Fort Dodge will be at the meeting to discuss getting a County Nurse for Hancock County. Anyone interested in the project is invited to attend this meeting.

The pre-school clinic will also be discussed by Miss Weiss and plans will be made to have the annual pre-school clinics in the county. Any family with children starting to school in the Fall of 1951 will be concerned with this project. It is important that we know the childrens health condition at the beginning of the school year. The Farm Bureau Women's School Committee has offered to cooperate with the County Health Council in making this project possible.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Airplanes, like cars, have become so much a part of our everyday life that we hardly bother to look up anymore when one flies over at the proper altitude.

But let a plane "buzz" your home or farm and you'll take special notice. Your Iowa Safety Congress unges you to be sure and take special notice of such a "daredevil" pilot and "get his number."

Fortunately these reckless pilots are in the minority. They increase the chances for a crash and risk their own lives, as well as endangering lives and property on the ground.

So, follow "Safety Sake's" advice in this week's poster and take down the number on the wing of any airplane that flies too low over your home.

Report this number, which identifies a plane just like a license plate indentifies a car, to the nearest authority; the sheriff, police, Civil Aeronoutics Administration or Iowa Aeronautics Commission.

Don't hesitate to report a reckless pilot. You'll be doing yourself and your neighbors a service—and maybe the pilot, too!

FARMERS IN SOUTH IOWA AND MISSOURI DELAYED THIS SPRING

The Editor took a week end trip to Kansas City and we observed that farmers in Southern Iowa, Missouri and Kansas were also delayed in their spring work.

Some seeding had been done from Jewel on south into Missouri. However, the number of fields seeded was small.

In Missouri and Kansas the farmers are further behind in their field work than here, as their season is usually about 2 to 3 weeks ahead of North Iowa. The stand of winter wheat was not too good, according to one farmer we talked with. Their fields are wet and they have been unable to get in their oats on most farms.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Lord, I pray thee, please deliver me from contact with a flivver, by its owner long neglected (He should rave his head inspected). Somehow, I'm completely mirthless toward a car whose brakes are worthless. And I shudder at this sight: To meet a car with just one light. Behind that flivver, you will find you might as well be driving blind, and you had best be driving slow—There'll be no warning stoplight's glow. You can bet this highway viper never replaced a windshield wiper. Depend on it, this thoughtless boob will drive a tire down to the tube.

Good Lord, I have this plea to make: The only ones that you will take to heaven, when we're resurrected, are those who had their cars inspected!

MAYOR'S COURT

Mayor V. A. Cook held court Friday morning at which time he heard three cases.

Helmer Beenken, 36, with various addresses of Belmond, Titonka and Algona, plead guilty to a charge of intoxication and disturbing the peace on the night of April 25th in Klemme, was fined $75.00 and costs.

Others who appeared in Mayor Cook's court along with Helmer Beenken were his nephew, Don Beenken, 19 of Belmond, and Carol Bock of Klemme. They likewise plead guilty to disturbing the peace on April 25th and each fined $75.00 and costs. $50 was suspended in each casse and the young men were given until May 18th to make good their fine.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED METHODIST FATHER-SON BANQUET AT LIBERTY

Nearly 100 men and boys attended the annual Methodist Father and Son Banquet held at the Liberty Methodist church Friday evening. All enjoyed a very good dinner prepared by the Liberty ladies.

After dinner a program was enjoyed in the auditorium consisting of community singing, a colored film provided by United Airlines on a trip to Hawaii, two accordion pieces by Daryl Hanson and Eugene Zwald and an address by the Rev. Chester Custer of the Renwich Methodist Church. Rev. Custer made a chalk drawing for the group.

Esther Circle Met Wednesday Afternoon, March 25th

The Esther Circle met at the church on Wednesday, April 25th. There were sixteen members and three children present. Mrs. Ed. Green and Mrs. Verner Nelson were hostesses.

Mrs. Dale Shelton was in charge of the lesson. A nice lunch was served.

KLEMME ARCHERS CLUB ENTERTAINED

The Klemme Archers Club was entertained at a banquet by the Forest Archers at Lake Mills Friday evening. Sixty-seven persons were present from Southern Minnesota and Northern Iowa.

Table decorations were carried out in the archery theme. A girls trio entertained with several numbers. Ray Wogen was master of ceremonies and Manley Hammer of Austin, Minn., was guest speaker. Slides were shown by Floyd Thomas. Everyone had an enjoyable evening.

FREE DRIVE-IN MOVIES TO BE FEATURE FOR SUMMER

Rain Or Shine, Movies Will Be Shown In Klemme On Wednesday Nights

A large group of Klemme business men met at the Grade School dining room Thursday evening to discuss the proposition of having Free moving picture shows in Klemme during the summer months.

Mr. Charles Legg of Council Bluffs, one of the owners of the Jack Rabbit Drive In free moving pictures, was present to explain to the business men how the very latest in summer entertainment could be handled in Klemme.

Mr. Legg and his partner, Bob Johnson, operate drive-in theatres in the Rio Grande Valley during the winter, and for summer they have established circuits in North Iowa.

For the Klemme circuit they have a brand new outfit, two latest type projectors, mounted in a large truck. The pictures will be shown on a large screen on Main Street, and all FREE. In case of rain, there will be ample room for parking so that the people can sit in their cars and watch the pictures. A committee is at work arranging for seats to hold a crowd of 1,000.

The summer program will consist of a variety of pictures, all good wholesome family entertainment. Some of the pictures will be in color. All films are new films which will run without scratches, breaks or poor sound.

The pictures will be about 18 feet wide, as clear as any indoor theatre and the sound just as good.

First Show Soon

The first open air pictures show will be given Wednesday night, May 23rd with the showing of "Ringside," a very fine feature, plus cartoon, shorts and news. The shows will run approximately 2 hours.

Don't forget: this fine summer entertainment is absolutely FREE. This summer show is sponsored by the business men of Klemme.

Natural Gas Lines May Be Run Into Town This Year

PEOPLES NATURAL GAS CO. AWAITS GO AHEAD SIGNAL

Material For Gas Service In Klemme Has Been Shipped

The Times has been asked a number of times: "When will Klemme have Natural Gas service?" That is a question that a lot of Klemme residents would like to have answered.

In order to get some definite answer to the question, the Editor wrote to the Peoples Natural Gas Company at Omaha, and here is an extract of a letter which we received from Mr. Ray L. Harrison, Vice President and General Manager:

(QUOTE FROM LETTER)

"It is true that we have material ordered for the distribution system in Klemme and we have been hopeful we can start the work this year. There are many problems yet to be solved before we can start. First, a certificate from Federal Power Commission must be secured by the pipe line company and of course before such certificate can be secured certain matters in connection with the supplying of all of the requirements of the presently connected towns must be assured. While it is our hope we can get all of the construction delays out of the way his summer we feel that your people should not build up their hopes too high.

"I assure you we will do everything we can to get the work done and get service to you but there are, as I said before, many things that must be settled before actual construction can start."

So that is the picture of the natural gas situation in Klemme.

ASSESSORS OF 11 COUNTIES HOLD SESSION

Eleven assessors from North Iowa counties met at the courthouse at Garner Wednesday. F. Ross Henry, Wright county assessor and chairman of the legislative committee of the Iowa Assessors' association gave a resume of recent legislation passed by the Iowa legislature affecting the duties of county assessors.

Fred Missal, Hancock county assessor, gave a report on the meeting recently of the executive committee of the state assessors' association, at which time the board met with Prof William Murray of Iowa State college and George Cosson, Jr., chief of the property tax divison of the state tax commission, to make plans for the annual school of instruction to be hell at Iowa State college early in September. The short course will be of a week's duration and is sponsored jointly by Iowa State college, the state tax commission and the Iowa Assessor's association.

The afternoon session was devoted to comparisons of valuations of certain classes of personal property in the various counties as returned by field assessors on the 1951 personal property assessment. The group will hold its next meeting at the courthouse in Garner May 23.

EMPHASIS ON GOOD GROOMING IN 4-H

The Hancock County 4-H girls are preparing for the Better Grooming contests to be held in their local 4-H clubs and at the county 4-H Rally Day to be held at the Garner High School on June 5th.

The County 4-H Project this year is Clothing. One phase of clothing is Good Grooming. In each of the 16 clubs in the county the May meeting will include the local Good Grooming contest. Each club will choose one junior and one senior member to enter the county contest on Rally Day. The senior member who wins in the County will represent Hancock County at the State Better Grooming Contest June 19-23 at the State 4-H Girls' Convention at Iowa State College in Ames.

The Better Grooming Contest will summarize this phase of the 4-H Girls Clothing Project.

MAY BREAFAST MAY 9TH' AT METHODIST CHURCH

The Martha Circle number 4, with Mrs. Harry Gibbs as chairman will have a May breakfast on May 9th at the Methodist Church.

Serving will start at 9:30. The price of the breakfast will be 35c or more, whatever you wish to donate.

In connection with the breakfast the circle will have a white elephant sale, too. If you want any members to call and get a white elephant you wish to donate, call Mrs. Lester Stille. A member of the circle will call for your items Tuesday. Anyone in the community is welcome to come and have your morning coffee with us. The proceeds will help buy new carpeting for the church.

Klemme Service Station Business Changes Hands

WILBUR HAEFNER SELLS SERVICE STATION TO "PETE" KILGORE

New Proprietor Took Over Business On May 1st

A business change in Klemme took place the first of the week when Wilbur Haefner sold his service station business in Klemme to Lyndon "Pete" Kilgore, who is now in possession of his new business.

Mr. Haefner, who purchased the building and equipment from Verner Christie in November of 1948, retains ownership but leases it to Mr. Kilgore.

"Pete" Kilgore has been employed for several months as bookeeper at the Northern Lumber Company. He has spent a number of years in Klemme, is a graduate of the Klemme High School and for several years was employed as a printer at The Times.

Has Feed Grinding Business

Mr. Haefner for several months has also operated a portable feed grinding business, which he will continue to operate.

PUBLIC POLICY MEETING ATTENDED BY TWELVE FROM HANCOCK CO.

Twelve Hancock Co. people attended Public Policy meeting at Algona Friday night, April 27th. Wallace Ogg, Iowa State College ; Economist, discussed "Russia." The background of the people, the history of the county, the faith they have in Communist idea, the basic conflicts between our democracy and their communism. He also gave the group his ideas on the chances we have of working out a peaceful settlement of the conflicts.

The group were also privileged to have some first hand information on India presented by a native from India who is visiting the United States. He pointed out that the American people have a lot of selling to do in India if we expect the masses of the people in India to understand our democracy.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Senneff from Britt, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Schaper, Britt, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Bode, Corwith, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Moss, Garner; Mr. and Mrs. Verne C. Grau, Garner. They were accompanied by county extension home economist, Elsie Mae VanWert and county extension director, Paul Henderson.

Wrecked Car

W. W. Oliver, conservation official, thought he had found a way to beat the snowdrifts in the storm recently. He drove his auto down the Rock Island's tracks in an effort to reach the state fish hatchery at Spirit Lake. His car stalled and was bumbed off the tracks by a locomotive snow plow.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS ARE REQUIRED TO PUBLISH NOTICES

IPA, Des Moines—Prior to its adjournment, the 54th General Assembly focused its attention upon public officials who refuse to publish information which the law says shall be published.

A new law makes it a misdemeanor for any city, school or county official to refuse to publish required notices of reports, proceedings, budget estimates, financial statements or similar notices, with a penalty of not more than $100 fine, or 30 days in jail, for each such offense.

City clerks, however, face a severer penalty. A recommendation of the municipal code study revision, which has now been incorporated into law, makes failure by a city clerk to publish council proceedings a full misdemeanor, which carries a penalty of up to a year in jail or $500 fine, or both. The new city and town laws give more "home rule" to city administrations and the legislature felt that in giving city governments more latitude, it should insist upon full information being given the public.

Reports of many instances over the state of officials withholding such information from the public, led to legislative action.

What Is Greatness?

Lesson for May 6, 1951

WHAT is a great man? Some men have been called great who were not so; they were only prominent. Hitler, for example, was certainly prominent enough; but he was not great. Men can truly be called great for various good reasons. Some may be artists, some may be soldiers, others statesmen or prophets. Once in a while a man is born who is great in more ways than one.

Dr. Foreman

David the Ideal King

SUCH a man was David, King of Israel and one of the world's most famous men. The United Kingdom of Israel had a short history, only three kings reigning over it—Saul, David and Solomon. Of the three, David was by all odds the greatest man and greatest king.

Neither Saul nor Solomon was capable of holding for a lifetime to a high ideal. Neither was capable of whole-hearted devotion to God. Neither one could gain and hold the loyalty of the nation.

It was only David who could do these things. It is no accident that forever after, when a Hebrew thought of the ideal king, he would think neither of Israel's first king nor of the wealthiest, but of David the best and most beloved.

Military Genius

DAVID was great, in part because of his power in battle. What no one since Joshua had been able to do, David did: he welded the quarreling, jealous, weak tribes of Israel into a 'single sword." The times called for military genius, and David had it. He gave Israel the military might that was essential for their peace and prosperity.

So, often since David's time, there have been great soldiers who have used their military genius not for conquest in itself but in order to win some place in the sun for peace-loving nations. One thinks of Charles Martel, who saved Europe from barbarian conquest; of William of Orange who set the Dutch free from Spanish tyranny; of Washington, "father" of a great nation; and of many others.

The great soldiers of history have been more than professionally skilled and successful killers of men; they have been like David, men whose skill was used to preserve nations, not to destroy them.

Lovable Leadership

IN OUR times Hitler brought the word "Leader" under a shadow, because his leadership was in the wrong direction But there is such a thing as noble and wise leadership, and David had this quality in a high degree.

It is true, success has something to do with it. Men will flock to a winner who would have nothing to do with him if he were a loser. But still it is a fact that most of the world's great leaders who have come up from obscurity, as David did, have arisen at the head of groups of devoted men who have followed them loyally through the darkest times.

So it was with David. During his years as leader of the "underground" (literally so, since for some time his headquarters were in a great limestone cave), he developed the hard core of the army he commanded at a later time, a core of men who would rather lose with David than win against him.

Leader in Faith

DAVID had yet another quality of greatness, and for this he is perhaps best remembered. He was a man of deep religion. But religion for him was not merely a personal matter; he carried his faith into public life, he made his faith contagious. He did his best to make faith in God central, as it had never been, in the life of his nation.

Religion for him was not a stick with which to beat other people about the head, but a rod and staff to lean upon. It was not a secret locked in his own heart but something he desired to share with all his people. It was not a device to keep his subjects contented; it was an acid test for his own life.

And though he sometimes slipped and terribly fell, he could always rise again, for his religion gave him that rarest of all qualities in great men: humility before God and man.

"This New Dry Yeast is the best in all my cooking experience"

Huron Grandmother Wins 3 Cooking Awards at 1950 South Dakota State Fair

Young granddaughter Barbara admires three of the many blue ribbons won by Mrs. John H. Venables. An old hand at winning prizes in cooking contests, Mrs. Venables took her 3 most recent awards at the 1950 South Dakota State Fair.

Mrs. Venables had plenty of cooking experience while bringing up a family of seven children . . . no wonder she's a prize-winning cook today! Like so many other prize winners, she depends on Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast. "It's the fastest I've found," says Mrs. Venables. "Fast rising . . . and fast dissolving, too! This New Dry Yeast gives me grand results!"

It's true! Yeast-raised treats are delicious and nourishing. Nothing can top their rich flavor—nothing makes more of a hit with the menfolk. When you bake at home—use yeast—Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast. It's the best ever . . . easier to use, faster dissolving. Buy a supply soon—when you bake at home, delight your family with yeast-raised goodies.

Diamond Greats Waiting In Wings

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE COMPLAINT has come in from old-timers, who knew their stars, that certain players must soon be taken into the Big Hall, or be left out for good. There are many names on the list that Bob Quinn has ready for consideration. Many of these will never get in as they lived and played too long ago to be recalled by most of today's voters. But certainly in this list such names as Al Harry Simmons and Chief Charles Albert Bender shouldn't be overlooked.

Grantland Rice

Al Simmons' lifetime big-league average was around .334, among the highest in the game. This was over a long period of time. Simmons has known years at .392, .390 and .384, up in Ty Cobb's figures.

Al Simmons was the greatest outfielder Connie Mack ever had on his nine pennant-winning teams. He was a great ballplayer, with a clean personal record.

In the case of Bender, the Chippewa Chief, he was one of the great pitchers of the game.

Many years ago, before Lefty Grove came along, Connie Mack told me that he would rather have Bender pitch a million-dollar game than any pitcher he had ever had on his team. The Chief was a great competitor. I knew him as far back as 1905, the year he shut out the Giants in a world series game.

Simmons and Bender certainly belong. So does Bill Dickey, one of the game's greatest catchers, coupled with Mickey Cochrane at the top.

Among those still playing who will have to be taken in later are Joe DiMaggio, Stan Musial and Ted Williams. There may be others, but these three are certain to get strong support. And what about Hank Greenberg? Or Dizzy Dean?

However, Bob Quinn, now master of the Hall, is worried over many others he believes should be considered before time runs out. There is a definite movement under way to place the name of the late Dr Hyland of St. Louis on the honorable mention list. Dr. Hyland gave a big part of a fine career to ballplayers and he is sure to get stout backing in this line.

A Tough Query

"Why is it," a fan asks, "that we had better hitting with the old and deader ball than we have with the lively or rabbit ball? Check back on this. You'll find that before the livelier ball came in, the game had a long list of .400 hitters. I mean Cobb, Sisler, Hornsby, Jackson, Lajoie, Delehanty, etc. The last two .400 hitters I recall were Bill Terry and Ted Williams. We haven't had a .400 hitter or even a .390 hitter in years."

The answer to this is fairly simple. When Babe Ruth began to pour his home runs over the outlying fences and walls, practically every young hitter shifted his grip to the end of the bat and took a full cut.

Cobb and most of the other .400 hitters had controlled swings. Cobbs' hands were well apart. He was able to keep his bat on the ball. Ruth struck out oftener than any other noted hitter.

"The Babe has changed the game," Cobb said years ago. "Baseball now is a game of power, more than skill. There was no use swinging full against the ball we had But at least you could place your hits."

More than a few observers used to say that Babe could have passed 400 by shortening his swing, bringing it under better control. But this is something you can't prove. A home run was the only dish Babe cared for. Except on rare occasions he took his full cut. The same is true of Ted Williams, who by hitting to all fields might reach the .400 mark again.

A Heavy Jolt

This recent New York basketball scandal hit all college sports a harder jolt than anyone seems to know.

It is generally understood, whether rightly or wrongly, that the New York explosion was only a small part of what was happening over the map.

I have also heard more than a few also wonder if the same thing wasn't happening or could happen in college football. It could easily, if not closely watched.

Football's $300,000 and $400,000 gates for single games is far beyond what the earlier educators looked for.

When numberless football players help to run a season's cost up to $250,000, you get part of the answer. There are more than a few people today who insist that if a college plays to 60,000, 70,000 and 95,000 fans per game, the football player should get his share.

Don't think that many a football player is thinking differently. He's human, too.

Basketball would be much better off if all games were played in college surroundings. This is no fault of Madison Square Garden officials. It is the price the game pays for being too highly spotlighted.

Increased Taxes Urged

THE Committee for Economic Development, a business organization long regarded as sound and eminently fair in its outlook on governmental affairs, has submitted a tax program for the congress which calls for a reduction of $6 billion in the 1951-52 federal budget and $10 billion pay-as-you-go tax increase.

In carrying out this program the committee makes the following recommendations: (1) an additional 5 per cent tax on taxable income after present exemptions and the present tax, (2) a corporate profits tax which would bring the combined income tax rates on profits in excess of $25,000 to 50 per cent as compared to the present 47 per cent; (3) an increase in the manufacturers excise tax on automobiles to 20 per cent from the present 7 per cent, and on refrigerators, television sets and other consumer mechanical durable goods to 25 per cent from the present 10 per cent, an increase in the present federal excises on alcoholic beverages, tobacco and gasoline; a new excise of 5 per cent retail sales on items not now subject to federal excises, excluding food, housing, fuel utilities, and certain other items difficult to tax. The main categories subject to tax would be clothing and household furnishings; (4) a number of other tax revisions to increase revenue including taxation on interest of future issues of state and local securities, collection at sources of individual income tax on dividends and taxation of cooperative businesses.

The committee stressed the need for quick action on taxes and warned that the nation faces a shift from a surplus in fiscal 1951 to a deficit estimated in the budget at $13 billion in 1952.

Farm Net Income Down

As a matter of fact, all the statistics, of both the departments of labor and agriculture show that farm net income in 1950 reached a low of approximately $5 billion under 1947, about a billion under 1949 and 3½ billion dollars less than 1948. The percapita income of farmers also shows a tremendous decrease as compared to incomes of the city folks. In the face of over-all increase in national income from $209 billion in 1949 to $215 billion in 1950, the net farm income dropped to $13 billion, or a billion dollars under 1949 A report of Sen. Allen Ellender's committee on agriculture says in terms of dollars with a 1945 purchasing equivalent, farmers in 1950 had a net income of only $8.5 billion as compared to $12.8 billion five years earlier. But that would be true, of course, of any segment.

Farm Parity Fight Indicated

There is every indication that a bitter struggle will be waged in this congress for and against repeal of the farm price support legislation. And strangely enough, although all four major farm organizations here in Washington oppose it, the New York Farm Bureau Federation recently expressed its willingness to do away with the program in a full page ad in the Wall Street Journal.

The ad, however was sponsored by the committee for constitutional government, a more or less questionable outfit. But the move to abolish farm supports is said to be gaining adherents in the senate under the theory that the price support program and the parity system in some manner is causing high prices and aiding inflation.

Labor Opposes Sales Tax

Insofar as its $10 billion dollar tax increase is concerned, the committee may have hit on about the right sum, although the President asked for a $16 billion dollar increase. It is believed, however, that the chief executive is now reconciled to the fact that congress will not take that big a chunk out of the income at one stroke. But where the CED is in for strong opposition is its recommendations for a sales tax and a tax of the patronage dividends of cooperatives. Labor always has been traditionally opposed to a sales tax in principle, although the CED proposal exempts food, housing, fuel, etc. And farm organizations are equally opposed to the tax on coops.

DREW PEARSON

Marshall Works Hard

THE WASHINGTON rumor factory is probably the most active and the most irresponsible in the world. Tales cooked up in capitol hill lobbies, the drawing rooms of high society or in a taxicab conversation are spread as fact within a matter of hours.

The story that the late Franklin Roosevelt was insane and had to be chained to his bed at night was a good example. One confidential news agency believed it to the extent of relaying it to its many thousand customers.

Latest Washington canard is that Secretary of Defense George Marshall is in his dotage and unable to come to his office more than a half a week.

On the contrary, I can state that Marshall, though 70, is probably in better health than before his kidney operation, gets to the office before 8 a.m., has the papers read and sent out of his office by around 8:20 a.m., and puts in a full six-day week, working even on Saturday.

Marshall is alert, his memory is amazing, and he seems completely on the ball. Furthermore, Marshall has put the old uniform aside and is trying to run the defense department as a civilian. This writer had some skepticism about this phase of Marshall's new job when first appointed secretary of defense, but the skepticism appears not to have been justified.

Cattle-Feed Shortage

Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan had been at daggers' points over government farm policies for some time with the man he fired last week, Ralph Trigg, chief of production and marketing.

Main reason the ax fell was that the production of certain vital farm crops—chiefly cattle feed—is desperately behind our defense goals.

About 127,000,000 tons of grain will be needed to feed our greatly expanded population of beef cattle and hogs this year. However, farmers have planted or scheduled for planting only enough acres to produce 117,000,000 tons of feed grain.

Corn will be about 5,000,000 acres short of the 90,000,000-acre production goal fixed by Brannan—which Trigg was supposed to deliver.

At the same time we have 4,000,000 more beef cattle and over 5,000,000 more hogs to feed this year than in 1950. The pinch may not be felt this year because of feed-grain reserves. However, with these reserves exhausted, we will face a serious cutback in cattle production for defense needs—and therefore a meat shortage—in 1952.

Manpower shortage on the farms is one reason—perhaps the chief one—for the failure to divert more grasslands to planting feed grain.

Presidential Pique

President Truman's pique and an economist's desire to throw off his new deal label are back of the administration's tragic failure to clamp on price controls six months ago.

This never-told story starts last year when the elder statesman, Bernard Baruch, publicly came out for price controls.

Real truth was that the White House and national security resources board were at that very time toying with the same idea. But when Mr. Truman heard that the white-haired New York financier was for price controls, he reversed himself. The President had put Baruch on his "S.O.B. list" when Bernie refused to serve on a Democratic committee in the 1948 elections, and Truman didn't want to be in the position of coming out for price controls just after Baruch did.

Another factor was the strong opposition to controls by Leon Keyserling, then acting chairman of the council of economic advisers. Keyserling, a former department of agriculture economist and assistant to Sen. Bob Wagner, was being attacked by Right Winters on capitol hill as a wild-eyed radical.

Keyserling, an able economist but subject to human ambitions, wanted to be named chairman of the council and gain acceptance as a middle-of-the-road adviser. And at that time he told both the President and Stuart Symington, chairman of the resources board, that controls were "unworkable." In one consultation with Symington, Keyserling argued that high prices would, in fact, be helpful by draining off excess purchasing power and its competition for goods, services and materials needed for rearmament.

Washington Pipeline

Illustrating the Washington canard factory here is another I heard recently: "Drew Pearson has now sold out to Pan American airways. He got a free trip to Europe with Pan American and is now in their pocket." . . . Real fact is that I paid my way to Europe on Pan American as I have on every other airline. However, I do not hesitate to pay tribute to Pan American's efficient operation across the Atlantic.

HADACOL BRINGS RELIEF TO FOLKS SUFFERING STOMACH DISTRESS

Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn, Bloating When Due To Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin Deficiencies

Guy H. Housley, 641 14th St., San Diego, Calif.: "I am 40 years of age and have had a nervous stomach condition for quite some time. Couldn't eat hardly anything. Back in my home town, I bought a bottle of HADACOL and before the first bottle was gone, I could tell a difference. Then I came to San Diego and couldn't get it here. I sent back to Atlanta for it. Now, thank God, they have it on the market here and I have a supply in my house. Not only that, but I'm telling all my friends what HADACOL has done for me. I sleep well, eat anything I can get and feel wonderful. I could go on and on praising HADACOL, it's done so much for me."

Mrs. Minnie McCormick, Rt. 1, Wedowee, Ala.: "I am glad to tell what HADACOL has done for me. After taking one bottle of HADACOL, I went to work in the field, chopping cotton, doing all my housework, milking, washing and ironing. I have taken several bottles of HADACOL now. I can't ever praise HADACOL enough to cover all it has done for me when I had no appetite at all. Now I eat anything and have a good appetite and nothing bothers me. I never do without HADACOL now. My friends noticed my change, and now they are also HADACOL users, too. My 77-year-old daddy uses HADACOL. I want to say thanks to HADACOL and to the makers of HADACOL."

Here Is Wonderful News For You Folks Who Suffer From Stomach disturbances (indigestion, gas, heartburn, "sour risings" after meals) because your system lacks Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, important elements contained in HADACOL.

With today's great HADACOL you can actually relieve the cause of such stomach disturbances caused by these deficiencies. A marked improvement is often noticed within a few days' time. And continued use of HADACOL not only gives continuous relief, but helps prevent such distress from coming back. That's the kind of product you want—the kind you should buy—the kind you should start taking now.

Anyone would be very foolish indeed to be satisfied with symptomatic relief, when HADACOL makes it possible to relieve the cause of this stomach distress due to such deficiencies. Know the joy of eating the foods you like without suffering gas pains, heartburn and indigestion afterward!

How HADACOL Works

HADACOL not only supplies weak, run-down, deficient systems with extra quantities of Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin but also beneficial amounts of Calcium and Phosphorus—elements so necessary to help maintain good health.

And these Vitamins and Minerals come in special liquid form so that they can be easily and quickly absorbed and assimilated in the blood—ready to go right to work at once. HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these elements throughout your body.

Start taking HADACOL at once. HADACOL costs only a small amount a day. Trial size bottle, $1.25. Large family economy size, $3.50. Sold on a strict money-back guarantee. If your dealer does not sell HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana.

Mrs. W. H. Morton, Route 1, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "HADACOL has helped me so much I feel I have to write about it. Before I started taking HADACOL, I had a very nervous stomach and couldn't eat. So I heard about HADACOL. I got a bottle to try and began to feel better and could eat anything I wanted to. I feel so much better now. I am always telling my friends how HADACOL has helped me. And I just can't think of enough to say about HADACOL and what it has done for me. I am 28 years old and a steady user of HADACOL. I have been taking HADACOL for about a year."

Mrs. John A. Feight, Jr., of Route 1, Bedford, Pennsylvania: "Anything I ate made my stomach ache and churn all night. My food never seemed to get digested and therefore I would wake frequently in the night with pains. I would be nervous and think over the day's nerve-racking experiences. Every little thing irritated me. I couldn't stand children around me. They made me nervous. I would holler at my two-year-old daughter, Vickie, for nothing at all. Since taking HADACOL all my nausea and nervousness have passed away. All I can say for HADACOL is that it's made me see that this is a beautiful world after all. I'm 20 years old and am a housewife. I really do feel as great as I look in the photograph."

RABIES REPORTED TO BE INCREASING

Dogs And Wild Animals Suck As Skunks Blamed

Because rabies is increasing every month throughout Iowa and neighboring states Dr. John Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College, outlines for Iowans a 5-point program to control the dreaded disease.

Rabies is a serious disease of people as well as animals, Herrick points out. He puts the blame for its spread on dogs and wild animals such as skunks, civet cats and foxes.

Six cases of rabid cattle were recently observed in eastern Iowa. From many other points in the state have come reports of rabid dogs, skunks and other wildlife.

Beware of Strange Acting

To folks who see strange acting skunks or other wild animals wandering around farm yards during daylight hours, Herrick has this advice: "Beware of strange acting wild animals at any season of the year; they might be rabid."

If bitten, he urges consulting your physician immediately for treatment. If treatment is delayed too long, rabies is incurable. Dogs, livestock, or wild animals that have bitten an individual should not be killed but confined and kept under observation by a veterinarian to determine if the animal is rabid.

Herrick warns children to avoid all strange acting dogs and wild animals while walking in fields or to and from school.

To Control Disease

The 5-point program on how to control rabies is as follows:

1. Put into effect an extensive clean up program to eradicate wild, stray dogs and wild animals that are suspected of carrying rabies.

2. Cities and towns should enforce regulations calling for the vaccination of all dogs and cats against rabies, and the destruction of all those not vaccinated.

3. All dogs and cats on farms should be vaccinated against rabies annually.

4. Beware of all strange acting animals and in no way handle them, to avoid the possibility of being bitten. Report cases of strange acting animals to a veterinarian.

5 Consult with conservation officials about removing dens of skunks, foxes or other wild animals that are suspected of being reservoirs of infection.

Why Six?

In the present day two cylinder tractor there is one power stroke for each time the flywheel turns. In the four cylinder tractor there are two, and in the six cylinder tractor, such as Oliver "77" and "88", there are three power strokes for each revolution.

This gives Smoother Power for two reasons. First, more power strokes give a pull instead of a jerk; second, a six cylinder engine is balanced within itself to give less vibration at all speeds. This means that Oliver can make smaller gears last longer. It also means that money saved in gears etc. can be used in a better engine.

It all adds up to the fact that OLIVER, in the New Line Tractors, over a period of years of use, gives more horse-power output per dollar (fuel, oil and repairs included) than any company in the business today. The first cost is also less.

We believe we can prove what we say. Ask us for a demonstration on your farm.

Automobile dealers of Hancock County were enlisted today in a special voluntary inspection campaign for automobiles and trucks.

Throughout the month of May, dealers participating in the drive will issue windshield stickers to cars which are inspected for safety and either found or placed in safe condition.

The campaign is sponsored by the Iowa Automobile Dealers Association in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress, the State Department of Public Safety, and national organizations interested in accident prevention.

Slogans of the program are: "Good drivers Drive Safe Cars" and "Check Your Car—Check Accidents."

Vehicle owners are urged to stop at any cooperating dealer's garage for a check-up on the safe operating condition of brakes, headlights, rear lights, steering, tires, exhaust system, glass, windshield wipers, rear view mirror and horn.

Cars that check "OK" will receive stickers immediately. Others will qualify after the necessary repairs are made.

Explaining the purpose of the campaign, Norman Dunlap of Ames, Safety Chairman of the Iowa Automobile Association said:

"Too many accidents are caused by unsafe vehicles. Such cars were a factor in 12 per cent, or about 3,300, of the fatal traffic accidents in this country last year. About one out of three cars on the streets has some obvious and dangerous defect.

"Streets and highways soon will be teeming with pedestrians and motorists taking advantages of fine weather, starting vacations, and observing holidays.

"Thus, this is the logical month for getting one's car in good mechanical condition. The automobile owners who take this precaution now are insuring a safe summer for themselves, their loved ones, and their neighbors."

Approved windshield stickers issued by dealers say: "This Car Checked for Summer Safety 1951." They are green and yellow, and shaped like a stop sign. On the reverse side is the slogan, "Drive a Safe Car Safely."

7,000-Year-Old Spear Discovered In Nevada Cache

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—Anthropologists from the University of California have uncovered implements fashioned by primitive man in about 5,000 B. C., the most ancient reported so far in the western hemisphere.

Students working under Robert F. Heizer, associate professor of anthropology, discovered the prehistoric cache in a dry dock shelter at the base of an overhanging cliff near Lovelock, Nevada.

The "carbon 14" method was used to determine the age of wooden spear shafts buried under deposits of rock, dust and bat guano. Their age was fixed at 7,300 to 9,000 years old.

In the upper layers at the excavation site, the archeologists found basket and arrow fragments of relatively recent origin, dating back from about 2,500 years.

Lake gravels at the bottom of the site were estimated to be 25,000 years old.

From these findings and a survey of other sites in the area, scientists now believe that most of western Nevada was once covered by a fresh glacial lake about 600 feet deep.

Heizer said the area was first occupied by man between 7,000 and 9,000 years ago after the lake had receded and then was abandoned because of a dry weather cycle.

The evidence shows that the section was not occupied again until 2,500 or 3,000 years ago, Heizer said. He said the inhabitants who lived in the area during the later period were ancestors of the Piaute indians, but the identity of the earliest group was not known.

Foe of Meters, She Scorns $1 Fine for 6-Hour 'Term'

ITHACA, N. Y.—Mrs. T. R. Briggs, wife of a Cornell university chemistry professor, objects to feeding a parking meter. As a result she was sentenced to a six-hour jail term.

Mrs. Briggs objected in police court to paying a "double tax". She told Judge Edward J. Casey that as a taxpayer she already had paid once for use of city streets and that the city's action in charging her again through parking meters constituted a double tax.

"It serves my conscience better to do it this way," Mrs. Briggs said as she marched off to the brig.

Science Discovers Oldest Known Village in World

CHICAGO, Ill.—Science has discovered the oldest known village site in the world.

It is a block square village site in northeastern Iraq that is little more than a mound of dirt—called Jarmo. Chicago scientists, who tested samples from the village on their atomic calendar report it is about 7,000 years old—the oldest known village site.

An expedition from the University of Chicago's oriental institute will go there this winter to search for evidence of "the first great economic revolution in human history."

Robert J. Braidwood, associate professor of old world pre-history and anthropology, said diggers expect to find evidence of town planning—the first row houses and walls known to history.

A representative of the Iran government stumbled onto the site in 1946. Scientists made a preliminary examination of the site three years ago, finding wheat and barley grains, utensils for grinding them, flint tools and snail shells.

Chemical analysis of the amount of radioactive carbon 14 in the snail shells fixed the age of the site. All living things absorb radioactive carbon from the atmosphere in the growing and living process. This halts when the plant or creature dies and the carbon 14 then starts losing its radioactivity at a known rate.

Cleveland Industrial Firm Tells Grads How to Get Job

CLEVELAND, O.—For the June graduate seeking a white collar job, a Cleveland firm has compiled its findings and advice in a book called "Getting the Right Job" from observing thousands of applicants over the years.

Graduates are advised:

Never address the interviewer by his first name unless he asks you to.

Go alone.

Take a bath beforehand.

Don't chew gum.

Smile as you enter the office, give your first name distinctly and shake hands firmly.

Don't hang up your hat and coat. Let the company decide if you're going to stay awhile.

Don't beg for a position.

Be poised and relaxed.

The book says a deep breath taken before going in for the interview often calms the nerves.

Women are cautioned to avoid wearing gaudy lipstick, fancy shoes, too much perfume or crooked hose seams.

Men, the book says, should wear a pressed suit, a hat, garters and a fresh haircut.

FERTILIZER HELPS CORN MATURE EARLY

Fertilizer may make the difference between soft corn and a mature corn crop in season similar to Iowa's 1950 season.

Percent of moisture in corn on fertilized plots at picking time last fall was as much as 9 percent lower than on unfertilized plots, according to moisture determinations made by the Iowa Experiment Station.

Where the corn was killed by frost before it was fully mature, the fertilizer treatments increased the shelling percentage by as much as 5 percent.

Lloyd Dumenil, Iowa State College agronomist, reports that in general, fertilizer applied in the hill or row at planting time as a starter advanced corn maturity more than plow-under treatments. However, plowed-under phosphate and the phosphorus in starter fertilizer were the most outstanding in lowering moisture content.

FEWER EARLY PIGS THIS SPRING THAN IN 1950

There are fewer early spring pigs on Iowa farms than there were in 1950, accoring to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

He reports that farrowings in the state between Dec. 1 and the end of March were nearly 5 percent below those during the same period a year earlier. However, the drop was all in March pigs, since litters farrowed before March 1 were running ahead of last year's figure.

Kutish says this doesn't mean fewer total spring litters than were planned by Iowa farmers last fall, because the bulk of Iowa pigs come in April and May. But it does mean there won't be as many pigs on the market next August and September as there were in 1950.

Bad weather this year cut down the number of pigs saved per litter and this may also tend to reduce the number of early pigs coming to market next fall, the economist adds.

MARTHA CIRCLE HAS BIRTHDAY PARTY

Martha Circle was entertained at the home of Mrs. Dale Brede on Wednesday, April 25, with Mrs. Harlow Helps, assisting.

Mrs. Gibbs opened the meeting with a poem by Phillip Brooks.

Much of the time was spent in planning a May Breakfast to be held May 9th at the church dining room. We will hold a white elephant sale at the same place.

Mrs. Roy Arnold baked and decorated the Birthday Cake for the party, honoring the birthdays of all members of Martha Circle. By paying a penny a year, the ladies were entitled to a piece of the cake. The The only secret a woman can keep is her age, so we did not find out individual ages, but the total years amounted to 815.

Thirteen members, one visitor and three children were present.

EXAMINE SEPTIC TANK FOR NEED OF CLEANING

Spring and early summer is the time to inspect the septic tank and clean it if necessary. Carroll Worlan, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, says cleaning in the spring will give the bacteria which digest the solids a chance to multiply during the hot summer months. The tank will then be ready for efficient operation during the winter.

A hoe or other tool can be used to inspect the tank. It should be cleaned if it is over one-third full of sludge. This is the material that settles out of the sewage and becomes rather hard in the bottom of the tank. It can be removed with a bucket, sludge pump or similar equipment. Some caution should be taken when the septic tank is opened as it may contain dangerous gases.

Worlan says the best method to dispose of the sludge is to bury it 10 to 15 feet from the tank It has no value as fertilizer.

Starters for septic tanks are not necessary. Faster bacterial action will occur, however, if a bucket or scoop full of sludge is left in the tank. Ordinary barnyard manure will speed the process in new tanks. Yeast and similar "starters" have little or no value for this purpose.

The tank should not be allowed to become too full of sludge as it may carry out through the drainage pipe and ruin the disposal field. An annual inspection is advisable to prevent this.

CONTOUR FARMING CUTS SOIL LOSSES

It Also Has Increased Yields Of Crops Grown

Erosion problems on Iowa's sloping soil will increase with the expanding acreages of intertilled crops to meet our country's needs. Every effort should be made to combat the soil losses these increased acres of row crops will create, says Marvin Anderson, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

He says contour farming is one of the best ways of reducing soil losses. It can be put into practice with a minimum of time and effort.

Farming on the contour will cut soil losses in one-half as compared to up and down hill farming, according to reports from the Soil Conservation Service Research Section and the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station. It will also increase yields. Corn yields over a period of several years have been increased an average of 7.4 bushels per acre by contour farming, and soybean yields have have been increased 2.7 bushels per acre.

Takes Less Power

Other advantages from contour farming include reduced power costs from farming on the level and an increase in the length of rows.

Most Iowa and on which the slope is greater than 2 or 3 percent will be benefited by contouring when planted to cultivated crops. The effectiveness will depend somewhat on the type of soil. It is most effective on permeable soils such as are found in western or east central Iowa.

Contouring on soils that are less permeable and inclined to be wet may sometimes make this condition worse during a wet year. However, benefits derived from contouring in saving soil may be of more importance in the long run than the occasional wet conditions. Further, the excessive wetness in a few of these soils can be lessened by allowing a slight grade to the contour or guide line. Using legume meadows in the rotation will also improve soil structure and tilth.

Can Get Help

Anderson reports that 1 and three-quarters million acres of land are now being contoured in Iowa. The minimum need is for three to four times that amount.

Farmers interested in contour farming can usually find assistance close at hand. There are usually some neighbors in the vicinity who are already practicing it, and they can give valuable advice. Further assistance can be obtained from the county extension director or the soil conservation district technician. They can give advice on laying guide lines for starting the contours.

Anderson points out that it is not necessary, although it is desirable, to plow on the contour ahead of planting. It is more important to plant and grow the crops on the contour.

PLAN SHEETS FOR FARROWING JACKETS AVAILABLE

Farrowing jackets are now being used successfully at farrowing time to save little pigs from being crushed, according to Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson. He says they are relatively easy to construct with materials available on the farm.

The jackets are constructed on the order of a stall with the bottom about 10 inches from the floor allowing the pigs to nurse. The sow is placed in them and the 12 inch spaces on either side of the jacket allow the pigs to nurse from both sides.

Henderson has plans available for these jackets from the Iowa State College Extension Service. They may be obtained by writing to him or dropping in at the office and picking them up.

Heat lamps may be suspended on either side of the jackets to keep the pigs warm and on cold nights a canvas cover may be thrown over the top. It is advisable to leave the sows in these jackets until the pigs are 2 or 3 days old. This will get them by the greatest danger period from crushing and they may then be removed to a regular farrowing pen. If jackets are to be used longer, arrangements should be made to let the sows out for feeding and exercise in the alleys or outside the building.

PROTECT YOUR OATS FROM SMUT DAMAGE

Certain smuts that formerly caused considerable losses in oats and barley can now be completely controlled by chemical treatment of seed before planting.

Paul Henderson, county extension director, points out that a chemical such as Ceresan destroys the smut spores that cling to the seed and which otherwise would attack the young seedling. Most farmers are well acquainted with what smut does to yield. In addition, Henderson points out that smut, such as shown on oats on the left in the picture and covered smut on barley on the right, will blow to healthy seed and carry the disease to next year's crop. Brown loose smut of barley requires hot water seed treatment.

In addition to controlling smuts on oats and barley, chemical treatment effectively reduces seed rot in the soil, thereby insuring stands of more vigorous seedlings.

Iowa State College tests made over the past 11 years show a 3.2 bushel per acre increase in oat yields as a result of treating seed. Henderson thinks the few cents per bushel cost of treating is a mighty good investment.

Elevators or other seed cleaning and treating establishments in the county will do the job for a small charge per bushel It's not too late to have seed treated. If you have the proper equipment, you can do your own cleaning and treating. Henderson will be glad to supply additional information on the operation.

KLEMME SHOE REPAIR

PLASTIC HOSE IS PROVING VALUABLE

Can Replace Galvanized Water Pipes On Farms

Easily portable plastic tubing or hose is being suggested this spring by Iowa State College agricultural engineers as a means of getting water out to temporary waterers for livestock on pasture and for poultry on range.

The plastic material is more durable than garden hose and much more portable than galvanized steel pipe. Since it is expected to be more readily available this spring than galvanized pipe, Erwin Johnson, agricultural engineer at the college, looks for the plastic tubing to solve watering problems for a good many livestock and poultry raisers.

Can Stand Freezing

The tubing or hose may be left on top of the ground or buried. Freezing won't damage it, although adaptors for connecting the hose to a waterer might not stand freezing. Sunlight and heat have little effect on it.

Johnson figures that the best bet is to leave it on top of the ground, if protected, where the tubing crosses farm roads. A good way is to lay it alongside a fence where it will be out of the way and shaded by grass growing along the fence row. It's much more portable when left on top of the ground and requires less labor for installing it than if buried in a furrow.

Time For Tenants

The plastic hose or tubing has special advantages for farm tenants. They can lay it down in the spring, roll it up in the fall and take it with them if they have to move.

The material comes in different diameter sizes with ½ or three-quarters inch most practical for farm use. The material can be cut to any length desired Joint and couplings are available as are adaptors for hooking onto waterers and water systems.

Made by several manufacturers, the tubing will withstand pressures up around 200 pounds per square inch, depending on the wall thickness, according to Johnson. Most farm water systems maintain around 40 pounds pressure.

Teacher Says 21 Most Dangerous Age for Drivers

CHICAGO—Prof. A. R. Lauer. director of a driving laboratory at Iowa State College laboratory, told the National Safety Council meeting in Chicago recently that men can drive better than women but they don't. The male is more skillful at the wheel of an automobile but the female seems to have more sense, and the man has more police tickets and more accidents.

Professor Lauer said his research project found that the most dangerous age for drivers is 21, and not the teen years. His study, aimed at finding better driver educational methods, was devoted as much to the differences of age groups as it was to the sexes as automobile operators.

Men Drive More

The difference in accident susceptibility between men and women was statistically small when considered in relation to miles driven, he said. About 75 per cent of all licensed drivers are men. They drive 90 per cent of total mileage and have 91 per cent of the accidents.

Professor Lauer found that women were better drivers than men in the ages 16 to 33, the men were better drivers than women from 33 to 40, and the women were better drivers from 41 to 53. Over the age of 55 the men have fewer accidents in a mileage basis.

The professor obtained his information by a sampling of 7,692 cases drawn from the Iowa drivers license files and subsequently polling by mail.

Conclusions Revealed

Here are some of his conclusions:

1. Women have better attitudes toward traffic ordinances than men.

2. Potential skill alone does not necessarily mean safe driving. In general men have more skill than women, but women between 17 and 28 have one-fourth fewer accidents for a given mileage than men of the same age group.

3. From the standpoint of safety and from an actuarial point of view, the male group from 20 to 24 comprises the worst offenders. Women drivers have fewer accidents than expected in this group.

4. Aggressiveness and lack of judgment on driving hazards seem to stand high as the cause of automobile accidents.

5. The index of accidents per 100,000 miles for men is highest at the age when they should be most skillful.

6. The incidence of accidents among men goes up significantly above the age of 65. Among women the dangerous age arrives about five years earlier.

Professor Lauer found that although, on a mileage basis, accidents experienced by men were only slightly more numerous than those experienced by women drivers, the severity of the accidents may be more important than the number.

Saucy Mouse Sits On Trap, Sets Trade Wheels Turning

LONDON, Eng.—Because of an impertinent mouse, a Birmingham industrial plant is in disgrace.

The saucy creature sat on a British made mousetrap, ate the cheese and scampered away. The trap didn't click.

The man in Port of Spain who purchased the trap was angry. He took it to the British trade commissioner at Trinidad and pounded the table.

The trade commissioner could not snap it with a pencil, so he sent the trap 6,000 miles by air mail to the board of trade in London. A civil servant worked all day to identify the manufacturer.

Then the trap went by post to the board of trade's Midland office. The regional technical officer couldn't make the trap snap, so he went with it to the factory.

The engineers were called into consultation. A wire wasn't bent just right. A touch of the pliers at the right spot was all that was needed. Directors of the mousetrap company decided to put the offending trap into a glass case, and the man in Trinidad gets a new one.

"Our first complaint," said the general manager of the firm, which exports 13,500 mousetraps a week.

German Youths Make Home In Vault of Bombed Bank

FRANKFURT, Germany — A steel safe of a former local bank has become home to three young Germans.

The bank was blasted to bits by allied bombs in 1944, but under the pile of burned rubble the safe was left intact. A young couple and a single friend found it and decided to make it their improvised home.

They had lived in parks and the railway station after coming to Frankfurt early in May. Their present home is 12 by 9 foot room 9 feet high.

"It took us a whole day's work to swing open the 500-pound steel door, so we could get in," said one of the refugees.

The door is left open all the time for air. A built-in gate of iron bars serves as door and window. A wooden ladder leads down to the rubble covered ground outside.

Hats Off This Week To— MRS. AMERICAN HOMEMAKER

This week marks the sixth National Home Demonstration Week set aside to honor the nation's homemakers, county home economists and state extension workers, who give freely of time, energy and themselves to build stronger, happier homes. Out of today's period of national emergency comes a renewed realization that strong, happy families reflect in everything America is and does.

This week Uncle Sam doffs his cap, and the rest of the nation following suit, to the women who make up the largest and one of the most essential groups of professional workers in the United States. Who are they? Why, the homemakers of our land, in particular those who have been participating in the home economics extension program in their communities. Their work is devoted to every phase of family life and their slogan is "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World."

In Iowa alone, 13,000 homemakers, volunteer leaders in their home counties, carried extension programs to more than 80,000 Iowa rural women. In addition, 4,284 volunteer 4-H leaders worked with 20,000 4-H club girls, and 101 leaders helped rural young people conduct their programs in homemaking and community living.

Let's take a look at what's happened in almost countless Iowa homes during the past year through the efforts of the state extension service and the homemakers they reach.

12,000 Improved Homes

More than 12,000 homemakers in 1949-50 made their homes more attractive, convenient and comfortable. Much of this work was made possible by the skills each individual homemaker gained in extension workshops and lessons. One of the big things that women wanted to know more about, aside from refinishing, remodeling and repairing furniture, was how to use color effectively in their homes.

As a result of this need, 5,400 homemakers in 18 counties were given specific help in understanding color and planning harmonious color schemes. Thousands of other women took part in tours of redecorated homes, to study the practical application of color harmony principals.

Iowa homemakers weren't only interested in home furnishing skills and redecorating problems, they wanted to know more about using their time and energy and household equipment. Through the help of the extension service more than 55,000 families solved various home management problems—all the way from saving steps in heir kitchens, to buymanship, to understanding legal matters applying to the home.

Clothing Construction

Homemakers in 83 counties asked for extension help in clothing construction, textiles and clothing buymanship, and in setting up more efficient sewing centers. Consequently more than 15,600 families were assisted with clothing construction problems and 9,500 others were coached on the care, renovation and remodeling of clothing.

Family health and nutrition were also emphasized last year, with 95 counties asking for a program dealing with various phases of meal planning, food buymanship, production and preservation. More than 25,190 families were assisted in improving their diets as a result, while 31,274 were taught better food preparation methods.

And many mothers recognized the whole interplay of family relationships to be most essential of all. Through extension workshops, discussion groups and publications written to their needs, 11,400 homemakers gained in an understanding of how to develop healthy, well adjusted children and build a happy, secure family life.

We were all very happy to have David Voigts as a visitor in our school room Monday morning. David was a student here last year but moved away in the spring.

On Wednesday morning, the 25th of April we were visitors of the creamery here in Klemme. Some of our children had never been fortunate enough to see the entire works, so they all were very much interested in it. We watched them bottle milk, and also watched the complete process of making the butter.

When we arrived back in school we decided maybe we should try and make some butter.

JoAnne Jacobs, Paige Patterson, Gordon Lassahn, Lynn Huenemann and Craig Wilson have almost completed their projects of drawing the different characters in Pinocchio. They are turning out very good.

We have begun our Mother's Day gifts in art class and today we finish our cards which will go with the presents.

If someone would just happen to visit our room at arithmetic time they might think they were entering an Indian camp for everyone is wearing an Indian head-band. Some have just the plain bands while others are carrying two or three feathers. Our class is divided into three tribes the Fox, Crow, and Souix. Those who get one hundred per cent on their arithmetic papers receive a colored paper feather. Those who receive the most feathers at the end of the week in their tribe becomes chief for the following week. The tribe that has the most feathers at the end of two weeks will be awarded a prize Those to be chief for their tribes this week are Cozette Lau for the Fox Tribe, Carol Ann Pavey for the Crow Tribe and Jerry Lee LaFavre for the Souix Tribe. The Fox Tribe is leading in the race for the prize.

We were very happy to have Mrs. Baack and Mrs. Priebe as visitors in our room this week.

Klemme Men Attended Annual Session Of Synod at Waukon

Rev. Vernon Jaberg and Raymond Barz, delegate, attended the 13th Annual Session of the Iowa Synod held at the Evangelical and Reformed Church at Waukon, Iowa the past week on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Rev. Jaberg served as on of the celebrants in the Communion Service on Tuesday evening. The sermon was given by Rev. Arthur Krueger, president elect of the Mission House College and Seminary.

EASIER TO CARE FOR SEVERAL SOWS TOGETHER

Most hog raisers find it hard work caring for sows and litters, in the opinion of E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at I wa State College. This is especially true when sows and pigs must be confined for considerable lengths of time.

Instead of giving each sow and litter individual care after pigs are 10 days to 2 weeks old, he suggests running 3 or 4 sows and litters of about the same age together. This practice will cut labor and time required at least in half, maybe more, without retarding the pigs.

In running sows together, Quaife recommends using one pen as a creep for the pigs. One heat lamp will care for the three or four litters. Most of Iowa's Master Swine Producers prefer rolled oats as a starting feed because pigs seem to take to it better. They will start to eat rolled oats when they are 10 days to 2 weeks old. Creep feeding puts on early gains, which are the cheapest gains, according to Quaife.

When pigs get to the growing-fattening stage, using larger selffeeders than most farmers use will help get around the scarce-help problem this summer. Quaife thinks a feeder such as the 18-foot long, 200-bushel size is the kind a hog raiser ought to have. Plans for such a feeder are available at the college.

A 200-bushel feeder will feed 100 pigs a month or more. One foot of feeder space will care for three to five growing pigs on pasture and about three in drylot. He thinks a lot of feeders are too short and don't provide enough feeder space in relation to their capacity.

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB NEWS

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Anna Ausborn on Wednesday, April 11, with roll call by telling what we planned for our garden. We had three visitors at club, Mildred Bunk, Mrs. Clarence Holmes and Maxine Matherson.

We decided to send $2.00 to the Cancer Fund.

Edith Kramer had several puzzles given to her and she is sending them to the Veterans hospital at Des Moines and some to Knoxville.

At our May meeting we are all to bring some cookies and Mildred Gruis will pack them and send them to the childrens hospital at Woodward, Iowa. We are also sending them $5.00 to buy fruit for the little folks. Wemkie Cavitt furnished the entertainment by having some interesting quiz games.

A lovely lunch was served by Anna Ausborn with Norma Albers as co-hostess. The May meeting will be at the home of Mae Blumer with Lois Schlichting as co-hostess.

AROUND IOWA

"Not Loaded"

A gun that "wasn't loaded" took the life of nine year old David Garland, at Aurora. The fatal accident occurred as David and his brother were playing with a .22 calibre rifle. He died in the ambulance as he was being rushed to Independence.

Trapped

When Joe Bechler, 21, lost control of his car at a railroad crossing in Sheldon, the car was upset and demolished and Joe was trapped inside for a full hour. A winch and cable were used to bend the frame enough for him to be released.

Wrong Number

A Chariton man was called to the phone about 3 a. m. recently by Dr. H. D. Jarvis, who told the man he had just become a father. His listener was amazed and went back to make sure his wife was still in bed, which she was. Wrong number.

Literary Dog

New London residents didn't get to read their Chicago Tribune one day last week. Shortly after the bundle of papers was unloaded from the train, a Dalmatian dog came along, picked up the bundle and made off with it.

Clothing Caused Death

When his clothes caught in the power take-off of a farm tractor, Ernest Thorson, 33, of Nevada was killed instantly on February 8. He was operating a hammer-mill when he slipped against the drive-shaft. Death was instantaneous.

Tots Die In Fire

Four Iowa children, all under five years of age, died when fire destroyed their home in Hardy last week. All were the children of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Vickroy and were alone in the house when the fire broke out as the mother was uptown getting groceries.

Killed By Electricity

As John Johnke, Harlan "ham radio operator," was demonstrating his radio set to two youngsters, he was electrocuted when he took hold of two wires leading into the set. The Harlan Fire Department applied artificial respiration, without success.

Saved From Fire

Quick thinking by ten year old Karlita Studer saved the lives of two younger sisters, when fire broke out in the Studer home at Iowa Falls. She led the youngsters out of the house, which was badly damaged in the blaze that followed.

Stopped

Rev. H. G. McCoy of Cherokee was puzzled when he was flagged down by police at LeMars recently. He had forgotten his brief-case and his wife had phoned the police there to flag him down and send him back home after it.

Spring

Some Iowans look for the robins as the first hargingers of spring but not the John Henneys, of Denison. This year, as for the past ten years, a family of purple martins arrived to take up housekeeping in the Henney bird-house. They usually arrive by April 17.

Dies

The Elkport-Garber communities, near Elkader, lost one of their oldest citizens recently in the death of Dr. Frank Kriebs, 91. Dr. Kriebs had been a practicing physician there for more than 70 years, delivering over 3,000 babies during his life-time.

Baby Pig Disease

For the past two years a relatively new disease of baby pigs has been encountered in various areas of Kansas. The disease has been diagnosed as infectious gastro-enteritis of pigs. Sows may also be affected. The disease usually makes its appearance within a few hours to a few days after farrowing. Sows go off feed, off milk production, and scour. Recovery occurs within a few days but they remain off milk production. Newborn pigs go off feed, the hair becomes rough, they scour and may or may not shiver. Death usually follows in a few hours. To date no preventive immunization or curative treatment has been found. The best method of prevention seems to be in the wide separation of sows some weeks before farrowing and following farrowing. However, this is debatable.

Human Hair Plays Important Part In Crime Detection

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Dr. Leon A. Hausman, professor of zoology at New Jersey College for Women, has become a leading figure in criminology through his knowledge of human hair.

In 1928 Dr. Hausman's testimony in a hit and run case set a precedent in American criminal jurisprudence. It marked the first time a court ever had allowed the identification of a human being to be based completely on the evidence of a single particle of hair.

Dr. Hausman explained that the hair fragment in question, found on the fender of a hit and run automobile, possessed a peculiar structural design under the microscope which made identification certain.

In anothe case, Dr. Hausman's research helped to right a miscarriage of justice in Oklahoma. His microscopic studies of hair found in the room of a murdered woman proved the man accused of the crime was innocent. He was freed after spending two years in prison.

Dr. Hausman's testimony isn't always a matter of life and death. Once he proved that a woman was underestimating the value of a fur coat to evade payment of an inheritance tax. Under the professor's microscope, the garment turned out to be a $6,500 natural mink instead of the $1,000 dyed mink its owner claimed it to be.

Dr. Hausman, who has devoted more than 30 years to the study of human and animal hair structure, has solved problems for government agencies, individuals, industries and museums as well as police.

He says hair is not as definite an identification as fingerprints, but "sometimes criminals who don't leave prints around leave hair."

Pennsylvania Discovers Draft Records of 1777

HARRISBURG, Pa.—Records of what is believed to be the nation's first draft were found recently by state officials digging into old state records.

Auditor General Weldon B. Heyburn said the records are contained in a book entitled "Appeals," dated July 2, 1777, covering mostly Philadelphia draft cases.

The book, of handmade paper and bound in cardboard, contains, in the original handwriting of the appeal agents, the action taken on men who were drafted into the Pennsylvania militia during the Revolutionary War.

Heyburn said draft exemptions in those days were for much the same reasons as today. He said, however, there was one notable exception in draft policy. Men called up for duty could hire substitutes.

Soviet Medical Paper Says 26 Million Americans Ill

MOSCOW, USSR — The Soviet newspaper Medical Worker reports Americans are in a bad way. According to the newspaper 26 million Americans are chronically ill.

The newspaper also reports that eight million Americans are insane; that each year two million Americans lose their ability to work because of accidents; that 18 million are partly or completely unemployed, and that the ordinary farmer or worker rarely is able to undertake treatment to cure a disease because of the expense of medical assistance and medicines.

About 260,000 families are homeless in New York alone, the newspaper said, and claimed the cost of a week stay in the average American hospital exceeds by two or three times the average monthly wage of the average American worker. On top of this, the newspaper charged hospital treatment is seldom possible for the average American. To top its fantastic claims, the paper said that only a small percentage of those ill with diabetes in the United States are able to procure insulin. The drug, the newspaper explained, is in the hands of monopolies which intentionally restrict production to small proportions to get an exorbitant price for the product.

The article concludes: "The exclusively low level of public health in the United States is an expression of the general fate of capitalism, under which even poverty and illness are a source of enrichment of a small group of capitalists."

Arrested 'Graduate' Tells Of Safe-Cracker's School

CADILLAC, Mich.—Dale Line, 22, of Evart, Mich., recently arrested for cracking a safe containing $800 in cash and bonds, told police a school for safe-crackers, complete with tuition and movies on how to blow safes, is operated in Chicago.

The ill-starred "graduate" said pupils paid $2.50 a lecture, illustrated with moving pictures. He refused, however, to tell who operated the school or where it was located.

Chicago police said Line told them that whenever anyone in Chicago can't open a certain type of safe, there is a telephone number to call and an expert will take the job for half the proceeds.

Line said he met his "professor" in a Chicago bar, and after telling the man that he was an ex-convict, the safe expert invited him to become a pupil.

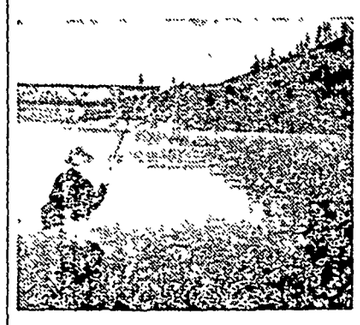
THIRSTY LAND

5,000,000 Acres of Farm Lands Are Irrigated in Western U.S.

(This is the second of two articles on California's world-famous Central Valley irrigation project.)

The prime objective of the Central Valley project is an equalization of the fabulous agriculture empire's water resources between the surplus area of the north and the water-deficient southern two-thirds, providing for irrigation of more than one million acres of fertile farm lands.

This is how it was worked out. Surplus waters of the northern valley are conserved behind Shasta dam on the upper Sacramento river, as well as Folsom dam, under construction on the American river, and released as needed downstream.



Reclamation projects provide additional recreational features for thousands of Californians. Bass and trout fishing are especially good in Shasta Lake.

The water is picked up by the Delta Cross Channel and flows south to the Tracy Pumping Plant on the rim of Central Valley's western foothills. There the water is lifted 200 feet into the Delta-Mendota Canal, to flow another 120 miles south to Mendota pool on the San Joaquin river.

At this point the imported northern supply takes over the job formerly done by the San Joaquin river. By this exchange, San Joaquin waters can be retained behind Friant dam and diverted still further south by the 153-mile Friant-Kern Canal for irrigation use in the c r i t i c a l l y water-deficient areas along the east side of the San Joaquin valley as far down as Bakersfield.

At the Friant dam another canal moves water 37 miles north for irrigation purposes in Madera county.

The initial features of the project, which will be completed and in operation this July, will cost an estimated $400,000,000, of which 87 per cent will be repaid through sale of water and power developed by the project over a sixty year period. The remaining 13 per cent is charged to non-reimbursable items such as flood control.

ALTHOUGH THIS is a vast project, it is only one small part of the nation's reclamation program that has already proved to be a fruitful source of new wealth from the development of the west's great natural resources.

Reclamation opens new opportunities for people of this nation to build new farms, new homes, new industries and new business establishments in our best and oldest American tradition.

Today some 5,000,000 acres of arid and semiarid land are irrigated with crops produced on these lands averaging in excess of $500,000,000 per year in value.

Since the first reclamation project was started in 1903, the west has been provided with 95 dams with combined storage capacity of 82,780,000 acre-feet of water; 35 power plants with more than 3,000,000 kilowatts capacity; 16,000 miles of irrigation canals; 3,000 miles of electric transmission lines.

In return, reclamation projects have produced $500,000,000 worth of crops per year; $33,000,000 in power revenues; $2,000,000,000 in federal taxes between 1916 and 1949; and $1,500,000,000 which is spent in every section of the United States each year.

This is the brief story of this nation's attempt to bring water to thirsty land, a story that has been repeated in many sections of the world since before the time of Christ, but never on such a vast scale.

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

EMERIC PRESSBURGER, Michael Powell and Hein Heckroth might well have rested on their laurels when they finished "Red Shoes", but they went on to bigger and better things, by screening "Tales of Hoffman". The complete opera was filmed in beautiful sets designed by Mr. Heckroth, with a star-studded cast which includes stars of both opera and the Sadlers Wells ballet and chorus. Sir Thomas Beecham was the film's musical director. Mr. Pressburger says he thinks this is the only picture ever filmed around a sound track; the entire score was recorded and the action fitted to it, and never nas sound been more successfully dubbed in. "Tales of Hoffman" should be seen by everyone who likes exceptional films.

Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, said "This is the most important deal we have ever made", when Stanley Kramer signed on the dotted line to deliver 30 top bracket pictures during the next five years. In return he'll get $25,000,000. Kramer makes only successful pictures, the latest being "Cyrano de Bergerac", has 12 big properties on his list.

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Association has made some fine new rulings. "Neither the illegal drug traffic, nor drug addiction, must ever be presented"; suicide is to be discouraged unless absolutely necessary to the plot, and "There must be no scenes at any time showing law-enforcing officers dying at the hands of the criminals," unless the plot demands it.

THE FICTION CORNER

ROMANCE IN ELEVATOR

By Shirley Sargent

THE professor had been elevator starter in the six story Brent building ever since Tod Davis could remember. He clicked his castanets, guiding people into one or another elevator. Sometimes he said, "Car going up," or "Step in, please," but usually he just clicked his castanets and motioned.

3 Minute Fiction

Tod sidestepped the crowd going into the second car. Valerie operated elevator number three part time, helping to put herself through college. The professor winked and let Tod go in, but it wasn't any good. He was shoved into the corner opposite Valerie by eager shoppers.

Romance in an elevator, Tod thought wryly. Personal conversation, interrupted by calls of "Three, miss," and "Second, please," was nearly impossible, but Valerie managed it.

"Good morning, Mr. Davis," she said now, formally. "Why aren't you at college?"

"Too nice a morning to be cooped up," he said, watching her but conscious that every eye was on him. Everybody streamed out by the time they reached the top floor and only two nurses got in for the down ride. Quickly, he said, "I'm quitting school."

Valerie's expressions — anger chasing disappointment — told him how she felt. As people got on at the fourth floor level, all she could say was, "I'm afraid you're making a mistake."

Tod had known Valerie would be

As the elevator zoomed past the fourth floor he took her in his arms and proposed.

stubborn. First floor and everybody out as a new stream crowded in. Just enough confused time for Tod to stop beside her. "It's that job," he said urgently, "I'll be making enough for us to be married on. Steady work."

"So's running an elevator," she reported. "Why don't you talk to the professor?"

TOD leaned against the wall, watching the professor direct traffic. He couldn't see college for the $2.70 an hour he'd get working for a construction company. Balance the promise of an underpaid white collar job after two more years of college against that kind of money, and you didn't give a darn for education.

The castanets clicked, the professor's arm moved, people shuffled forward. Watching him, Tod was reminded of an automat. The professor was a fixture, performing the same gestures routinely. Habit and duty guiding him. Like a puppet, Tod thought, realizing why Valerie wanted him to talk to the professor.

With the elevators all in use, he turned to Tod. "How's college?"

"I'm quitting for a job at $2.70 an hour."

"So you can get married?"

"Valerie says she won't marry me unless I finish college."

"Smart girl," the professor said quietly, turning back to the impatient people, castanets clicking, arm waving.

In the next lull, the professor spoke hurriedly, "I took this job on temporarily 23 years ago, because I needed money to be married. I was going to teach, be a professor, but the children started coming and this was steady. Great job if you like herding sheep."

Tod watched the professor with sharpened awareness. H e r d i n g sheep. A steady job, but automatic. No thought, no chance for advancement. That's what Valerie had wanted him to see. Was Valerie afraid he'd end up like the professor?

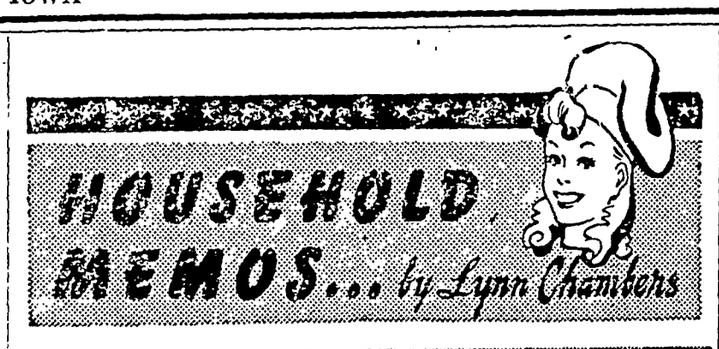
Thoughtfully, Tod boarded the third car, standing as close to Valerie as the pressure of the crowd would allow.

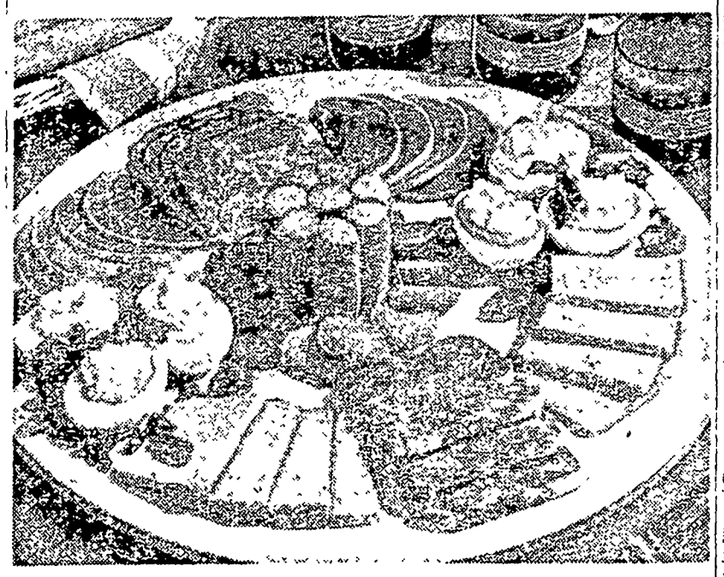
"I thought you had to work," she said coldly.

"I'm going back to college," he said, forgetting the people when he saw her eyes light up. They shot past the second floor without stopping. "Will you marry me right away?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," she said and the elevator zoomed past the fourth floor level as he took her in his arms.

And the next thing they knew, the crowd was shouting, "Sixth floor everybody out."





Plan Casual Suppers for Warm, Lazy Days

(See Recipes Below)

Porch-Picnic Suppers

IT'S NOT A MINUTE too early to start thinking of menus for picnic type suppers because one of these warm evenings you might just want to pick up your dinner and carry it out to the back porch.

In f a c t, if you're planning menus s o m e morning and it looks like it might be one of those unenergetic days that will have the starch out of you completely by the time supper is due, plan a porch supper.

Some main dishes and salads can be chilling while the temperatures climb. Another way to do it is to have the fixings for a quick supper right on the pantry shelf.

To make a good supper platter, canned meats may be utilized, along with assorted breads, mustard, catsup and pickle relish. With this serve a beverage and fruit or berries in season.

Main dish meats and hearty salads are another good answer to the porch supper served picnic style. Meats like chicken, ham or corned beef are excellent beginnings. Add plenty of vegetables, and then round out the menu with rolls heated at the last minute and a cool dessert or cake bread in the cool of morning.

IF YOU LIKE a very hearty, but cool supper, nice enough for guests, you'll enjoy this veal masked with mayonnaise. Served on a platter with peach halves filled with cottage cheese, buttered green beans, whole wheat bread and butter sandwiches, sherbet and cookies, nothing could be nicer for a porch and picnic supper!

Veal Masked with Mayonnaise
(Serves 6-8)

- 1 breast of veal (4-5 pounds)
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 1 stalk celery
- 6 cups boiling water
- 1 envelope plain gelatin
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 1 cup mayonnaise

Place veal breast, onion, salt, pepper, celery and boiling water in large kettle. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer gently for 2½ hours or until meat is tender. Drain, reserving liquid. Remove meat from bones and cut in coarse pieces. S t r a i n liquid and reduce to ½ cup by boiling uncovered. Pack meat in small m i x i n g bowl and add liquid. Let stand until cold. Cover with waxed paper and chill overnight under a heavy weight. Turn out on flat plate. Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Dissolve over boiling water. Add slowly to mayonnaise, stirring constantly. Pour mixture over veal, spreading with spatula to coat meat on all sides. Garnish with slices of stuffed olive and watercress. Chill until serving time. Cut in wedges.

SAVORY TONGUE, chilled, then sliced thin is an excellent picnic meat. Serve around macaroni or potato salad, molded pear-raspberry salad, muffins and butter, and a fresh-strawberry-pineapple fruit compote.

Savory Smoked Tongue
(Serves 6)
1 3-pound smoked tongue

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU
Chilled Fruit Juice
*Sliced Smoked Tongue
Carrot Sticks
Sliced tomatoes with Herbs
Rye, Whole Wheat and White Bread Butter
Assorted Olives Relishes Pickles
Peach Halves with Ice Cream
Cookies Beverage
*Recipe Given

- ¼ cup vinegar
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 bay leaves
- 12 whole cloves
- 1 onion, sliced
- Rind of 1 orange, cut in pieces

Wash tongue and place in kettle. Cover with cold water, bring to a boil and pour off water. Add enough cold water to cover ⅔ of tongue. Add remaining ingredients and cover. Simmer for 3½ to 4 hours or until fork tender. Cool in liquid. Remove skin; chill and cut in thin slices.

BRISKET OF BEEF, prepared in the following way makes an excellent and tasty dish when teamed with green salad tossed with tomatoes, corn on the cob, fruit gelatin, cookies or cake and a beverage.

Peppery Beef Rounds
(Serves 8)

- 4 pounds boneless brisket of beef
- 1 tablespoon peppercorns
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon ground allspice
- 2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1 onion, sliced

Have butcher pound brisket flat. Wipe meat with damp cloth and place on board. Score meat lengthwise and crosswise with a heavy knife on both sides. Place peppercorns and crush with small hammer or mallet. Sprinkle meat with crushed pepper, salt, allspice, crumbs and garlic salt. Roll meat tightly lengthwise. Cut in two crosswise pieces. Tie firmly with string. Place in heavy kettle; add onion and cover with hot water. Cover and simmer for 4 hours until tender. Cool in broth. Chill, then cut in thin slices.

NEW AND different "burgers" that offer a treat in eating are these made mainly of tuna fish, cheese and ripe olives. They're easy to mix and make inside, then cart to the porch for supper:

Tuna Burgers
(Serves 6)

- ½ cup ripe olives
- 1 6½-ounce can tuna fish
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ½ cup diced American cheese
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- ½ teaspoon grated onion
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 6 hamburger buns
- Butter

Cut olives from pits into large pieces. Flake tuna fish coarsely. Blend lightly together the olives, celery, cheese, mayonnaise, onion and salt. Cut buns in half and hollow out center. Butter inside and fill with tuna mixture. Replace tops. Place in deep pan and cover closely. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until heated through.

Put plenty of parsley in your next batch of creamed chicken for a green color note. Serve on boiled rice. This is easy as well as good.

Dip your fish fillets in flour before frying in butter. Add some bacon or salt pork while cooking and don't forget to serve with lemon and tartar sauce.

Poach halved apricots in their own syrup and let cool. Fill two or three of the halves with vanilla ice cream and set them on a large macaroon. Serve with apricot syrup and flavored whipped cream.

Farmers Are Enjoying More Prosperity Than Ever

By Wright A. Patterson

THE FACTS AND FIGURES used in this column were provided by a national life insurance company.

As compared with the conditions of the mid-twenties and early thirties, those operating the 6,372,000 farms of to-day are following the sunny side of the farm prosperity road, thanks to a beneficent government. Farm mortgages are not now being foreclosed by the thousands each day or week, as was true of that time—mortgages representing farm purchases made at exhorbitant prices for land. By last year, 1950, mortgage foreclosures were practically over. The farm had grown from an average 146 acres in 1900 to an average size of 195 acres in 1950, and the mortgage had dropped to an average of only $850 per farm, a mere 8½ per cent of the value of the farm and its equipment.

That reduction of the farm mortgage represents but one evidence of farm prosperity. That average American farmer of 1950 was 49 years old. His 195 acres of land and his farm buildings were worth $10,000. His farm machinery and motor vehicles, with live stock and poultry to a value of $2,100, represent a total plant value for each of the 6,372,000 farms of $14,300.

For each farm there was produced in 1950 crops representing a cash value of $4,350, plus $350 worth of the products of each farm used by the farm family. In the aggregate, American agriculture is a big business, and again prosperous, with its more than six million producing units sharing in the total of more than 30 billion dollars of production, an average for each farm of $4,700, with an average holding of about $14,300 for each farm, exclusive of home furnishings and home equipment.

Through the past half century the farm has increased its production despite the fact that the farm population has decreased by some 12 per cent. With better methods, better seed, better equipment, better livestock and more fertilizer, the man hour production has increased in the past 10 years by more than 35 per cent. Thanks to the American farmer, the American farm has more than kept pace with other American production. It has done its full part in all of our war efforts. It has provided food for our armed forces, and for those of our allies.

Half a century ago, in 1900 the average net income on American farms amounted to only $350 per year. Twenty five years later it was $960, and in 1950 the average annual net income amounted to $2,225.

That increase was not all due to the government policies of guaranteeing a parity price for farm products. Much of it was due to the habits of thrift and industry that is so much an attribute of the farm. Those things, more than the parity prices maintained at the expense of the taxpayers, were responsible for the restoration of the farm to its place in the national economy.

The people of the cities and towns should realize that it is not congress, nor any one at Washington, who is responsible for present farm conditions, but that such conditions have largely been produced by the characteristic industry and thrift of those on the farms.

The figures are, of course, general averages. There are exceptions. There are farms on which thrift and industry are not found, but such instances are the exceptions rather than the rule. As a whole, the farm is enjoying an unusual degree of prosperity, due to the efforts of the farmers and the farm families. Farming is again an acceptable way of living. Today it enjoys not only its share of cash income, but the conveniences of living that were so long considered the perogatives of the urban population where electricity was available.

The electric power is provided by the farm owned co-operatives, of which the average farm has invested $350. That investment provides him with a telephone, with electricity for light and power. It provides for him and his family the same conveniences that are enjoyed by those living in the cities.

Yes, the American farmer is again living on the sunny side of easy street. His balance at his local bank is as large as is that of the average city dwellers.

COMMUNIST SURRENDERS TO U.N. FORCES . . . A Chinese Communist prisoner, who has been hiding in the field alongside this road, crawls along the road just after creeping from his hiding place to surrender to soldiers of the United Nations forces. This incident occurred near the 38th parallel, as the U.N. forces were extending their beach head across the parallel in the face of a tremendous Communist build-up. At the time this picture was taken, U.N. officers were expecting the outbreak of a new spring offensive by the Red hordes gathered in North Korea and across the Yalu river in Manchuria.

A FRENCHMAN RETURNS FROM INDOCHINA . . . Blinded in battle and lacking his right hand, also lost in battle, a soldier of France arrives back in Paris from the wars against the Communist rebels in French Indochina. Two of his buddies carry his baggage and aid the disabled veteran to a waiting bus which will carry him on his journey home. This veteran was one of a group of 91 wounded French veterans of the Indochinese fighting who arrived in France from the foreign battlefield recently. They have given good account of themselves, forcing the Reds to revert to sniping after a full-scale offensive.

"MISS HOME FIRES" . . . Voted by the first marine division fighting somewhere in North Korea as "the girl we would most like to come home to," Miss Home Fires shows all us folks back home what the leathernecks mean when they want to come home to a girl. Their female "destination" is Miss Betty Gray of Chicago, Ill. Miss Gray's fame was spread by Corporal Clark Kelly. The World War II practice of voting girls various titles is in full swing in Korea.

WANTS AMBASSADORSHIP . . . Miss Marie Geneau, assistant of senate sergeant at arms, made a two-month study of Haiti and asked for job as U.S. ambassador there when the present ambassador retires after 30 years service.

CAUGHT SHOPPING . . . James Dunbar stands still as a dummy in a haberdasher's window in Times Square, New York City, while patrolman encourages his immobility with a gun. Standing in left background (face hidden) is Leonard Brown, allegedly Dunbar's helper. Dunbar entered window through hole in glass to the right of the doorway, with the intention of passing out merchandise to Brown. But Patrolman Hayes ruined the act.

WILL PRESIDE . . . Mrs. John E. Hayes, Twin Falls, Idaho, president of the national congress of parents and teachers, will preside over the group's 55th annual convention, May 21-23 in the municipal auditorium, Miami.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Time Is A Cure

"I MYSELF HAVE RUINED my life, I have nothing left," writes Kathryn Hillsey, from Wilmington. "I don't want blame from you, I want help. Nobody can blame me more than I blame myself. But life hasn't been fair to me, just the same, and many a woman does what I did, and never pays at all.

"I am 31, divorced, and the mother of two lovely children; Lettice, 6, and Jackie, 4. My one thought, night and day, is to regain some share in their lives. I don't want custody; I want a few days of my loved children's company every month, or a few weeks every year. When Lettice was born I almost lost my life; when Jackie was 2 my nursing brought him through polio. Don't these things count at all?

"This is the story," the letter goes on. "Two years ago for the boy's convalescence I moved to a little mountain cabin in a colony of unusual professional persons. My husband joined us week ends, but in that time he became infatuated with one of the nurses in the hospital, and asked me for a divorce. Stupefied, I refused, and remained at the cabin, while he closed the city house and moved to the club.

"For seven months I did not see him, and in that time I met a painter whose cabin was near my own. I suppose I was tired after long anxious care of Jackie, and deeply hurt by my husband's action; but also I fell deeply in love. Before I knew it I was leading a double life; devoting myself in the daytimes to my children and maintaining a neighborly friendship with Jeff's wife, but wrapped in all the thrill of a love affair. The secrecy added much to it, for me, and I was simple enough to imagine it might remain a secret. Jeff's wife was a much older woman than he, a north European, and unsympathetic in every way.

". . . My one thought . . ."

Humiliation

"Well, that is about all. Someone gave John a hint of what was going on, and he had me watched. Nothing was spared me in humiliation and publicity. John got his divorce and got his children; the day of his divorce he was married to his sweetheart. I knew—everyone knew—what their relationship had been for years, but there was no scandal and no proof. She has my children.

"Jeff's wife died immediately afterward of an overdose of sleeping tablets. Suicide was not mentioned, but my name was mentioned in her will. Jeff was to forfeit a considerable legacy if he married again, and was to take their son to Europe to clear up her estate. So for me nobody was left.

"I stood it awhile, then I went queer, and was handed over to a psychiatrist. He naturally didn't tell me anything I didn't know, but he did prescribe work. I got a job, have been promoted and sent here to be head of a department. I will not marry again, but I must have my children. Their little wistful faces haunt me day and night. They need me, and I need them.

Is It Hopeless?

"Their grandmother will not let me see them; their father returns my letters unopened. I have a home for them now; a back yard with oaks and fruit trees. And I am a different woman from the one who made those hasty, inexcusable mistakes. But are they really inexcusable? Can you give me any hope?"

Yes, of course I can, Kathryn. And I won't talk blame and sin and remorse, for your own heart has drunk deep of them all.

Part of the cure I suggest is time. Time has a strange way of shifting things about; people change, circumstances change. John's wife may not always want the care of two restless small persons who are not her own; John's mother will go her way and loosen her hold upon them. Fill your days with work and friends and service—service to anyone, everyone, service in a hospital, or for the blind, or in any of the Red Cross activities.

The other half of the cure lies in the words of an old Greek, spoken thousands of years ago. "Character is fate," said Heraclitus. Your character has worked an unhappy fate, so far. But if you use every day of the next year, and the year beyond that, to make yourself a better mother, a stronger character, an all-around developed woman, you won't have to struggle for your heart's desire. Good will come to you, pressed down and running over. Some of the finest lives of all are based in the mud of young

When Nickel Was a Nuisance

Only in comparatively recent times has the value of nickel to the steel industry been realized. Once, the metal was considered a mere nuisance. In the early part of the 18th century, miners in Saxony started to deevlop a deposit of what they thought was copper. The metal they obtained proved to be so tough that they could not work it into useful articles, and in exasperation they called it "Kupfer-Nickel," which translates into "Old Nick's Copper." It was not until 1751 that a Swedish scientist named Cronstedt, after considerable research, found that "Kupfer-Nickel" contained a previously unknown metal along with the copper. Since there was already a name to describe the alloy, he dropped the inaccurate part of it and called his discovery nickel.

Time Vs. Mileage

The theory that time rather than miles should be the basis for automobile maintenance inspections, guarantees, etc, is attracting attention. Those advocating the idea

As I've often contended, small towns may not have an absolute monopoly on characters, but they come mighty close. For instance:

Some years back, a small two-stop-light Kentucky city hired a most unusual personality as town marshal. This guy was very shot with the duties of his office, but he had one more than somewhat slight handicap in the discharge of same—as you shall see.

One day, the story goes, he was standing on the corner when he saw an out-of-state-licensed car run the red light on the other corner. The traveler did, however, recognize the color of the light at the corner where the chief was standing and stopped. The law came stomping out to the car.

"You smart son-of-a-gun, you ran a red light," he frothed. "I'm a good mind to give you a ticket!"

"Go ahead and give me one," said the traveler. "I'm in a big hurry.

"Aw," awed the suddenly shortened arm of the law, "go on. I can't read or write—but don't let it happen again!"

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

SEES PROFIT IN SMALL GRAIN SEED GROWN IN '51

The way things look this week, raising small grain crops for seed will be profitable in 1951, says Joe L. Robinson, secretary-treasurer of the Iowa Crop Improvement Association. Robinson told County Extension Director Paul Henderson earlier this week that many farmers who ordinarily raised small grain crops for seed will switch their acreages to corn and soybeans because of the late, wet spring. If they do this, Robinson thinks there may be a shortage of small grain seed for 1952 planting.

This trend is especially noticeable in production of quality seeds. Intentions of farmers throughout the state are reflected in certification application blanks that arrive in the office of the Crop Improvement Association in Ames during April and May each year. This year there have been few certification blanks received. Robinson says the return of application blanks is running far behind schedule.

If this is an indication of the general plans of farmers in the state the amount of high-quality seeds produced in 1951 will be the smallest in several years.

Growing oats or barley for seed in 1951 is expected to be profitable even though yields may not be as high as in some years, states Robinson. With a yield of 40 bushels of oats per acre, for example, a farmer may just about break even, figuring oats at market price. But if the grower produces certified seed he can usually command a premium for his product and make a profit on the crop.

Klemme Band Won First Rating In Music Contest

KLEMME ONE OF FOUR TO WIN TOP RATING IN EIGHTEEN

Competition Was Strong In Contest Held At Sheffield Saturday Morning

The Klemme School Band and Director Stanley Bulka went to Sheffield Saturday morning to enter the music contest and won top honors with a "Superior" or No. 1 rating in competition with 17 other bands taking part in the contest.

The Klemme Band appeared on the concert platform at Sheffield at 2:00 p. m. with Stanley Bulka conducting. The numbers played by the Klemme Band were "Music Club March" and "Triumph Ishtar," an overture. The Klemme Band was number 13 on the program, but that usually unlucky number was no handicap in this instance as the band was outstanding in their performance.

The ratings were posted at 4:00 p. m. and Klemme was one of the four bands in a field of 18 to win the coveted Superior rating. Those who observed all the bands in competition stated that the Klemme Band made one of the best impressions of any band taking part. The band was alert, precise and well balanced throughout.

All Klemme is proud of the band and Mr. Bulka is to be complimented for the fine work he has done here in Klemme. Congratulations to both Mr. Bulka and his fine band.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

COUNTY HEALTH COUNCIL MET AT KANAWHA MONDAY EVE

A meeting of the Hancock County Health Council was held at Kanawha Monday evening with president Oscar Johnson of Kanawha, presiding.

On the program were Supt. Chas. Whitney of Garner, Miss Mae Van Wert of the Farm Bureau and Miss Weiss of Fort Dodge, who was the main speaker of the evening.

Miss Weiss was assisted by Miss Van Wert in planning the Pre-School Clinics to be held throughout Hancock County, under the supervision of Co. Supt. Chas. Whitney.

As Hancock County is now Without a County Nurse, the Pre-School Clinics will give parents an opportunity to have their children checked.

After the close of the meeting, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson served a nice lunch.

The meeting was attended by various township health chairman and others interested and over forty people attended.

WELL ADJUSTED PLOW SAVES TIME AND GAS

Plowing is an art, and a good job of plowing is the aim of every farmer in Hancock County, observes County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

But besides the pride that goes with good plowing, a well adjusted plow will save time, dollars for gas and wear on plow parts, Henderson points out.

He explains that variations in plowing conditions may make frequent plow adjustments necesary, although a properly set plow will do a good job under most conditions.

The tractor and plow are actually a combination and it's wise to set the plow so it will do the best job with the tractor speed and power available.

He has copies of the Iowa State College bulletin, "Tractor Plow Adjustment and Operation," available in his office this spring. The 18-page bulletin includes pictures and diagrams on hitching principals, plow adjustment and alignment and the setting of plow shared, coulters and attachments.

COUNTY OFFICERS SALARY INCREASES

Following is the schedule of increases to county officers and employes granted by the legislature:

Auditor, Treasurer, Recorder, Clerk, Sheriff: Salaries increased $800.00 per year. In counties where court is held in two places, the Clerk and Sheriff are allowed an additional $500.

Deputies: First and second Deputy Auditor, Treasurer, Recorder, Clerk, not to exceed 75 per cent of salary of principal. Other deputies not more than 65 per cent. Board of supervisors to fix salaries for clerk and extra help.

Deputy Sheriffs: First and second Deputy Sheriffs to receive not more than 85 per cent of salary of sheriff. All other deputies, not to exceed salary of first or second deputy, as fixed by board of supervisors.

In counties where sheriff's residence is not furnished, an additional $600 per year.

County attorneys: In counties with a population in excess of 60,000, an increase of $800.00 per year.

County Assessor: Salary fixed at not more than the salary of the County Auditor—provided however, that with the approval of the Board of Supervisors, the county conference may fix salary as desired.

Maximum salary: No county officer in a county of 80,000 or less population shall draw a salary in excess of $5,300.00.

County Supervisors' salaries fixed as follows:

Supervisors on per diem basis, $10.00 per day.

Counties over 40,000, not over 60,000, not exceeding 5 members, $3,200 per year.

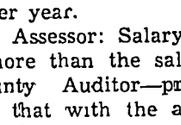
Population over 60,000, not exceeding 5 members, $3,600 per year.

Population over 60,000, not exceeding 3 members, $4,600 per year.

Population over 100,000, not exceeding 3 members, annual salary, $4,800.

Population over 150,000, annual salary $5,000.

HELLO FOLKS



Mr. and Mrs. Forest Cutshall are the parents of a baby boy born this Wednesday morning, May 9, 1951 at the Belmond hospital. The new arrival has a brother, Vernon.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

If you think the way to maintain or neglect your car is your own business and nobody else's — just stop for a minute and think again.

Don't you consciously avoid getting too close to a car on the highway when you see dented fnders, twisted bumpers and other evidence of a careless driver? Such a car looks like a menace.

However, cars that are sleek and clean may have brakes that need attention, or some other out-of-kilter part that threatens the safety of everyone on the highway.

That's why your Iowa Safety Congress joins the Automobile Dealers Association, in connection with a national vehicle safety campaign, in urging you to check your car and check accidents.

The car itself is seldom the cause of an accident. Even if it has bad brakes, worn tires, dim lights, faulty steering — the blame is not with the car, but with the person who neglected to keep it in safe condition.

Don't make your car a killer because it's out of kilter. Have your car checked, and make sure every part affecting its safety is in proper working order.

Too Many Drones Are Holding Government Jobs

The ever-expanding bureaucracy of the federal government is one of the underlying causes of the present inflationary trends.

We find here in Iowa that the federal government has 15,708 full time federal employees exclusive of the Office of Price Stabilization bureaucrats and the thousands of part-time employees or persons whose pay is partially from federal funds.

When we get too many drones—which Webster defines as "one who lives on the labor of others" — there aren't enough bees around to do the job.

It is generally recognized that one of the basic causes of inflation is waste. One of the best ways to stop inflation would be to control waste by eliminating unessential goernment services, inefficient use of manpower and unnecessary restrictions of individual initiative.

A congressional committee pointed out recently that the armed forces' civilian payrolls were increased by nearly a man a minute during the past year. The report said the number of civilian employees in the services has risen 407,233 since March to a total of 1,744,525. One member of the committee described the services as "the most wasteful agencies on earth, both in manpower and money."

Congressmen Ben Jensen of Exira is one of a group in Washington which is attempting to trim the federal payroll. The plan would require that starting July 1, civilian agencies would not be allowed to fill more than 25 percent of their vacancies with new employees. The vacancies would be filled by transfers and promotions.

Jensen estimates that the monthly turnover in government jobs is about 2.5 percent of the 2,300,000 on the federal payroll. By following the plan he has sponsored it is estimated that one billion dollars could be saved during the next fiscal year.

Congressman Henry Talle of Decorah charged recently that the OPS is " dominated by political hacks and entwined with red tape and propaganda operations." He said there were 1,500 in 14 regional offices, and 1,500 in district offices. Here in Iowa we know that key jobs were filled by defeated candidates who were repudiated by the voters in 1950.

Proof that federal bureaucracy is here in Iowa is found in a recent report on the number of full time federal employees in Iowa.

Here's the report:

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Driving home in the mid-evening darkness, the salesman fumbled in his pocket for a cigaret. The package was empty. He crumpled it and tossed it out the window.

In the first town he came to, he pulled up in front of a corner drugstore. It would take only a minute to buy cigarets, so he left the motor running and the lights on bright.

A block away, a hungry little boy with a nickel in his hand left his home and ran toward the drugstore. In the bright light from the parked car, he skipped over a puddle and started across the street.

At the same moment, another car turned at the same corner. The driver felt a jolt as his car hit something. He stopped.

The salesman, coming out of the store, lit a cigaret. Looking up, he saw the crowd gathering. Then he saw the boy's limp body.

Too bad, he thought as he reached for his car door, "some guys just don't watch where they're going," he said to the policemen. It isn't even safe for a kid to cross the street."

The officer looked around.

"Is this your car?" he asked.

It was.

"Then your are responsible, too," the officer said.

"But I was inside . . . . "

"Sure, but your car was here, and your brights were on. That other driver was blinded by the glare from your lights, and he never saw that little boy before he hit him."

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Our meeting began at 7:15, May 7, 1951. We began by saying the Pledge to the flag, Promise, Laws, Motto and Slogan.

We were introduced to our new scout leader, Norene Barkema.

We got our Mystery Sister and decided two girls would serve at a time. Barbara Thompson and Eva Thiemann would serve and Gracka Gerardi and Carol Bridges would have games. At our next meeting Berleen Bridges and Janice Stokesbary will serve lunch and have games.

We decided to have a bake sale on May 12th, to help pay for going to camp. We also read some material on camps and decided we wanted to go the week of July 8th to 14th.

New Phase Of Scouting For Younger Boys Here

KLEMME AND VENTURA YOUNG LADIES WERE HONORED AT COLLEGE

Cedar Falls—A convocation for women only was held at Iowa State Teachers College Wednesday morning, May 2nd when three honorary women's organizations named new members.

The largest group in history was admitted into Purple Arrow, honorary organization for sophomore women who have a cumulative grade point average of B. (C is average, B, above, average and A, excellent.) The purple arrow was pinned on 102 members. Gloria Haefner of Klemme was honored in this division.

The AWS cabinet, consisting of presidents and vice-presidents of the women's housing units, elected officers and appointed committee chairman, was installed in a body. Eunice Ax, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ax of Ventura, formerly of Klemme, was named a member of the AWS Cabinet.

Old Land Mark Raized In Klemme Past Week

The past week the Lau brothers have been working tearing down the old wooden building on Main street between their implement store and the Christiance barber shop.

The building was in a sad state of repair and was one of the oldest buildings on the street The Lau brothers will erect a new brick and tile building to replace the old building. It will be a very nice improvement to our Main Street business section.

The Lau brothers will put up a new tile block building, 22x40 feet, connected to their present building.

Patterson Will Work For Paint Company Coming Year

Wesley "Pat" Patterson, who for several years has been principal and coach in the Klemme schools, will not teach this coming year, but has accepted a position as salesman for the B.P.S. Company with territory in Wisconsin.

The family will move to Madison, Wisconsin soon after school is out.

LEGION-AUXILIAY NOTES

Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg, president, presided over the regular business meeting of the Klemme American Legion Auxiliary, Tuesday evening May 1st.

A May basket of fruit and candy is to be sent to Grandma Wille, a Gold Star Mother. Mrs. Blanche Stille and Mrs. Irma Sherwood were appointed to send out Mother's Day cards to our members.

The Legion men have engaged a speaker for Memorial Day. Mrs. Jean Bulka and Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel are on a committee for securing music and other special features for the program.

Mrs. Leafy Coobs, poppy chairman, reported that the Girl Scouts will help sell the poppies on Poppy Day, May 26. Wreaths for the soldier's graves will be made at Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg's home on Friday afternoon, May 25th.

The unit was happy to report we reached our membership quota 100 per cent by the deadline.

A 25th Wedding Anniversary gift was presented to one of our members, Mrs. Jake Hess. Another gift was given Mrs. Jean Bulka, who is moving away from Klemme soon.

The door prize was won by Flora Back.

PLANS UNDERWAY TO ORGANIZE CUB SCOUT PACK IN KLEMME

Good news for boys from 8 through 10 and parents was announced this week. Plans are now underway to organize a Cub Scout Pack in Klemme in the very near future.

All branches of Scouting requires a sponsoring organization and in the case of the Cub Scout Pack the Young Peoples Bible Class of the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church has volunteered to act as the sponsoring organization here. Mr. Dremmel, Klemme teacher, has volunteered to act as Cub Master.

Any town or country boys, or their parents who are interested in this phase of Scouting may contact Dr. A. H. Dulmes or Mr. Dremmel for details.

This is a fine organizat on for the younger boys of our community and there seems to be enough interest in town and in the rural area to form a large Cub Scout Pack here.

How To Get A Rural Carrier Angry In Six Easy Lessons

From The Clinton County, N.Y. Farm Bureau News

1. Don't buy your stamps ahead, put loose pennies in the mailbox. (The snowy end of box is best.)

2. Don't shovel drive to box, large enough for him to get his car in. (Better yet, don't shovel period.)

3. Have mailbox lean back away from road, so that he must scrape his fender, in order to get close enough to reach box.

4. Have post loose in ground and box loose on post, so that it will dodge around when he attempts to put mail in it. Too low or too high helps some.

5. Never have Money Order blanks filled out, and be sure not have the exact change.

6. Order lots of C.O.D. parcels, at least one week before you expect to have the money, then he can attempt a second delivery.

To get him extra "peeved," shovel your own drive, right down to the ground, but don't touch his drive in. If you really want to "burn him" throw the snow from your drive in front of the mailbox.

Stormy days, when he has had much trouble before reaching your place, is the most effective time to try these lessons.

Be sure to leave the signal up, when there is no mail in the box, this may make him an unnecessary stop tomorrow, that may help some.

If you don't find these rules successful, the Carrier can probably supply you with the name of some patron, with years of experience along this line, who would be only too glad to help you.— Contributed by Frazer Bushey, Mooers Forks, N. Y.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 11.

How Nations Decay

Lesson for May 13, 1951

"THE mortality rate of nations is 100%." So Dr. T. W. Lingle used to put the fact that no nation yet has lived forever. They all die sooner or later. What kills them? The student of history may delve into such books as Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" or Spengler's pessimistic "Decline of the West", or Toynbee's more optimistic six-volume "Study of History."

Dr. Foreman

But when the juice has been squeezed out of these learned and interesting volumes, the Truth's essence turns out to be much the same as what we can find by reading the Old Testament. True, the nations under the Old Testament lens are not big empires like Rome, still less like the British Empire; the kingdom of Israel was only about 100 miles long and 60 miles wide, while the kingdom of Judah was smaller than many an American county.

Promise

WHEN Solomon died, the kingdom he had inherited from David had already shrunk. After his death, what was left immediately split into two kingdoms, the one on the south called Judah and the one in the north called Israel.

The nation of Israel, which lasted more than 200 years, began with great promise. Indeed, one of God's prophets (I Kings II) had given to Jeroboam, the first king, the same promise which had been given David, of an enduring kingdom on condition of obedience to God.

Everything seemed to be favorable. Israel had more territory than most of her neighbors had, a far more productive soil, and easy access to transportation.

Crash

ISRAEL should have succeeded; but it failed. Only a little more than 200 years afterwards, no very great age as nations go, it crashed completely, never to rise again. When the walls of its "impregnable" capital city of Samaria, after a two-year siege, fell to the battering-rams of the Assyrian army, and over 27,000 leading citizens were deported, that was the end of Israel for good and all.

How did this happen?

The Hebrew historian ties everything into a few words when he says that they wrought wicked things . . . they rejected God's statutes . . . they served idols.

But what were the details? What, in particular, did the nation of Israel do that was wicked?

Reading the prophet Amos will give many of the answers. At the time he preached, by all chamber-of-commerce standards Israel was at the peak of production and prosperity. But he foresaw doom around the corner, and he gave reasons. He called a spade a spade. Reading him, or even reading the balder accounts in Kings, we can see the collapse was no mystery.

Other Gods

ONE thing fundamentally wrong with Israel was idolatry. This was not the simple matter of making carved images; it meant taking some other "god" to be the true God.

We know what the religions of Chemish and Molech and Baal were like; they were thoroughly bad. In the law of the true God, life and purity were regarded as sacred; life and purity under these other gods were held cheap. But one can see from reading Amos that what the people of Israel really worshipped was still another idol to whom no statue was erected: their own pleasures.

Too many citizens didn't care what happened to the country, so long as they could get their liquor. Well, let us not read the Old Testament from mere curiosity. What about our own nation, our own people and times? The United Stewardship Council (now the Joint Department of Stewardship of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.) reports that every year since 1934, excepting 1936, has shown an increase in giving through the churches.

But—the percent of this increase is not so large as the increase of annual income. The increase for contributions through the church of God is less, far less, than the increase in spending for alcoholic liquors, soft drinks, candy, football games, jewelry, and a multitude of other things. We, like Israel, are putting God last!

Household Hints

Chiggers on the lawn and bushes can be destroyed by the liberal use of sulphur, applied with a dust gun. On lawns, of course, the chiggers will disappear if the grass is kept cut.

It is a good plan to fill cheesecloth bags with pieces of charcoal and hang them in the damp cellar or basement. These will prove effective in removing the dampness from the air. The bags should be emptied occasionally and the charcoal dried and used again.

Could you pass up a well-balanced meal that someone cooked with enthusiasm, and hummed happily while they did it? No, chances are you couldn't, and neither will your family if you set this pleasant pace every morning.

Almost everyone agrees they should eat a good breakfast, but they have all sorts of reasons for not doing so: a few more minutes of sleep, lack of time, lack of appetite and interest. What's more, they know it would do them good, but they just don't get around to it.

Every homemaker can help her family off to a good start by planning this first meal as they do the others. When delightful odors come from the kitchen early in the morning, they can do more good than an alarm clock. If the meal is varied and interesting, she can have the family practically tumbling over each other getting to the table.

Start things off with a peppy eye-opener: plump, luscious strawberries, tall glasses of tomato, grapefruit or orange juice, juicy halves of grapefruit, colorful cranberry or refreshing pineapple juice.

Follow this with a bowl of steaming, fragrant cereal served with raisins and brown sugar and cream or crisp, already sugared prepared cereal with fruit-in-season.

If the family likes a hearty breakfast, try bacon rings with eggs or poached eggs in sausage nests. Maybe they'd like fried mush with apple rings, pancake drizzled with hot syrup, French toast with cherry preserves or plump omelet with Canadian bacon.

Fluffy Scrambled Eggs
(Serves 4)

6 eggs, well beaten
⅓ cup light cream
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce, if desired

Combine eggs, cream and seasonings. Cook in double boiler until just lightly set, or in a lightly greased skillet, stirring frequently. Serve on buttered toast with crisply cooked sausage, Canadian bacon circles or broiled bacon.

Golden Mush

PACKED COOKED cornmeal mush in tin can which has been rinsed in cold water. Cover and chill thoroughly. Slice and brown in hot fat in skillet until golden brown. Serve with sausage patties, glazed apple slices and hot syrup. The mush may be prepared the night before to chill thoroughly. Slow cooking gives the patties the desired crispness.

Crisp Bacon and Eggs
(Serves 4)

6 slices bacon, chopped
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
3 eggs, beaten

Fry bacon until crisp. Remove lean; add bread crumbs to the drippings and heat until the crumbs are crisp and brown. Add milk and seasonings to eggs. Scramble in bacon drippings. When nearly set, add crumbs and bacon.

Wake up to a really good morning and get a running start on the day's work with a breakfast of fruit, cereal, appetizing hot bread, eggs and beverage. With a fresh and attractive table setting, you can enjoy breakfast and take time to enjoy it.

IF YOU WANT your popovers to be crusty and crisp, use the oven for them alone. If anything else needs baking, do it first. You'll like these for a gay breakfast with strawberry preserves or honey:

Crusty Popovers
(Makes 6-8)

2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted shortening

Beat eggs thoroughly. Add milk, then sifted dry ingredients. Add shortening. Beat until smooth with a rotary beater. Fill oiled custard cups one-half full. Bake in a very hot (450°) oven for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to moderate (350°) and bake until firm, about 30 minutes. Two or three minutes before removing from oven, prick to let steam escape.

Pineapple Kuchen
(Makes one 8"x8"x2" cake)

Cake:
2¼ cups sifted flour
3 tablespoons nonfat dry milk
⅓ cup sugar
3½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup water
⅓ cup shortening, melted
Topping:
⅓ cup coarse graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons nonfat dry milk
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
⅓ cup crushed pineapple, drained

To make cake, sift together flour nonfat dry milk, sugar, baking powder and salt. To beaten egg, add water and slightly cooled, melted shortening. Make a well in dry ingredients. Add liquid ingredients all at once to dry ingredients. Mix lightly just enough to combine dry and wet ingredients. Do not beat. Pour into well-greased 8" x 8" x 2" cake pan. Sprinkle pineapple topping evenly over top of batter. Bake in a moderate (375°) oven until golden brown and firm when pressed with finger, about 40 minutes. Serve warm.

To make topping for cake, combine graham crackers, nonfat dry milk, flour and sugar. Cut in butter with two knives or pastry blender to make crumbs. Combine pineapple with crumbs. Spread evenly over batter.

Bacon Muffins
(Makes 12)

2 slices bacon
1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup cornmeal

Cut bacon in small pieces and fry slowly until crisp. Add sugar, milk and egg. Sift flour with salt and baking powder. Mix with cornmeal. Add first mixture and stir until dry ingredients are moistened. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full. Bake in a hot (425°) oven for 20 to 25 minutes.

SCANNING THE WEEK'S NEWS
of Main Street and the World

MacArhur Given Hero's Welcome; Divided Nation Questions Issues

AN AROUSED NATION—No one event in the recent history of the United States has caused as much comment among the people on the Main Streets of the little towns and big towns of the nation as that of the dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his commands in the far east. It was a shocked and angry nation that gathered on Main Street when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. It was a happy nation that demonstrated at the end of World War II. Bt it was a divided nation that questioned the removal of MacArthur!

The storm raged from grocery store to filling station, from hardware store to the courthouse. Indignation, sorrow, righteousness, worry, fear and hysteria found their way into the controversy.

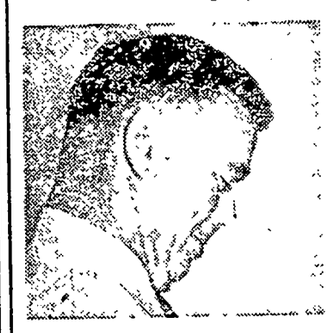
The issues of civil power vs military, Europe vs Asia, the personality of MacArthur vs Truman, politics vs statecraft, all entered into the story. For a week it was violent and then the general came home for the first time in 14 years to the acclaim of a grateful and sentimental nation.

But by now the first shock and anger of the President's action had given way to considerable sober thinking. For the first time the people of Main Street got a look through the fog of personal grudges and politics at some of the deeper issues. Although it was a divided nation still, hysteria was abating There was still confusion, but the people along Main Street were calmer.

And many of them realized that they had witnessed a turning point in history. Whether it would be for the best interests of the country and the world they could not decide—only time would tell.

New Commanders

Lt. Gen. Ridgway



Lt. Gen. Van Fleet

With the removal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his commands in the Pacific, Lt. Gen. Ridgway has taken over MacArthur's posts in Tokyo. Lt. Gen. van Fleet assumed command of the 8th army in Korea, succeeding Ridgway.

THE WORLD— Although at first glance it seems a long way from the Main Streets of the small towns of the nation to Europe and Asia, the majority of the hometowners today realize we live in "one world," and for that reason they were listening to what others had to say about the MacArthur-Truman controversy.

This is some of the reaction abroad: London—" . . . His (MacArthur) removal was accepted as an augury of peace"; Paris—"The French feel that his dismissal means less chance of total war . . ."; Bonn—"Most Germans believe that at worst General MacArthur's impulsiveness would involve the United States in a general war."

THE PRESS— Back of the national scene the home town press took a more temperate view of the incident than expressed by the thousands of telegrams that were received by senators and congressmen. The home town editors were concerned about constitutional rights and which is more important to world peace, Asia, as believed by MacArthur, or Europe, as believed by Truman.

A survey of 78 leading newspapers in the daily field showed this division of opinion: Truman right, 38; Truman wrong 26; neutral, 14. The daily press, too, was deeply concerned over issues concealed in the first blast of tempers.

THE CONGRESS—And while the Truman-MacArthur controversy raged along the Main Streets of the nation, the debate reached the boiling point in the house and senate. It can be said with all truthfulness that the dispute reached the stage where those two bodies of men, representing the people of the United States, stripped themselves of what little dignity remained after three years of battling over domestic and foreign issues.

The debate, for the most part, was along party lines with the Republicans backing MacArthur and the Democrats plugging the President. Both sides hurled the label of "war party" at the other. There were indications, however, that the two parties might get together for a sweeping investigation of the administration's far eastern policy.

ANOTHER LONG WAIT—While the nation talked of the Truman-MacArthur controversy, the house passed its version of a draft bill. But the mothers and fathers in the small towns of the nation appear in for another long wait before they learn the fate of their sons.

The measure now goes to a house-senate conference committee that has the senate version of a draft. The conferees face a long and hard struggle to work out a compromise. Long-range training features of the two measures pose the greatest obstacle to quick agreement. There are, however, numerous other conflicts that will require time to adjust.

At the moment it appears very likely that a compromise bill might not become law much before July 9, the expiration date of the present selective service act.

FARM MACHINERY OUTPUT—The long-awaited cutback in farm equipment output is expected during the next three months, industry spokesmen reported, with production of about 75 per cent of the industry's capacity. Production of farm tractors for the first quarter of this year was higher than in 1950, but material shortages are expected to reduce schedules.

From January through March, 152,260 farm tractors were produced. In the corresponding months of 1950 the total was 147,972 units. The increase was attributed to use of materials stockpiled during last fall's strikes. Accumulated materials have been used up, however, and manufacturers are having difficulty securing quantities to keep pace with production schedules.

DEFENSE JOBS GO BEGGING—The people of the home towns of the nation are not rushing into defense jobs as fast as some government agencies desire.

Robert C. Goodwin, director of the bureau of employment security, reported that 50,000 unfilled jobs clog the rolls of state employment offices as the nation's defense program shifts into second gear.

The unfilled jobs are for workers in professional, managerial, skilled, service, clerical and sales, semiskilled, and unskilled fields. Thirty-six states reported openings.

DECISION SOON— Since March 5, when deputies of Great Britain, France, Russia, and the United States began meetings in Paris in hope of agreeing on an agenda for another foreign ministers' conference, the people in the home towns of America have waited patiently for an announcement that perhaps the big four could get together.

A decision should be reached any day now and the democratic nations believe the Soviet Union will agree to the conference. U.S. diplomats believe the Russians will agree for three reasons: (1) To stall, or at least put a brake on the accelerated defense programs of the free nations of the Atlantic alliance; (2) To exploit and widen whatever difference may still exist among the western powers and to divide them on important policy issues, if possible; and (3) To use the proposed conference, bound to be one of the most widely reported events in recent history, as an organ of propaganda for Soviet "peace aims."

FARM SECURITY TAXES

First Farm Social Security Report Due

The first social security tax and information returns for farm and household employees, together with payment of taxes, was due on or before April 30.

The social security tax and information return covers the quarterly period of January, February, and March, 1951. The farm and household employees involved those who were brought into the federal old-age and survivors insurance system on January 1.

Whether or not a farm or household employee's wages are subject to the taxes depends on the number of days worked for the employer and the amount of cash earnings. If in doubt concerning taxes due, farmers are urged to see the nearest internal revenue collector at once.

Scientists Say There Is No Such Thing As an Average Lifetime

The belief of Biblical times that "three score and ten" is an exceptionally long span of life is being revised by modern scientists. Today, the average span of man's life in advanced nations is approximately 65 5 years, and it is gradually rising.

Mankind has been able to more than triple his life span since primitive times. Eighteen was considered an old age in the days of the caveman. The upper class Roman was lucky if he lived beyond 22. In 1850 the average life span on this continent was 41 years. Now, it has advanced to almost 66 years.

Research workers are now suggesting that the human life span could be lengthened to 120 years within a decade by increasing our "Know-how" in nutrition, medicine, chemistry and other factors entering into a good living standard.

A new national foundation for anti-aging research has been established in the United States with the aim of obtaining at least $4,000,000 (a fraction of the cost of making one atom bomb) for research in the new science of gerontotherapeutics (prevention of old age).

In recent years scientists have stated there is no such thing as a "natural lifetime." Dr. Henry S. Simms of Columbia university has observed that if the human body could retain throughout the years the ability it possesses at at 10 years of age to resist disease and repair breakdown, "man would have a life expectancy of 800 years and some individuals might survive 22,000 years."

To remove excess fat from hot soup, wrap a piece of ice in a small piece of cheesecloth and run it over the top of the soup. The excess fat will congeal and collect on the cold surface of the cloth and is thus easily removed.

HADACOL BRINGS RELIEF TO FOLKS SUFFERING ACHES AND PAINS

When Due To Lack of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron In Their Systems!

Mrs. Homer Hanes, Route 1, Newport, Ohio: "I have been having pains for a time. I took three bottles of HADACOL and now my pains don't bother me. I sure feel good now. I could hardly do my housework before, but now I can get my work done good. I got a job at the American Pottery and really don't feel tired at the end of the day. I can sleep good at night now. Thanks a million for HADACOL. I wouldn't be without it."

Mrs. Lula Nelsoni, 1702 E. 63rd St., Los Angeles, Calif.: "I was run-down, couldn't sleep at night, had aches and pains and with seven children to care for I couldn't get my work done. After three bottles of HADACOL I felt so much better I could do more work than ever before. I've been taking HADACOL ever since and feel so good. I now give it to my children and it has helped them, too."

Hardy Holmes, 1020 Empire Street, Joplin, Missouri: "Before taking HADACOL I had pains and I would suffer with bloat after eating. My energy was low and I had a run-down feeling. After I started taking HADACOL I got almost immediate relief. I don't have my pains any more and now I can eat anything and even drink coffee without the discomfort of bloating. Thanks to HADACOL I am sleeping and resting better at night and feel better generally. This is worth gold. My wife also took HADACOL and got wonderful results."

Edward Jakubowski, 1622 N. 75th Court, Elmwood Park, Ill.: "For awhile I was bothered with aches and pains and felt run-down after a long cold that just seemed to hang on. One day one of the other drivers suggested I start taking HADACOL. So, I bought a bottle and started taking it. It has relieved my pains; they've almost completely disappeared, and no longer prevent me from sleeping well. This was three years ago when I took my first bottle of HADACOL. I still continue to take it and have recommended it to many of my friends."

WHY HADACOL GIVES SUCH WONDERFUL RESULTS

ACT NOW—HADACOL is not a quick-acting pill which gives symptomatic relief—HADACOL gives such remarkable results because it actually relieves the real cause of aches and pains when due to lack of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin in the system. And continued use of HADACOL not only helps give continuous, complete relief but also helps prevent such annoying pains from coming back. A big improvement is often noticed within a few days!

What HADACOL Does

This great product not only supplies weak, deficient systems with extra quantities of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Iron and Niacin but also beneficial amounts of precious Calcium and Phosphorus—elements so vital to maintain good health and to help guard against such deficiency ailments.

Be Fair to Yourself

Start taking HADACOL today. If you have such a deficiency, don't keep dragging yourself around when relief is so inexpensive and near at hand—your neighborhood drugstore. Trial size bottle, only $1.25. Large family economy size, $3.50.

HADACOL comes in special liquid form so that it's quickly absorbed and assimilated by the blood. A big improvement is often noticed within a few days. Buy HADACOL today.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 family economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.

WHAT A TAX BILL!

Reprinted from the Cedar Rapids Gazette

Linn County's biggest taxpayer recently turned over to County Treasurer Frank F. Bates the largest tax check ever received in the office.

It was a check for $234,594. which represented the first half taxes of the Iowa Electric Light and Power Company.

The firms total taxes for the year are $469,188.

According to Hillis Gill, division commercial manager for the utility which delivered the check, the company's total property taxes in Lynn county will be divided this way:

Cedar Rapids schools, $217,153; city of Cedar Rapids, $156,982, with the balance to various taxing districts in the county.

The utility also is paying first half taxes in 22 other counties, although the amount paid in Linn is the largest, Gill said.

The total tax bill of the company is about $2,300,000, a record figure due to increases in federal and state property levies.

Bring Summer Into Your

CURTAINS AND DRAPERIES

There are curtain and drapery fabrics to fit every type of window this spring and summer. You'll find cottons, linens, mohair and rayons; nylons, plastics and the new synthetic fibers such as orlon and dacron. Textures will run from smooth sheers to nubby weaves to a hand-loomed look.

It happens every spring to many homemakers—that irresistible urge to redecorate. And one of the easiest ways to change the mood of a room is by a new window treatment.

Emelda Kunau, home furnishings specialist at Iowa State College, suggests using thinner, lighter, airier curtains at the window. Choose them in cool, summery colors. Pastels are becoming more poular, and there are wide sheer curtains to fit every window.

The colors you decide on for your curtains or draperies will depend a great deal on the type of window and the room you have to work with, says Miss Kunau. Remember that bold, contrasting colors tend to come toward you, making a room seem smaller; while softer colors that blend into each other have a way of receding into the background, and actually make a room appear larger.

Center of Interest

If you have a large room with several big, well-proportioned windows close together, you might play up your windows and make them the center of interest. This is especially nice for the spring and summer months when your thoughts naturally seem to travel outdoors. You could use a bold color in your draperies, a color or colors that contrast with your walls and draw all eyes to the window. If you don't already have much texture and pattern in your room, you could use a bold print or pattern in your curtains. A solid color will be better if your room already has quite a bit of design in it.

Group several pieces of furniture around the windows and make a pleasant conversation area. If you live close to your next-door neighbor, you'll like traverse rods so that you can pull your curtains shut for privacy. Or you could use venetian blinds or glass curtains with your draperies.

When you use bold, contrasting colors together, Miss Kunau advises choosing ones that are toned down or grayed to some degree. This way they'll go more comfortably together and you're not apt to grow tired of them.

For a smaller room, curtains about the same color or tone of color as the walls will make the room look larger. You can still give those windows prominence by grouping several chairs around them, making them a natural point of gravitation.

For high, narrow windows you should use very full, floor-length curtains, says Miss Kunau. And extend your curtain rods beyond the casing as much as a foot on each side and cover them with a valance to give the window a wider look.

Sewing Tips

If you're making your own curtains, the side hems should be three quarters to 1½ inches wide. The bottom hem should be 2 to 3 inches deep to give weight and a pleasing proportion.

All selvages should be removed so that the edges won't pucker or stretch when the curtains are laundered. And do check all curtain or drapery material for washability, shrink-resistance, and resistance to sunlight.

URGES POULTRY DISEASE CONTROL MEASURES

The season for establishing poultry disease control measures is already here, County Extension Director Paul Henderson reminds Hancock County Poultry raisers.

He says the new brood now being grown must be protected from diseases and parasites if they are to be money-makers, since low mortiality is one of the main factors in poultry profits.

Henderson cites a list of poultry disease control measures listed by W. R. Whitefield, Iowa State College Extension poultryman. First of all, old birds need to be kept confined to the laying house as they are often carriers of disease even though they appear to be entirely healthy.

In addition, the brooder house should be 200 feet or more from the hen house and the chicks kept indoors or off the ground until they have been moved to clean range and green pastures. A sun porch or summer shelter moved alongside the brooder house will allow chicks more room until they are 10 or 12 weeks old and can be moved to the range.

Changing footwear when going inside the poultry houses is another important step in disease control. Henderson suggests having a pair of overshoes or rubbers to wear only inside the hen house.

The U, S. flag had 15 stripes from May 1, until April 1, 1918.

Scientist Creates 'Fog' With Aid of Ping Pong Ball

A Cornell psychologist has succeeded in creating a fog with a ping-pong ball.

Conducted for the U.S. air force, the experiment is designed to test a theory of depth perception new to psychology.

Many psychologists believe that man's ability to see a three-dimensional world is due to a process which is the brain's duty, rather than the eye's. Dr. James J. Gibson, professor of psychology at Cornell, holds another theory—that this kind of perception can be explained in terms of images on the retina of the eye.

Dr. Gibson maintains that texture is the most important property of a surface. In fact, he is trying to find out whether a surface without texture can be seen at all.

The ping-pong ball "fog", conceived at Cornell by Dr. Julian E. Hochberg and an assistant, Gideon Seaman, is being used to create a world without any surfaces.

Dr. Gibson has constructed a pair of goggles from the two halves of a ping pong ball. When a subject, wearing the goggles, is placed in a specially-lighted perception room, he can see brightness or darkness but he can't see any surfaces, because the celluloid is so close to his eyes that he can't make out its texture. Because of the absence of texture, he has the sensation of being enveloped in a fog. By this means the Cornell scientist can study what we see when we can't make out surfaces.

Cooperative, Democratic Teachers Most Admired

The nation's school children have their own ideas of what it takes to make an effective teacher And the youngsters' ratings of their teachers are apt to be much different from the ratings of school supervisors and superintendents

This is the opinion of Dr. Paul A. Witty, Northwestern university professor of education, who analyzed approximately 90,000 letters from American school-age youngsters. The letters on the subject, "The Teacher Who Helped Me Most," were written to the Quiz Kids radio program.

Prof. Witty found that the teachers most admired by the first to twelfth grade pupils were those with a "cooperative, democratic attitude."

In one of the letters describing her favorite teacher, one school child said: "Our class is just like one big happy family; I am not afraid of school any more." Another youngster wrote: "She made me feel good and comfortable at school—just like you were home in your living room."

Other teachers who ranked high with their students, according to Prof Witty, were those who had such qualities as "kindliness and consideration for the individual," "patience," "wide interests," "pleasing personal appearance and manner," "fairness and impartiality," "sense of humor," and "good disposition and consistent behavior."

In Grandma's Day.

When grandma kept house some half century ago she and the maid worked hard from the time the sun came up in the east until it set in the distant west. In those gay 90's there was an old saying that a housewife's work was never done That epitomized the fact that in those days housework was something of real drudgery. There were no labor saving devices which the housewife and maid enjoy today. These modern conveniences are the electrical harnessed servants that do the work in minutes that in the long ago required hours.

Venezuelan Ore Development

The U. S. ambassador to Venezuela said at a recent press conference in Caracas that "there was prosperity and peace in Venezuela." He added that the country was progressing, supported by the petroleum industry and by the recent development of the iron ore fields. It is estimated that Bethlehem and U. S. Steel corporations have invested one hundred fifty million dollars in the development of this industry.

Boost Steel Output

Five western steel producing states made 5.3 per cent of the nation's raw steel in 1948 compared with 2.5 per cent ten years earlier. The tonnage output of these states west of Missouri increased nearly fivefold during the same period. Steelmaking furances in California produced 2,013,800 tons in 1948, exceeding the record of the prevous year by 12.3 per cent. Colorado, Utah, Washington and Oregon combined to exceed their 1947 peak output by nearly 5 per cent.

U.K. Hydroelectric Plant

Lock Sloy—a mountain lake 800 feet above sea level and about two miles northwest of Loch Lomond—is the site of the largest hydroelectric development in the United Kingdom. It is the first of 29 such Highland projects to be completed. After centuries of oil lamps, coal and peat heat, Highland homes are now beginning to enjoy the luxury of electricity.

SCHOOL NEWS

First Grade News

We have had several visitors in our room this week. They were Mrs. Chet Renner, Mrs. Raymond Barz, Mrs. Maurice Murray, Mrs. Mitchell Bock and Mrs. Frank Schulz.

In arithmetic class we have started to subtract. We also started to write our numbers above 100.

In science we have been learning about tadpoles.

We have also been practicing for our Mother's Day program.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Second Grade News

This has been a full week for us. Monday, Sharon Bachman gave treats to the class, since the next day was her eighth birthday. On Tuesday we had our May Day program. Nearly all the mothers were there, some sisters and brothers and aunts and grandmothers. We were glad to see a father there also. Wednesday many of the children brought May baskets. Ellen Waddingham gave the whole class a May Day treat. The rest of the week was spent as usual, except that we worked extra hard.

Billy Heginger has been absent with pink eye and Jerry Stokesbary with the measles.

Third Grade News

In Reading this week our large group made booklets which correspond with their reading books. The inside of the booklet is made up of the different units, which were about Norway and Lapland.

On Wednesday May 2nd we took a walk with the fourth grade. We went about a mile and a half east looking for the different signs of spring.

We were very happy to have quite a few of our mothers visit us this week. We hope more of them will come before the year is over.

We are going to have an exhibit and a short play on May 9th. We certainly hope all the mothers will try and come to this.

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

We've been having a lot of fun this week. On Tuesday most of us exchanged May baskets and Jerry LaFavre and Marlin Stadtlander treated us up town later in the week.

Along with fun we've learned how to divide by fractions. They were a little hard at first but now they're fairly easy.

Those to get perfect scores in Spelling this week are Harlan Baack, Gaylon Bridges, Jerry Janssen, Virginia Kudje, Jerry LaFavre, Cozette Lau, Carol Pavey, Carroll Priebe, Dorothy Roul, and Mardell Stadtlander.

THICK CORN STAND GIVES BEST YIELD

Should Have 12,00 To 16,000 Stalks Per Acre

There must be a thick stand of stalks per acre at harvest time to get the highest corn yield in Iowa. That means 12,000 to 16,000 stalks per acre, according to Ed Dyas, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

A fairly heavy planting rate must be used to get this number of stalks, which will make maximum use of the available soil fertility. It must be remembered that an ear of corn isn't produced for every kernel that is planted.

Plant Extra Kernel

Dyas reports that actual counts show that when 3 kernels of present-day good hybrid seed is planted per hill, approximately 80 percent of that many stalks will be in the field at harvest time. If 4 kerenls are planted per hill, there will only be 3 stalks per hill when the corn is husked.

When 40 by 40 inch hills are planted, Dyas has recommended planting 4 or five kernels per hill to get the desired number of stalks per acre. The 4 kernel rate will give about 12,000 stalks per acre and the 5 kernel rate, 16,000.

Can Narrow Rows

Some farmers run into difficulty from lodging when planting 5 kernels per hill Dyas says this can be avoided and the stalk count per acre still maintained by planting at a lighter rate per hill and narrowing the rows or spacing of hills. This will mean more hills per acre.

For example, there will be 4,344 hills of 38 by 38 inch hills in an acre. Planting 4 kernels per hill will result in between 13,00 and 14,000 stalks per acre at harvest time under average conditions.

It takes good soil management to grow high yields, and there must be a thick stand of corn to cash in on the high fertility, Dyas says.

TREATED OATS NOT SAFE TO FEED TO LIVESTOCK

The late spring will probably result in many farmers having seed oats left over as they will plant other crops. Oats that have been treated should not be fed to livestock, says Or. D. B. Radloff, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

The treating compound contain about 4 percent of available metallic mercury. Continuous feeding of this to livestock may result in enough mercury accumulating in an animal's body to cause poisoning.

Cattle are the most sensitive to mercury, but hogs and sheep will also be affected. Common symptoms of poisoning are marked depression, refusal to eat, scouring and weakness with eventual paralysis.

If farmers do not wish to carry treated oats over for seeding next year and want to take a chance on feeding them, Dr. Radloff recommends mixing them with untreated ones. A reasonably safe mixture is one bushel of treated seed to five bushels of untreated oats.

Farmers should keep a watchful eye on livestock receiving this mixture, though and the feed should be discontinued if any signs of poisoning appear. The local veterinarian should be called to prescribe treatment for affected animals.

START PIGS GRADUALLY ON GREEN PASTURES

An Iowa State College extension swine specialist has some suggestions for getting pigs started on lush, green pastures with less trouble from scouring.

Pastures are late this spring, and hog producers are getting anxious to move their sows and pigs out of the farrowing pens onto clean ground. However, they can make this shift too abruptly, in the opinion of E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at the college.

Sows and pigs turned out on lush legume pastures directly from drylots usually develop scours. They have them for a week to ten days and as a result suffer some setback.

This type of scours can be prevented by accustoming the sows and pigs to green feed slowly. Juaife suggests cutting some and feeding it in the pens in drylot.

The swine specialist says it is a good practice to full-feed pigs on pasture until they reach 60 to 75 pounds in weight. Pigs up to this size can't eat enough grass or legumes to obtain enough protein to balance the grain.

After the pigs reach 60 to 75 pounds the protein in the ration can be reduced considerably if there is a lot of good pasture. This is especially true with pigs that will not reach market before late fall. Corn and pasture will often provide them with all the nutrients they need.

However, for early-farrowed pigs being pushed for the high-priced summer markets, Juaife suggests full-feeding right up to market time. The higher price received will more than pay for the extra feed required.

Although it is getting rather late to sow rape, Juaife says it may still be the best temporary pasture crop if legumes are lacking. Rape will do exceptionally well if the season remains damp and cool.

Dental Educator Offers Hints on Care of Teeth

Healthy gums can best be maintained by regular, thorough and careful toothbrushing, Dr. Maynard K. Hine, of Indianapolis, dean of the Indiana University School of Dentistry, reports.

Advocating three to five minutes of brushing at a time, Dr. Hine described the firm healthy gum as pale coral pink with a well-stippled "orange peel" surface.

He said effectiveness of dental treatment for gum disorders can only be short-lived unless the patient carries out good toothbrushing procedures at home carefully and persistently.

The Indiana dental educator recommended as an effective kind of toothbrush one with an inch-long head, containing medium one-half inch long bristle brushes that are bound in tufts about one-eighth of an inch apart and mounted in two rows of six tufts each.

Among toothbrushing techniques, Dr. Hine said that "it is generally agreed that the brushing should be done in a manner which will not allow the ends of the bristles to irritate the gingival (gum) tissue."

He said the sides of the bristles should be pressed against the gums and as much pressure should be used as can be tolerated.

He asserted, however, that there is no one universally preferred technic for toothbrushing and that the individual should follow the advice of his dentist in a procedure suited to his individual needs.

As a toothbrushing procedure for children, Dr. Hine suggested that the brush be pressed against the teeth and gums and revolved in circles with as large a diameter as possible.

As for dentifrices, he quoted a formula: "Equal parts of water and elbow grease."

Swine-Raisers Warned About Rhinitis in Pigs

If pigs sneeze frequently and their snouts later become "pushed in" or twisted, swine raisers should be on their guard. They may have a serious disease problem in their herds.

Excessive sneezing, coughing and a peculiar look to pigs' faces may mean an outbreak of infectious rhinitis. The malady appears to be spreading, authorities say.

"Infectious rhinitis does not kill many animals outright," a bulletin reports, "but it may stop gains to the point where hog raising is no longer profitable. Even well-fed pigs fail to put on weight.

"In many instances, farmers have mistaken infectious rhinitis for 'bull nose.' The two conditions appear similar, but bull nose starts from an injury, and infection with barnyard germs. It is not contagious. Infectious rhinitis, however, is caused by a disease organism, possibly a virus, which stays in a herd season after season.

Shawl-Famed Cashmere Wool Accents Its Timeless Vogue

In 1950's fast-rising market for fine-quality wools, Asia's cashmere —the "wool of emperors"— accents its timeless popularity by running in extra heavy demand.

Cashmere wool is the soft winter underfleece of the small, semi-wild Tibetan, or cashmere, goat. Never shorn, it is plucked or combed out painstakingly by hand during the spring molt of this frugal denizen of Himalayan heights. The wool is collected, also, from shrubs and rocks against which the animal rubs when its downy underwear becomes too warm.

Comparatively few of these goats live in Kashmir, northern Indian state which gave the wool its name. They range in thin air and on thin diet from the Caspian sea to western China, and their wool is finest in regions of perpetual snow near the eastern limit of this range. Cashmere endures as the wool's name because of the long renown of scarfs and shawls handwoven from it at Srinagar, capital of Kashmir.

There in the storied and beautiful Vale of Kashmir, shawls known to the Caesars were loomed. Of matchless softness, they were hand-elaborated on the loom into masterpieces of blended color. Superb examples are displayed in Srinagar museums.

The collapse of the Roman empire disrupted the cashmere trade with the West, but early in the 16th century, Europe "rediscovered" Srinagar's exquisite shawls. Josephine and Eugenie, consorts of two Napoleons, multiplied the vogue. Shawl weaving in the Vale burgeoned into an industry of 25,000 workers and 16,000 looms a century ago.

Six New American Liners To Be Safest Ever Floated

America's six new passenger liners now under construction will be the safest liners to sail the seven seas. Specifications of the owners and designers call for the highest standards of safety that will produce ships that have little chance of burning or sinking.

Through the combined use of materials that are either incombustible, fire-resistant, flame-proof, or fire-retardant, along with other fire-prevention and fire-fighting devices, a conflagration of any consequence on American passenger liners will be virtually impossible. The new liners will be divided into several fire-tight zones bounded by steel bulkheads or decks, insulated to prevent passage of fire and extreme heat.

Stairways and stairhalls out of these zones are to be enclosed by fire casings. Doors in the fire zone bulkheads are of fire-resisting material and are thermostatically operated. Automatic fire detectors are to be installed in areas containing combustible materials, including storerooms and lockers. Cargo spaces, holds, storerooms, carpenter shops, paint and lamp rooms will be protected by an audible and visual smoke detector combined with a carbon dioxide extinguishing system.

Best Humidity for Home

Air conditioning engineers consider that the range from 35 to 50 per cent relative humidity is the most healthful for the home and that this will not have a harmful effect on furniture. Thus air conditioning equipment for use during summer months is often designed to maintain 40 per cent, or sometimes as much as 50 per cent, relative humidity. In the winter, however, the humidity must be continually lower. With 40 percent, in a home maintained at 75 F and with singly glazed windows, as soon as the outside temperature dropped to 36 F, there would be condensation of moisture which might damage. In order to protect the house, it is usually considered that 20 per cent is as high as one should go in the winter in northern climates.

U.S. Shoe Production

Nearly two million pairs of shoes are made each day in the 1,200 shoe factories of the United States, according to the latest figures released by the U. S. government, and nearly one-half of the world's shoes are made and worn in America. The approximately 500 million pairs of shoes which skilled craftsmen will turn out this year in this country—actually one billion footwear units — will consume some 22 million hides of cattle for leather soles and other vital shoe parts, and many millions of hides and skins of other foreign and domestic animals, such as goats, sheep, horses and reptiles.

Knitting Industry

During the period 1939 to 1948, the volume of cotton consumed by the knitting industry increased 180 per cent, from 81,000 bales to 228,000. The consumption of materials competing with cotton declined 18 per cent during these years Cotton scored its biggest percentage gains in men's and boys' sweat shirts, women's, misses', and children's polo and "T" shirts. Volume-wise, gains in men's and boys' polo, "T" and basque shirts and men's and boys' sweat shirts were chalked up amounting to more than 100,000 bales annually.

WEEVILS MAY DAMAGE SWEETCLOVER THIS YEAR

Sweetclover weevils are expected to pose a threat to new seedings of sweetclover again this spring, but farmers can head off damage if they watch seedling fields closely and apply DDT.

The sweetclover weevil is a relatively new pest in Iowa, according to R. J. Walstrom, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. The pest moved into Iowa in 1941, and by 1946 it had appeared in all sections of the state. Since then, the sweetclover weevil population has built up until last year infestation was serious throughout Iowa.

The backlog of infestation carried over from last year provides a potentially high infestation this year, according to Walstrom. The adult weevil overwinter in second-year clover and migrate to the new seedings as soon as the plants get above ground. Little damage is caused in second-year sweetclover fields, but infestations have been known to completely destroy stands of new seedings.

Early sweetclover weevil damage shows up in the form of crescent-shaped cuts in the clover leaves. The weevils themselves are difficult to detect because of their gray color and their habit of feeding at night.

For control, Walstrom recommends spraying the field with DDT as soon as the leaf damage is noticed. Application rate is 1 pound of actual DDT per acre. It may be put on at pressures ordinarily developed by farm sprayers.

Work Completed At New Mill

All of the carpenter work had been completed at the new mill at the Klemme Cooperative Grain Company the past week and only some electricians were working around the mill.

All of the machinery is in place and for the past couple of weeks the mill has been operating, cleaning and treating seed.

"Mike" Lemke, manager, is planning to hold a formal opening sometime soon when the public will be invited to visit the mill and see it in operation.

Future Operation 'Haylift' Guide From Starved Sheep

Starvation experiments on sheep have turned up information that will aid stockmen in the event of another "Operation Haylift" emergency.

These studies, made by veterinarians in South Africa, showed that sheep getting their first feed after several days of starvation do better on a poor ration than a good one.

Sheep ate sparingly for three to five days when given a high-protein ration following a 96-hour starvation period. But when offered bulky, low-protein rations—of a type commonly regarded as poor feed in the United States—the animals started to eat normal amounts immediately and regained strength much faster.

The explanation is that starvation temporarily reduced the numbers of helpful bacteria in the rumen of the sheep. Without sufficient numbers of such bacteria, normal digestion could not take place and appetite for concentrated feed was diminished accordingly.

In all such cases, it is important to get a large amount of bulky feed into the rumen without delay, so as to restore rumen function.

When western blizzards left thousands of cattle and sheep near death from hunger two winters ago, many stockmen learned the hard way that animals cannot be started back on full feed abruptly. Severe digestive troubles were common and in many cases were traceable to failure of owners to provide light, easily digestible rations following the extended starvation period.

Beasts, Fish, Join Birds, Invade Air Travel Lines

The air travel market is booming with lizards and boa constrictors, cows and bears, race horses and frogs.

Prior to 1940 live cargo was shipped, with few exceptions, via rail, boat and truck. It took World War II and the international transport of war materials by airplane to demonstrate the commercial potential of the flying boxcar.

Today an impressive fleet of airborne Noah's Arks is carrying everything from chickens to tropical fish, mice, and monkeys. No less than 1,150 scheduled and 15,000 non-scheduled cargo planes operate from within the U.S. alone.

Animals have become such an important part of skyway traffic that the British Royal Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals has established at London airport an animal reception center and hospital, equipped with everything from oxygen tents to exercise yards.

These new "tourists," like their human counterparts, have found air travel generally comfortable as well as fast. Recently 42 cows were flown 1,500 miles from Everett, Washington, to Anchorage, Alaska. They made the trip in a contented mood and yielded sweet milk within hours after arriving at their new home.

Machines Cut Cotton Labor

Complete mechanization of cotton production "from seedbed preparation through storage and ginning," is the goal of the program in which 15 Cotton Belt States are cooperating with the U. S. department of agriculture, says Dr. P. V. Cardon, administrator of agricultural research. He summarizes one phase of this program as follows: "Studies in the Mississippi Delta show that 155 man hours are required to produce a bale of cotton with one-row mule-drawn equipment, and hand chopping and picking. The use of tractor-drawn equipment and a mechanical harvester reduce the man-hours to 45, and by also using the rotary hoe and flame cultivator the time was further reduced to 30 hours. If cotton production were completely mechanized and all hand work eliminated, the study indicates that a bale of cotton could be produced in the Delta with only 10 man-hours.

Test for Stomach Cancer

An ingenious balloon test for cancer of the stomach has been devised by a group of doctors from Cornell University medical college and New York hospital, New York.

A rubber balloon covered with short pieces of braided silk and attached to the end of a tube is swallowed into the patient's stomach and then inflated, the doctors say. Cells from the stomach lining cling to this balloon "brush." The apparatus is deflated and withdrawn and the cells are removed by washing in a special solution. The cells are then examined by means of the smear test.

Pillows Need Airing

Now is a good time to get all your bed pillows outside and give them the air. Either hang them on the clothesline or lay them on a sheet on the ground. Place them in the shade, as the sun's heat may destroy the natural oil in the feathers. Let them breathe the fresh air for at least a half day and fluff them up periodically. During this process, you might test them for resiliency. Push down in the center and notice whether the pillow rebounds to plump fullness when pressure is released. If not, you need new pillows. That "rebounding" quality is necessary to give proper sleeping comfort.

Cinderella Story Retains Ancient Hold on Readers

The "Cinderella Story" has been a "best seller" for more than 4,000 years.

It crowds the Bible and Shakespeare for popularity, all over the world.

Nearly every race has some version of the "Cinderella Story" One of the oldest stories known, it is common to countries separated by the widest stretches of land and sea and time.

A folk tale of ancient Egypt, called "Rhodopis and Her Gilded Sandals," was probably the first "Cinderella Story." "Rhodopis," meaning "the rosy-cheeked" in the Greek, is a legend that was woven around Queen Nitokris during the era of the Pyramid Builders. Told to the children of Egypt about two thousand years before Christ, it is to this day a favorite fairy tale of the land.

According to the legend, Rhodopis, "lovely as the day-dawn," was bathing in the River Nile when an eagle flew off with one of her small gilded sandals. He dropped it in the lap of the king who vowed he would wed none other than the owner of the dainty little slipper. And he did.

Cinderella, or her prototype, finally developed into the story of the ill-treated but ultimately successful younger daughter which appears in the folklore of many different peoples.

The English version of the "Cinderella Story" with which all English-speaking people are familiar, came from France. It was translated into the English in 1729.

Shellac Used to Preserve Household Wood and Budget

With the price of lumber once again heading toward an all-time high, the householder and the home craftsman are faced with a pressing conservation problem. In this connection, Gordon Obrig, one of the country's top furniture designers and a fellow of the American designers' institute, offers several ideas aimed at preserving your household woods and your pocketbook.

Use of several coats of shellac on present room moldings and baseboards, as well as walls, floors and old wooden houshold pieces will prolong the life of each of these articles as much as 50 per cent, he points out. In addition, where slight cracks have begun to appear in your wooden possessions, they can be filled in quite handily by simply applying a shellac stick, obtainable at any hardware store.

A persistent problem with both old and new wood is the presence of knots. Here, a couple of coats of orange shellac will prevent the knot from working loose, and thus marring the surface. The glue-like qualities of shellac can be utilized if a knot has worked its way loose by simply removing the section, coating its sides with shellac and then replacing it.

These are just a few of the ways in which a little maintenance effort around the house can be used to avoid extra expenditures for lumber.

America's Bald Eagle

There are two sub-species of America's living bald eagle, the big northern and the smaller southern varieties, the latter ranging as far south as northern Mexico. These eagles build their often huge nests high in tall trees or on lofty, rocky crags. Almost invariably they nest near lakes and other waters, for fish and water fowl are favorite foods. Most of the fish captured are dead or spent, although some are taken from the successful hunter, the osprey, which is forced to drop its victim in flight.

Frozen Crushed Fruit

Crushed frozen fruit gives a delightful flavor to ice cream, sherberts, and beverages. With this fact in mind, food preservation specialists urge that some fruits be crushed and frozen for this purpose. They point out that the natural flavor of these crushed or pureed frozen fruits is more pronounced than that in sugar-packed halves or slices.

Other Side of Moon

Why can't we see the other side of the moon? The moon goes around the earth once in 27 1/3 days, and in this same period turns once on its axis. This is just enough to keep the same hemisphere always turned toward the earth. Sometimes people find it hard to understand why we say that the moon is rotating when it always keeps the same region toward us. However, an observer out in space toward the sun, watching the movements of the two bodies, would see all parts of the moon during the 27-day period.

Warning to Motorists

Even motorists with excellent vision are warned that the spacing between cars of one length for each 10 miles of speed—as stated by law in some states—is not enough. A safe stopping distance can be calculated by squaring the speed in miles per hour and dividing by 10. Thus, at 30 miles per hour, 30 times 30 equals 900; divide by 10, and you find that your safe stopping distance is 90 feet. On packed snow or partly icy pavements divide by five instead of 10, and on ice or sleet divide by two.

U.S. Married Population Reaches All-Time High

The number of married people in the United States is now at an all-time high of almost 75 million, which is fourteen and one half million more than only 10 years ago.

Somewhat more than two thirds of the present population at ages 15 and over is married; throughout the 50-year period of 1890-1940 the proportion was about three fifths.

The increase in the married has been greatest at the younger ages. Among women at ages 20 through 24 the proportion married rose slightly from 47 per cent in 1890 to 51 per cent in 1940, and then spurted to about 68 per cent in 1949.

For women at every age period under 45 the increase has been greater in the past decade than during the entire half century prior to 1940. Even beyond age 45 the proportion of women who are married is now at the highest point in at least sixty years, and the same is true for men at all but the old ages.

The increase in the married population results to some extent from the improvement in mortality and the consequent reduction in widowhood, but of much greater importance has been the remarkably high marriage rates of the war and immediate post-war period. In the country as a whole the proportion of adult males who are single has fallen from 35 to 29 per cent between 1940 and 1949; among women the corresponding decrease was from 28 to 23 per cent.

Vaccinate Chicks Against Newcastle by 'Air Attack'

A new "air attack" method of combatting outbreaks of Newcastle disease in poultry flocks is being tried by research veteranarians at the University of California.

To protect young chickens against the disease, Dr. R A. Bankowski and associates on the university research staff made up a fine spray of Newcastle disease virus. This was carried by forced air to a pen full of young chickens. The birds were kept in the virus-laden air for periods of up to an hour.

Most chickens develop an immunity to the disease following the airborn vaccination. Ordinary vaccination methods require inoculation of virus under the skin.

The virus used in the studies was weakened by growing it for long periods in the laboratory. Grown outside chickens' bodies in a broth preparation, the virus eventually lost most of its disease-producing properties, while still retaining the ability to immunize.

COUNTY BOARD OF REVIEW WILL HOLD SESSIONS

The Hancock County Board of Review met at the courthouse in Garner Monday forenoon and proceeded to organize for the year by electing, Henry Schroeder, Kanawha building contractor, as chairman of the board. He succeeds the late Chris Jacobson of Britt.

The personnel of the board now consists of C. H. Schissel, retired merchant of Garner; Fred Thiel, Britt Oil dealer, Britt; H. D. Schroeder, Kanawha building contractor, Kanawha; George Oxley, Corwith realtor; and Elmer Arnold, Klemme farmer.

The board will be in session on Monday, May 14, Monday, May 21, Monday, May 28, and Thursday, May 31st. All meetings will be held at the courthouse in Garner. The board began the task of reviewing the 1951 personal property assessment on Monday afternoon.

Bicycle Rider Are Subject To Traffic Rules

Now that spring seems to be definitely here, bicycle riders are again out in full force and it might be a good reminder that bicycles come under the same traffic rules as automobiles.

The bicycle rider is subject to the same regulations as the motorists. He must obey all traffic rules, such as signals, stop signs, No U-Turns, etc.

The bicycle must also keep to the right, ride in a straight line with traffic, ride single file, carry only one person, slow down at intersections, must not have any "hitch-hiker" aboard and must signal turns.

Those who ride at night are required by law to equip their bike with a rear light reflector, or a light, so it can be seen by automobile drivers.

All of these rules are suggested by plain common sense Ignoring any or all of them might insure you a trip to the hospital

How to Make Home Piano Appear Less Conspicuous

How to make your piano as decorative as it is musical is often a problem in home decorations, points out Mrs. Kate C. Archer, extension specialist in home furnishings, Kansas State college, Manhattan. With the introduction of the new spinet-type pianos much better arrangements are possible, as well as novel ways of placing the old upright models.

"If your upright piano has a beautiful finish and a nice grace of line it is most pleasing with no decorative articles on it," says Mrs. Archer "If any articles are placed on top of it, they should be low ones. The horizontal picture is best above a piano.

"However, if your upright is quite undistinguished you might consider painting it the same hue as walls, or picking up the background color of the wallpaper. Pianos can be used as space dividers between living and dining rooms or may be placed in an alcove in a bedroom "

Sometimes it is satisfactory to build in a space that fits the piano with wall space on either side given over to radio or record player or book cases. Such a musical group, with chairs placed for easy listening, is a nice solution.

A piano always appears larger when it is against a narrow wall space, particularly between two doors or two windows; when the end is close to an entrance; when it is against the best-lighted or most prominent wall; when it is across, or when it stands alone against a long wall without other furniture near it.

'Big Top' Grows Bigger, Circuses Become Scarcer

Are new dangers looming for the high wire walkers of the circus, the daring bareback riders, and death-defying trapeze artists? Yes, say the "big top's" friends, but not in the form of the ever-present risks to individual performers. The fear is that a slow process of attrition may be menacing the circus itself.

A half dozen circuses have closed during the current season. Only 10 are left of the scores which once flourished in the U. S.

America's spangled show of feats and freaks, of wild animals and wistful clowns, has had many ups and downs since it first took to railway wheels more than three quarters of a century ago. Today the paradox of the "Greatest Show on Earth" is that, while numbers dwindle and costs mount, the remaining outfits grow bigger and more spectacular.

Last year the largest of the rolling shows travelled some 19,000 miles, used 32 railroads, and gave 415 performances before nearly 3,500,000 people It carried motorized caravans of set-up seats, and spread the world's biggest piece of canvas—30,000 square yards of it—in a tent that can now be raised by mechanical stake drivers and tractor power.

Early Railroads

The earliest railroads in the United States were built of wooden rails capped with thin strips, or "straps," of iron to provide a running surface for the wheels. These were called "straprails." Iron rails 18 feet in length were imported from England as early as 1831 The first iron rails of American design were rolled in the United States in 1844 By 1850 most railroads were being built of iron rails. The first Bessemer steel rails manufactured in the United States were rolled at the North Chicago Rolling Mills on May 25, 1865, and by 1880 about 30 per cent of all tracks in the United States were laid with steel rails At the end of another ten years, 80 per cent of the country's mileage was equipped with steel rails, and by the late 1890's steel had almost completely replaced iron.

It's in the Finish

Simulated pearls are no longer thought of as imitations, but as fashion accessories, acceptable in themselves. The impression of depth and softness in a pearl is the result of light reflections from a multitude of paints within the pearly film, making it impossible to focus on any single layer In simulated pearls, this effect is conveyed by layers of crystals incorporated in the finish which is applied to plastic and glass beads The crystals used are guanine or pearl essence crystals. They are obtained from fish scales and are only 40 millionths of an inch in thickness

Gregorian Calendar

In 1582, Pope Gregory VIII ordained a simple reform. Astronomers showed him that the sun year is some 11 minutes less than 365¼ days. In the course of a dozen Julian centuries, spring's first day had moved forward from March 21 to March 11.

To correct this, Gregory directed that October 4, 1582, be followed by October 15, and that leap-year days be omitted in the last year of each century except years divisible by 400 (as 1600). His reform reduced the annual error to 26 seconds. which will add up to one day by about 4900 A.D.

Bigger Egg Cases

Bigger eggs have been calling for larger egg cases to carry them to market. Marketing methods however are well established and standardized. A standard egg case has been cut to strict dimensions so that a case from one manufacturer would pile beside or upon a case from another maker and make exactly uniform stacks that stow evenly and firmly in a truck or railroad car hauling the eggs to market. As a result of scientific breeding and selection on one hand, and of market premiums for larger eggs on the other, poultrymen have been supplying eggs that now average larger than they used to The result has been increased breakage of eggs moving to market, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

PRODUCTION OF TIMBER

Nation's Timber, Forage Output Increased by Extensive Research

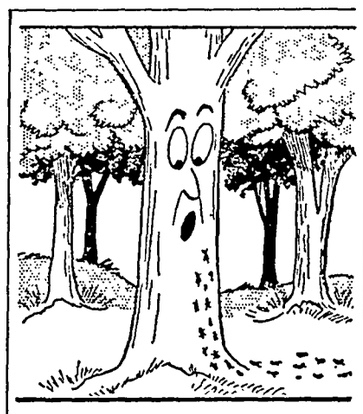
Uncle Sam's foresters are working harder than ever devising new ways to produce more timber for defense and to increase the forage production of the nation's range lands.

In 61 research centers, 102 experimental forests, and 14 experimental ranges forest service research men are conducting many different studies.

At the Fort Valley experimental forest in northern Arizona researchers discovered that the growth rate of ponderosa pine can be doubled if stands are cut lightly every 10 to 20 years rather than cut heavily every 40 to 60 years.

Ridding southern pine stands of overtopping hardwoods pays off, the research center at Crossett, Ark., decided. Ten years ago they cut or girdled all hardwoods two inches and up in diameter on an experimental plot. Growth of the released pines has been so rapid that a thinning out was made this year.

The control of forest fires has long been a part of the Forest Service research program. Methods of determining the fire danger each day have been worked out and are used regularly by forest administrators to help them judge how many men need to be on fire duty each day and how many men they need to send to the fires that occur.



U.S. forest researchers report that bugs and disease take a far greater toll of timber than fire. They are in constant search of means of protecting the nation's forests.

BUGS AND DISEASE take a bigger toll of timber than fire. At the Institute of Forest Genetics in Placerville, Calif., geneticists are producing trees that will resist disease and insects They have developed a cross between the Jeffrey and Coulter pines that withstands attacks from the pine reproduction weevil. A cross between eastern white pine and Himalayan pine show great resistance to blister rust.

In working toward a better range, forest service technicians have taken abandoned farmland that was a dead loss and converted it to productive grazing land. On idle fields near the Bitterroot Valley of Montana foresters used a preparatory crop method of seedbed preparation. They planted wheat or barley the first year. Then they sowed crested wheatgrass in the grain stubble. This method of planting controlled the troublesome cheatgrass that often causes failures in reseeding such ranges and also netted a profit of $4.55 an acre.

Water runoff experiments have been conducted at many research stations. At the Coweeta experimental station in North Carolina research men have studied the effects of various types of timber cutting and land use on the flow of water They have discovered that the streamflow from a watershed can be materially increased by removing those trees which waste a great deal of water in transpiration. They are also running a small farm to see what effect traditional hillside farming has on water runoff and soil erosion.

To aid industry the Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wisc., developed a new process for pulping hardwoods which is simpler and less costly than the chemical pulping processes. They found that overmature Douglas-fir timber infected with a pitting called white pocket can be used for construction purposes.

Other forest service researchers conduct surveys of forest lands to determine how much timber is available in this country. Their reports have been valuable to the National Security Resources Board in determining what forest resources are available for national defense. The reports have also aided wood using industries in finding suitable locations near raw materials.

The work of the research foresters is vital not only in the defense program but also in everyday living. Their findings are the property of the American people. Research foresters welcome visitors, issue free publications and make their studies known through national forest administrators, extension service workers, state agencies, industries and farm foresters.

THE FICTION CORNER

THE O'MADDIGAN'S

By Patrick J. O'Brien

TOMORROW is Flannagan's wake, Kathy O'Maddigan recalled, as she hurried up the brownstone steps leading to the apartment where she and Paddy had lived since their marriage three years ago, this very day.

3-Minute Fiction

Kathy smiled as she visualized the new spring outfit she would wear at the gathering. Paddy was proud of her dress, too, even if he didn't say so. She knew he liked the way it emphasized her figure. Of course he had complained about the cost, adding: "If you want to waste money on clothes, you should have married a banker."

But the argument about the dress was not the real reason she had left. The breaking point was reached when Paddy had refused to buy the darling bonnet displayed in Murphy's window. "Ridiculous!" he said.

Ridiculous? How could a hat be ridiculous when every day, for nearly a month, she had stopped to look in the window and admire it.

Reaching the apartment door, she turned the knob, but the door refused to open. Apprehensively, she turned the knob back and forth, but to no avail. She was locked out. Kathy blushed furiously with indignation.

Then she exploded:

"Open this door! Do you hear me?" she shouted, pounding frantically on the warped panels. "It's not enough that I work myself to the bone so a body can have a decent home to live in. No. I must be locked out of my own home. My home, mind you!"

"Your home," Patrick O'Maddigan's voice vibrated through the thin partition. "Is it now?"

"Your home," Patrick O'Maddigan's voice vibrated through the thin partition. "Is it now? And only this morning you were ready to walk out of my house."

"When I get my hands on that stubborn neck of yours," Kathy O'Maddigan shouted, "I'll . . ."

"Sure now," Paddy said, "would you be wanting to harm your bread and butter?"

"Open this door, I say!"

"In good time, woman," Paddy replied. "It's your Irish temper that has the best of you."

"Temper!" Kathy shouted. "A fine one you are to be talking of an Irish temper. Who was it that woke the neighbors with his carrying on in the wee hours of the morning?"

No answer.

"It was Patrick O'Maddigan, that's who it was. And all because I wanted the money to buy the hat."

"BUT the price, woman. I couldn't afford a week's wages for a bit of lace and cloth."

"Don't you want your wife to be the best dressed lady at the wake tomorrow?" Kathy asked.

"That I do, But could you not purchase a hat that's more reasonable in price?"

"I had my heart set on wearing that hat to the wake," Kathy said. "Don't you love me?"

"It's not a question of love," Paddy replied, "it's the money I'm thinking of."

"Then you'll not buy the hat for me?"

Silence.

"Let me in, Paddy," Kathy pleaded a pathetic note creeping into her voice. "I'll be good . . ."

There were sounds of movement in the apartment. Then Kathy heard a key rattle in the lock. Swiftly she stooped, slipped a shoe off her foot and straightened up with it grasped firmly in one small hand.

She struck swiftly as the door was opened suddenly. But it was so sudden that Kathy was thrown off balance and the momentum carried her to the center of the room. She landed unceremoniously on her hands and knees.

Brushing aside a strand of hair that was tickling the tip of her nose, she looked up at Paddy who was standing beside the open door. In his hand was a bit of Kelly green and a little white veil with a pink and blue ribbon on the side.

"You did buy it Paddy. But . . . you . . . said . . ."

"I meant to surprise you Kathy," Paddy explained. "I couldn't let you down. Have you forgotten our wedding anniversary?"

"Oh, Paddy," she said tenderly.

GRASSROOTS

States Seek Method of Retaining Tideland Wells

By Wright A. Patterson

THE SUPREME COURT decided by the narrow margin of one vote that, despite the practices of more than 100 years, the tidelands from which vast quantities of oil are being extracted, are the property of the federal government and not of the states. Unless this decision is corrected by definite and unmistakable legislation by congress, it means a severe loss of revenue to several states, including California and Texas.

The idea originated in the socialistic mind of Harold Ickes, and it was in keeping with President Truman's welfare state program. Congress passed the legislation needed to prevent the consummation of the seizure, but the President vetoed it. A new bill is now before congress, which, if passed and vetoed, can be passed over a veto, as more of the states realize the tidelands seizure may be but a prelude to the seizure of other natural resources now belonging to the states. What is proposed in the bill now before congress is to give to the states a quit claim deed for all the natural resources within the boundaries of each, including the coastal waters, so the federal government could not repeat the steal Ickes attempted, and with the support of the supreme court has, up to this point, succeeded in putting over.

Seizure of the tidelands is one of many moves in the socialization program. Back of it all has been the hidden motive that has dominated the President's program of socialization of the nation, despite what he may have said to the contrary. With gold, silver, coal, iron and oil, and other natural resources in the hands of a centralized federal government, things that were never dreamed of by the drafters of the Constitution, we would be far on our way to a centralized, socialistic nation, and only a step away from totalitarianism.

The representatives of the people in Washington, the members of both the senate and house, should not hesitate in preventing such a consummation while there is yet time. Those in Washington who are promoting a socialistic program know full well that the great majority of the people do not want it, and for that reason they resort to hidden methods to achieve their ends. Protection against such methods lies with congress.

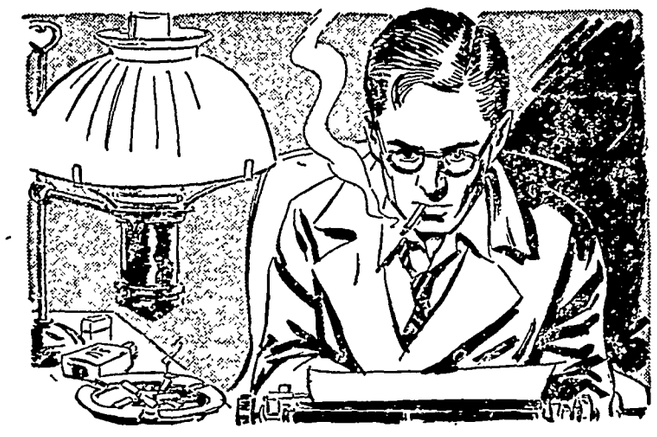
The states have leased these tideland oil fields to oil producing corporations, and the corporations have invested vast sums in their development, in plants and equipment. Should such arrangements now be terminated, and the federal government now lease these fields to other oil producing companies, it would result in a battle royal in the courts, that would clog court calendars for years to come. It is a certainty that the present holders of these oil leases, made with the states in good faith, and in which many millions for drilling and equipment has been invested, will not merely move out and sacrifice their investments without a fight to the last court. They can hope that the supreme court might change its narrow margin verdict should congress not pass the needed legislation that would restore those coast oil fields to their rightful owners, the states. Should congress not do so it is only a step to another socialistic seizure of state properties, effecting practically all of the states.

It might be good politics for President Truman to dispense with the services of a few who have profited from some of the graft that has been uncovered rather than to wait for the Republicans to use "turn the rascals out" as a campaign issue. The stenographer has her mink coat, and for the good of the cause could afford to step out of the White House picture. So also could Paul Dawson who has enjoyed his hotel entertainment. It would be a move toward morals and ethics.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

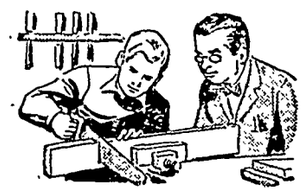
Smoking and Concentration

By Lawrence Gould



Does smoking help you to concentrate?

Answer: It appears to, regardless of how much (or little) it may harm you in the long run. This is partly due to the narcotic effect of the nicotine, which helps deaden otherwise distracting stimuli; but besides that, the sensations which smoking produces satisfy and quiet the primitive urge for sensuous pleasure whose complete frustration tends to make you restless and prevent your giving full attention to what you are doing. Chewing gum and eating candy gratify the same wish for "mouth stimulation."



Does vocational guidance help delinquents?

Answer: Yes, to judge by the results of experiments at Bellevue Hospital, New York, reported in Mental Hygiene. Helping a delinquent or mentally sick boy to know and find the kind of job for which he is best fitted makes him feel someone is taking a real interest in him. This both prepares him to accept psychiatric treatment, if he needs it, and encourages him to adjust himself to a world which he no longer feels has no use for him. Delinquency most frequently grows out of a sense of being unwanted.

Is psychoanalysis "upsetting"?

Answer: Very much so. Every neurosis represents a way of dealing with a personal problem which the patient knows no other way of solving, and to be compelled to realize that his method cannot work frightens him half out of his wits. Suppose, for example, that you have done something you are very much ashamed of but have salved your conscience by persuading yourself that it is somebody else's fault—being made to see that your excuse is "phony" can be downright terrifying. The fear of abandoning unreal defenses is what makes you resist psychiatric treatment.

Penicillin Helps Check Chicken Pox

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT WOULD SEEM that in that simple disease of childhood, chickenpox, there would be no need for such a powerful remedy as penicillin. What we forget is that while chickenpox in itself is not considered dangerous, there are some symptoms that disturb the patient and delay recovery. Added to this are the complications which sometimes accompany or follow chickenpox.

In The Journal-Lancet, Minneapolis, Drs. E. S. Krug and H. R. Glenn state that there has been a relative increase in the number of cases of chickenpox in adolescents and young adults. Chickenpox is usually more severe in these age groups than in children and treatment is therefore more important. These physicians began the use of penicillin in college students with chickenpox to shorten the time needed for recovery.

In addition to shortening the time of recovery, complications, or what is called secondary infection, would most likely be prevented or rendered less severe, thus preventing loss of too much time from the classroom. One of the complications that causes secondary infection is the severe itching that occurs with chickenpox. This itching causes intense scratching and often leaves the skin rough and scarred.

Drs. Krug and Glenn are careful to state that although the number of cases treated (86) does not permit statistical conclusions, they gained the impression that the average period of fever was reduced by about one-half and the period of hospital treatment by about one-third by penicillin. Itching was reduced; there was no scarring and the patients were much more comfortable.

Because itching in chickenpox keeps the patient uncomfortable and scratching may cause complications, other methods of relieving the itching are in use, among them that valuable antihistamine, pyribenzamine.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

LONG TOM POINTS LONG NOSE . . . Troops of a self-propelled field artillery unit in Korea prepare to fire their Long Tom 155 mm gun, while P.F.C. Billy Head of Mena, Ark. (foreground), digs his foxhole near the gun to which he has been assigned. Front line dispatches were heavily censored as at the time this action took place, Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway was on his way to take supreme command of the United Nations forces and other duties from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, his deposed former chief. U.N. officers were studying the Communist lines for signs of an offense by the enemy.

BLOODSHED IN INDO-CHINA . . . French parachutists count the bodies of Vietminh rebels who were slain during the recent battle at Mao-Khe in Indo-China. While United Nations forces are busy fighting in Korea, the French have their hands full battling Communist-led forces of Ho Chi Minh in Indo-China. The arrival of American aid and a new commander from France inspired the loyal French forces to counter-attack the Reds and make them abandon their concerted drive on the capital. They have reverted to sporadic sniping, and the country is considered safe from Communist domination.

MYSTERY BOMB . . . Detective William Schmitt of the bomb squad lifts an aerial bomb from oilbath where emergency police had placed it after they found it in a hallway on 6th Ave., New York City. The bomb was found by Leo Simmon who notified police after the sanitation department refused to have anything to do with it. After the bomb was soaked in oil, it was turned over to the army ordinance center in Brooklyn for thorough study of its contents.

RIDGWAY SUCCESSOR . . . Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, ordered by President Truman to take over the 8th army command from Lt. Gen. Ridgway, arrives at the Pentagon for conferences with the joint chiefs of staff.

CHECKS GERMAN FORCES . . . On his first inspection tour of allied troops in Germany, SHAPE commander General Dwight D. Eisenhower is seen with General August Guillaume, commander of the French troops in Germany. Ike attended maneuvers in Koblenz. When he heard that Truman had relieved General MacArthur, he said he hoped MacArthur realized a soldier must submit to certain inhibitions and would not try to stir up public reaction.

TEMPTS BAD LUCK . . . Bad luck signs don't bother pitcher Ralph Branca of the Brooklyn Dodgers who wears the number 13 on his back and holds a black cat. Incidentally, this picture was taken on Friday, the Thirteenth.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Cruel Meddling

"YOU OLDER PEOPLE can take some of the blame for the fact that one marriage out of every four goes on the rocks," writes Madelon Clay, from St. Louis "I'm happy now with a second husband," her letter goes on, "but there'll always be a little ache in my heart that Garth and I threw away our young love and young marriage. What destroyed us both was our families and our friends.

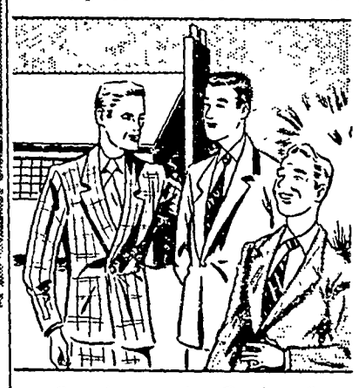
"Both families were jealous and possessive. My mother telephoned every morning and expected to be told every detail of my life. Garth's mother felt that he had made a silly marriage, and never was anything but cold and formal with me. She telephoned, too, asking him to come up and see her, counting the minutes he stayed, and frequently urging him to telephone me that his mother was not very well, and he was staying with her for dinner.

"Then there were our friends. Garth and I were both still in college, my father paying me $100 a month from a small trust fund, Garth's mother allowing him the same sum. Garth worked some nights, helping a professor, and I worked in a tea shop Saturday afternoons. We were deep in love and determined that our great venture should be a success.

A Joke

"But to our school friends it wasn't a great adventure, it was a joke. They made great fun of us, the boys pitying Garth for his loss of freedom, the girls either flirting with him or trying to persuade me that he was no good. They came in every afternoon, four or five of them, drank our liquor and wasted our time.

"The school gossip began to seem pretty out-dated to us, we wanted to be alone, for reading, walks and study. We were never left undisturbed, and we could no longer afford the old amusements. But they couldn't see that at all.



". . . boys pitying Garth . . ."

They called us 'tight.' And sometimes it got so that Garth would be talked into something and I would feel it was a waste of money, or I would be dying to go to something and Garth could see nothing but the financial side.

"Everything conspired to make things hard. The summer was terribly hot, our house small and odorous; a baby was coming and I was miserable all the time. My mother wanted us to come to my old home to live and Garth wouldn't, and his mother was angry because we were having a baby at all She said she had known just what a slovenly sort of life I would drag him into, and was not surprised.

"Then came the night when four friends came in at five, drank our liquor, went out for more and more ice, and stayed around until nearly eight. In desperation I asked them to stay for an impromptu meal, which turned out to be so skimpy that Garth, furious and ashamed, took us all to dinner. The bill was $28 and the other two boys said they'd match him for it. They did match, and Garth lost, and everyone put in 50 cents to pay our sitter.

So Silly Now

"It all seems so silly now, but we quarreled all that hot night, and at three in the morning the thought of my lovely airy room at home, and Mother's generous table, was just too much for me, and I took little Garth and went home.

"My boy is 6 now He knows that the good man who is baby Joy's father isn't his father. He knows his Daddy lives with another woman and calls her his wife. It's horribly unfair to him. And wasn't the whole thing unfair to Garth and me? Shouldn't we have had some help, been given a chance? Am I prejudiced, or is this so?"

No, you're not prejudiced, and indeed it is so, Madelon. We outsiders are far too much inclined to take young marriages only for what they mean to us. Unmarried friends drift in upon the newlyweds, intent only on idle amusement and very often mischievous interference, and mothers and fathers jealously try to hold tight to the old ties.

Often mothers and fathers feel that their responsibility for a loved daughter's happiness, her clothes and amusements and activities generally, is increased rather than lessened by her marriage. And their loving claims and interference confuse and trouble the young wife.

As for the boy and girl chums of yesterday, who want to make the whole thing a joke, they do much more harm than they ever dream. To be constantly obliged to apologize for old Stan, who always acts that way, puts a strain on the young husband.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round
BY DREW PEARSON

The Midnight Statement

IT WAS not until about 11:15 Tuesday night that President Truman actually decided to issue his 1 a.m. statement firing General MacArthur.

The decision to ma e this momentous step had already been taken, but the timing was set for Friday, not Tuesday midnight. And the reason for the sudden nocturnal press announcement was a telephone call from Secretary of the Army Pace in Tokyo tipping off Truman that MacArthur planned to jump the gun and get out his own statement first.

The President was still smarting from an incident around March 24 when MacArthur had jumped the gun on him, so naturally he was leery. He had sent MacArthur a policy statement for his perusal and personal reaction—a policy which the White House planned to announce as a peace feeler to China. But MacArthur, without notifying Washington, issued the statement himself.

So when Secretary Pace called from Tokyo Tuesday night intimating that MacArthur might rush into print again, the President called Secretary of State Acheson and Deputy Undersecretary Dean Rusk to the White House where they prepared the MacArthur press release.

Prior to that, late on Monday afternoon the joint chiefs of staff held a highly secret session at which there was unanimous sentiment that MacArthur must go.

Bradley Gets Hot

Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and a most mild-mannered man, was hottest under the collar against MacArthur.

Adm. Forrest Sherman, chief of naval operations, and reported by some as favoring MacArthur's strategy against China, actually threw his weight behind Bradley. Though MacArthur's tactics included a naval operation against China, Admiral Sherman argued that we can't afford to get involved in a war with China, and that if you go into China just a little bit—as in bombing bases—you have to be ready to go in all the way.

Only military man who dragged his feet on MacArthur's ouster was Secretary of Defense Marshall, who has known MacArthur a long time, is 70 years old against MacArthur's 71, and who was in France as a World War I captain when MacArthur was a brigadier general.

Ridgway Can Hold

One highly significant exchange of information made between the pentagon and Lieut. Gen Matthew Ridgway in Tokyo was a cable from Ridgway stating that no matter what happened, his troops could hold out for 60 days. Regardless of what was thrown at him, Ridgway informed the joint chiefs of staff, he could hold for two months.

This cable was in reply to White House fears that following MacArthur's removal, there might be a Chinese attack and a series of American defeats for which Truman, having removed the supreme commander, would get the blame.

Humble Harry

President Truman's usual peppery remarks have not been in evidence during the MacArthur controversy—not even to his personal advisers. The nearest he came to pepper was at last week's cabinet meeting, just after ex-speaker Joe Martin released the MacArthur letter.

"It's time to show the MacArthurs, the Time-Life people and the Scripps-Howard newspapers who is running American foreign policy," he observed tartly.

Day after MacArthur was relieved, however, Truman received a call from ex-congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, who congratulated him.

"What you have done will make sure that my grandchildren will be free and that civilian government will continue in the United States," Maverick said.

The President was neither cocky nor apologetic. He looked a little sad, as if he had made a terrifically hard decision and knew that a terrible storm was going to break over his head.

"Thank you, Maury," he replied. And he wept just a little. "I do my best. I have to follow the constitution."

Rayburn's Ghost Troops

What Speaker Sam Rayburn had in mind when he told congress that "non-Chinese" troops were in Manchuria, was not Russian troops, but four divisions of Russian-trained Japanese troops . . . there has long been a small contingent of Russian troops in Manchuria used for purposes of turning Russian equipment over to the Chinese. But there have never been any Russian combat troops in Manchuria. Much more dangerous are the Red divisions massed around Siberia.

Concentration Means Competition

By GRANTLAND RICE

IN THE RUN of sport a rather quiet, nerve - stabbing game known as golf demands the best any competitor has in the way of concentration.

The reason is quite simple. Outside of billiards or pool, golf is about the only important game where the player swings at a stationary ball.

This isn't true in baseball, tennis, polo or even in boxing where both fighters swing at moving targets. It is an entirely different act when the target does'nt move. Movement is the best cure for tension, and tension is the greatest curse in golf.

"Golf would be an easy, simple game to leran and play," Joe Kirkwood told me once. "if it weren't for tension."

You look at a golf ball, and there it sits and waits. So the keyed up brain or mind immediately begins to travel around—to the bunkers and traps ahead—to the ponds and lakes—to the matted rough—to all the sordid trouble a poor shot can find. Thinking too much along this line is dangerous.

The best concentrators think only in terms of essentials or fundamentals—such as the pace of the back swing and down swing — physical action that takes care of the grooved swing—keeping the head in place. The main tendency is to think in terms of results — not what causes or produces the right results.

Grantland Rice

Who are the best of these concentrators? Certainly you must head any list with Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, Gene Sarazen (especially in certain moods). Long Jim Barnes was a fine concentrator.

Walter Hagen had a great knack of being able to save his concentration for the few seconds needed to play the shot. He avoided the long three-hour strain for a round by kidding with the gallery, his caddie or his opponent between shots.

I would say that Ben Hogan and Bob Jones worked harder at tournament golf than anyone else I know, although Jones will tell you that Hogan was in a class by himself when it came to hard work and complete concentration on every shot played.

Sammy Snead is inclined at times to let his thoughts wander with the roving winds that travel over the course.

A Star Example

Jerry Travers, one of the greatest of all concentrators died only recently. He won the U.S. amateur championship four times and the open title once.

Travers was one of the star match players of golf. His swing was far from flawless. But he was a grim, determined competitor with an amazing short game.

Years ago both Travers and Hagen had gone to Alex Smith for instruction. I asked Alex one day which of the two he thought was the greatest concentrator. "Travers," he said. "I can tell whether Hagen is up or down, leading or trailing by the way he looks. No one could ever tell whether Jerry Travers was five up or six down. His expression never changed."

Close friends were often hurt when they spoke to Travers during a tournament match and got no answer. He never heard them. He was concentrating.

"There is only one important shot in golf," Travers used to say. "That's the next shot. When I have played that I think only of the shot that comes next. I never think of any shot I have played poorly or missed. Those shots are gone. You can't play them again. Too many golfers, even good golfers, let these mistakes make them sore or keep them bothered. This is a killing error. No one can concentrate on the next shot while brooding over the last one played. I have seen this mistake wreck many a round."

Travers was one of the finest chippers and putters golf has ever known. From 50 yards off the green he could get down in two strokes more often than anyone I have ever seen, not even barring Hagen, Jones, or Hogan. His old-time rival, Walter J. Travis, was another master of brain and nerve control, two of golf's major factors.

About Blackwell

Ewell Blackwell, six feet six or thereabouts, is only 28 years old. Just as he got started the army grabbed him and held him for three years. So the first real test he drew was in 1947 when Blackwell won 22 games and lost only eight with a somewhat ragged Red ball club. In June of that year he pitched a no-hitter against the Braves and in his next start he had another no-hitter for eight innings when Eddie Stanky nailed him for a single.

As one hitter explains: "When Blackwell is pitching against you it's like a tall tree falling on top of you at the plate."

Hal Newhouser was the first to locate one of the secrets of Blackwell's success.

A baffling delivery can be a big part of pitching.

Iowa's Traffic Problem

Our town is having its parking problems, like every other town in Iowa.

So we sent down to Des Moines the other day for a traffic expert, to give us a few pointers. He spent a whole afternoon with our traffic committee and came up with some good ideas. But, when he was ready to drive home, there was an "overtime parking" ticket on his car.

Now, he could have complained, or asked us to "fix" it. But he walked right over to the police office and paid his fine.

From where I sit, it's good to know people like that . . . folks who refuse to be treated differently from anyone else. Farmers or city people . . . those who prefer cider and those who'd rather have a temperate glass of beer . . . We're all entitled to the same privileges, and no more. That is, so long as our rights and preferences don't interfere with those of the other fellow.

CHECK OPERATION OF CIRCUIT BREAKERS NOW

If you have circuit breakers in your home or farm wiring system, spring is a good time to check them for operation, according to Carroll Worlan, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

Flipping the circuit breakers control will clean the contacts of any corosion which may have formed during winter's temperature changes. This is particularly true if the breaker is located in high humidity or moist surroundings.

Failure to do this may mean that your circuit breaker is not doing its job and that you have no protective equipment in that electrical circuit, Worlan says.

Jones-Hanson

KLEMME COUPLE MARRIED AT PRINCETON, MO.

Miss Audra L. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Jones of Klemme, and Lyle H. Hanson, Klemme, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hanson of Garner, were united in marriage at Princeton, Missouri on Sunday, April 29, 1951 by Lucien May, Magistrate of the District Court.

The couple were attended at the ceremony by Mr. and Mrs. Art Hanson.

The groom operates a trucking business in Klemme and the bride is a graduate of the Klemme High School in the class of 1951. The couple have began housekeeping in the apartment in the Wiles building in Klemme.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

The accident began happening 31 hours before the car careened into a ditch and rolled over. That was only the conclusion.

The elements of the accident started building up on a Saturday afternoon when four men in their early 20's met to talk over plans for the evening. Restless in their Iowa home town, they decided on a trip to Chicago, and they started that night about 11 o'clock.

The overnight drive was uneventful. The four young men took turns at the wheel. At the end of the trip, they forgot their fatigue in the swift-moving metropolis.

They spent all day in Chicago. At 5 p. m., they started home. Tired after a sleepless night, each man was cautious when his turn came to drive.

In Davenport they stopped for coffee and sandwiches. But the long hours of driving and the lack of sleep were not to be defeated so easily.

They were 100 miles from home when it happened. At 60 miles an hour, the car edged toward the shoulder of the road, then lurched into a shallow ditch.

The driver woke up as it started to roll. He was thrown clear, and only slightly hurt. But his seatmate was killed, and the two men in the back were badly injured.

Highway patrolmen, investigating, found that the men were all known as good drivers. The car was mechanically in good shape. The highway was clear. There were no apparent traffic violations. The speed of the car was not excessive.

The only law broken was a law of nature. Because one man didn't get the sleep he needed, another man was put to sleep forever.

Driving Course For Hi Students

TWO CHANGES MADE IN THE TEACHING STAFF FOR COMING YEAR

Klemme Schools Will Offer A Driving Course And Manual Training

Mr. Charles Fischer has been added to the High School faculty for next year as Manual Training and Auto Driving instructor.

Mr. Fischer, who is a graduate of Westman College, is a War II Veteran, is married and has three children.

The Driving Course, which he will teach, is entirely new in the Klemme Schools. With the addition of the automobile driving course, Klemme will be right along side of some of the larger schools in the State. A special equipped automobile will be used in this course of instruction. Both the mechanics of good driving and automobile safety will be taught in the course.

New Grade Teacher

Miss Shirley Gustafson, who has been on the teaching staff, resigned her position as 5th grade teacher in order to return to college for further education. Miss Jean Manners, who is presently teaching at Ledyard, will take Miss Gustafson's place in the Klemme schools.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Ordinarily, you don't pay much attention to bonfires around the neighborhood.

With leaves, waste paper and other debris to dispose of at cleaning time, outdoor fires are a quick, easy, economical way to get rid of useless trash.

But these "innocent" bonfires caused $145,320 damage in Iowa alone last year, besides an unknown number of personal injuries.

That's why your Iowa Safety Congress reminds you: Open fires are dangerous! Carelessness with bonfires can bring tragedy to your family and destruction to your home.

Next time you light a bonfire, remember these "Safety Sake" reminders:

Burn leaves and trash in an enclosed burner.
Do not burn on windy days.
Never leave a fire unattended or half burned.
Burn only small amounts at one time.
Do not use gasoline or other inflammable liquid to start or hasten a fire.
Keep children away.

If clothing ignites, do not run. Roll on the ground, or wrap yourself in any available covering material.

MR. AND MRS. JACOB HESS CELEBRATE 25TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY

Friends and relatives pleasently surprised Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hess Sunday afternoon when they came to their home to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. A buffet lunch was served which included a 3 tier cake baked for the occasion.

Those present were Mrs. Rose Fritzel, Mr. and Mrs. Verner Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Hummel and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hummel and family and Marie Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nuehring and Donnie of Belmond; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Nuehring and Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fairbanks and girls, Mrs. Joseph Rowe and David, Mrs. Orvall Nuehring and Mike all of Mason City and Mrs. Annie Miller of Chicago, Ill. A purse of money was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Hess.

Art Wellemeyer Remodeling Office In Furniture Store

Last week end Art Wellemeyer made some drastic changes in the appearance of his office quarters at his furniture store. Art gave his office a modernistic touch by installing two circular counters and a flat counter which encloses his office. He is also installing filing cabinets and shelving and when completed Mr. Wellemeyer will have a very nice office.

He still has some more remodeling and some finishing to do in the main first floor room of his store where most of his line of furniture will be displayed soon.

Under The Circus Big Top Tent

JUNIORS ENTERTAINED THE SENIORS AT ANNUAL BANQUET MAY 12

Circus Theme Carried Out In Decorations, Menu And Program

The Annual Junior-Senior Banquet was held at the Klemme High School auditorium on Saturday evening.

The Juniors had the gym decorated to represent the "big top" of a circus, complete with a "side show" tent and a ticket selling booth. Clowns, ballons, and confetti serpentine strips completed the decorations. Individual tables were centered with a merry-go-round and a saw-dust "ring" in the center of the big top completed the circus theme. It was one of the cleverest decorating themes in many years and the Juniors are to be complimented for their resourcefulness.

Circus Menu

Just what the actual food was is anyone's guess but the menu was as follows: Peanuts and Popcorn, Hot Dogs, Cotton Candy, Hot Fudge, Confetti, Green Ballons, Tiger Tails, Monkey Ears, Frog Legs, Fat Ladies' Special, Ice Cream Bars, Root Beer and Lemonade!

The Program

The Banquet Program was also carried out in the circus theme as follows:

Teacher, Pupils Have Picnic

Mrs. Barkema Honored By Pupils At Liberty No. 7

The pupils at Liberty No. 7 school held a surprise party on Friday afternoon for their teacher, Mrs. Leo Barkema, who will teach in the Klemme school next year.

Mrs. Herman Meintz had baked an angel food cake for the occasion and all enjoyed a lunch of ice cream and cake. The pupils presented their teacher with a nice farewell gift.

Graduates As Nurse At The Deaconess Hospital At Marshalltown

Miss Esther Hartbeck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Les Hartbeck, was one of twelve young ladies who graduated from the School of Nursing at the Evangelical Deaconess Hospital at Marshalltown Sunday.

The graduation exercises were held Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock at the Central Christian Church in Marshalltown.

Deloris Karsjens Named Miss Klemme For Festival

DELORIS KARSJENS
—Miss Klemme

Deloris Karsjens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Karsjens of Klemme, will represent this school and community at the North Iowa Band Festival in Mason City June 12.

Deloris will be graduated from the Klemme high school this spring. She was voted queen candidate for the festival by the band of the school. She is assistant editor of the school paper, members of the girls' glee club, active in junior and senior plays, has been a class officer and sings in her church choir.

An ardent sports fan, she keeps a school activity scrap book. During her junior year she worked part time in a grocery store. Attending movies is a favorite pastime of the Klemme candidate. After graduation she plans to attend business college.

The 45-piece Klemme band will also be entered in the festival to march in the parade, boost its queen candidate and participate in the massed band concert at Roosevelt field. The school and town officials joining in bringing the entries here are T. G. Ahrenkiel, superintendent of schools; W. E. Patterson, principal; Virgil Cook, mayor; Glen Terhufen, president of the school board, and Mrs. Gracka Gerardi, president of the Music Mothers association.

Storm Lake's business district was flooded recently, when storm sewers backed up. Nothing daunted, Chamber of Commerce secretary Bill McCuen maintained business as usual, in high boots, although his office floor was under 18 inches of water.

Wear A Poppy Help A Veteran

LOCAL AUXILIARY TO SPONSOR POPPY SALE MAY 26TH

The Klemme American Legion Auxiliary will again sponsor the annual pre-Memorial Day Poppy sale in Klemme on Saturday, May 26th.

Buy a poppy and wear it on Memorial Day. By so doing you will honor the war dead and aid the living disabled veterans and his family. The making of the replica of the wild poppy has provided gainful employment and valuable occupational therapy for thousands of veterans in hospitals and convalescent workshops in all parts of the country during the past winter and early spring.

Iowa has 1,250,000 poppies ready for distribution, made by 263 Iowa veterans.

Buy a poppy, wear it Memorial Day.

Cub Scout Pack Organized Here

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN ORGANIZING CUB SCOUT PACK HERE

Fourteen Prospective Cubs And Parents At First Meeting

Monday evening 14 prospective Cub Scouts and their parents met at the Evangelical and Reformed Church to discuss the forming of a Cub Scout Pack in Klemme. The Pack will be sponsored by the Adult Bible Class, and is open to all young boys in the community, rural and town alike.

Another meeting is called for next Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at which time the Pack will be organized. All mothers and their young boys are asked to come. Mr. Dremmel has volunteered his services as Cub Master.

4-H CLUB LEADERS TALKING ABOUT 4-H FAIR BUILDING

The Hancock County 4-H leaders are talking to their 4-H clubs about the proposed 4-H Fair Building program. Some local clubs are planning to raise some funds for the buildings. Local leaders and the Farm Bureau director in each township were selected to set up the township money raising campaign.

The County Extension office will be looking for voluntary donations.

The Garner Chamber of Commerce is working on the site financing. Let's not have to be asked to give to this worthy endeavor for 4-H and FFA exhibitors.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: II Kings 18—20; II Chronicles 29-30; Isaiah 31.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 46.

Dangers of Wartime

Lesson for May 20, 1951

NOT all the dangers of wartime are to life and limb. More serious dangers threaten the minds, the attitudes, the characters, the souls of those who make war. Some of our readers will find no war a good war; others will draw a line between wars that are justified and wars that are not. But no matter how well-justified a war may be, its dangers to mind and heart are just as real as if it were not justified at all.

Dr. Foreman

"—To Decide Who Is Left"

ONE danger which war-making brings is that it gets everyone thinking that might makes right. Now might does not really make right and never did; otherwise the champion heavy-weight would always be the best man, morally, in all the world, and the most helpless invalid would be the most wicked.

Along with this "might-is-right" idea is another one close to it: that the best way to persuade others to our way of thinking or to our way of living is to beat them over the head. That has never succeeded yet. You know yourself that you were never persuaded that way. Fists and guns and armies can make people change their tune, but never change their minds.

The way to change people is through their minds and consciences and hearts. One act of international goodwill, justice or generosity is more potent than tons of high explosives. The sending of food, services, skilled help such as doctors and teachers, does more to win friends than any number of armed alliances. The Christian way is always the way of love.

Topsy-Turvy Land

THE waging of war creates illusions. Besides the one just mentioned, of confusing might with right, there is this one too: a nation at war lives in a kind of topsy-turvy land. What is of greatest value is rated low, and things of little value are made much of.

The longer a war goes on, the more of a habit this crooked scale of values becomes. For instance normally we value life above all things. Violent death is something to make the headlines, and causing death to others is something from which we all shrink. But in wartime we are all tuned, so to speak, to the business of killing.

Whatever genius such a nation may have, whatever productive power, goes mainly to building up the military "potential," devising more and better ways of inflicting sudden death.

Dr. Charles Leber tells of remembering, when a boy, how his father and mother read in the paper about the sinking of the steamship Titanic, which went down with the loss of over 1,500 lives. It was breakfast time when they read the paper; but neither father nor mother could finish the meal.

That was before World War I. But now, forty years later, how many people would lose their appetite at reading of the death of a mere 1,500 persons? We are so used to slaughter that as Dr. Leber puts it, we have become brutalized, we have "lost our sense of compassionate shame."

The Illusion of Violence

TWO last illusions pursue the warring nation. One is that war is normal. In reality, however necessary war may ever be, it is never normal; but let it run too long or come too often, and people take it for granted.

The other illusion is that it is possible by war to end wars, that by one more war, one more victory, peace will be secured once and for all. It never works.

"The one thing you cannot do with bayonets is to sit upon them." Arnold J. Toynbee has warned us (see his "War and Civilization") that "the ultimate failure of all attempts to win salvation by the sword . . . is demonstrated in history."

He might have taken his text from Isaiah 31, or the history of Israel and Judah, for Isaiah was saying much the same thing to both Hezekiah and Sennacherib. But neither one understood him; and so their nations died. For whenever any nation puts its supreme faith in force, and neglects the character of its citizens, or the justice of its institutions, then it has forgotten God.

Appetizing Ideas

ONE OF THE nicest ways to entertain is just to ask friends to drop in for a snack. If you've been invited to a church supper or a large family get-together, have friends drop in to visit you, and then all go together.

Snacking is a popular and informal way of entertaining during afternoons and evenings. Nibbling while you chat or play games, listen to music or watch programs is an easy way to serve food. Just put out a tray of snacks along with a pitcher of chilled fruit or vegetable juice and let guests help themselves.

- 2 cups flour
- Pinch of salt

Mix together all ingredients gently and place in refrigerator until dough is ready to be handled. Roll out dough and place in 2 8-inch pie tins. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 10 minutes or until half done.

Batter:
- 4 large onions, diced
- 6 strips bacon, diced
- 2 whole eggs
- 1 egg yolk
- ¾ cup sour cream
- 1 teaspoon chopped chives
- Pinch of caraway seed
- Salt and pepper to taste

Fry bacon; when crisp, drain off some of the fat, leaving the remainder for cooking the onions. When yellow and soft, drain off fat and add beaten eggs, bacon, sour cream, seasoning and chives. Pour into pie crust, partially baked, add the caraway seeds and bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 12 to 15 minutes. Serve warm.

A LAZY SUSAN is an excellent way of serving snack, but if you don't have one, arrange four or five small pottery bowls on a round tray and fill each bowl with a different appetizer. Place a bowl of potato chips in the center for dipping into the "dunk" mixtures.

Cream Cheese-Pickle "Dunk"

Blend 1 3-ounce package cream cheese with 2 tablespoons milk. Stir in ¼ cup sweet pickle relish. Cover and refrigerate until served.

Deviled Ham "Dunk"

Blend 2 3-ounce cans of deviled ham with 2 tablespoons mayonnaise and 1 tablespoon prepared mustard. (Liver or tongue spread may be used in place of the deviled ham.) Cover and refrigerate until served.

Veal Loaf Triangles

Spread thin slices of canned veal loaf with a soft sharp cheese and stack three together; chill. Cut into triangles and spear with a toothpick. Wrap well in waxed paper and refrigerate until serving time.

Deviled Ham Pastries

Cut tiny rounds from rich pastry. Place 1 teaspoon deviled ham on half a round. Moisten the edges with water and fold over. Crimp with a fork and prick the top. Bake in a very hot (450°) oven about 10 minutes. These may be made ahead, refrigerated and baked at the time of serving. Or, bake and reheat before serving.

Bacon Wrapped Olives or Pineapple

Wrap well-drained, canned pineapple chunks or stuffed olives in half slices of bacon; secure with toothpick. Broil slowly, turning once until bacon is crisp. These may be prepared for broiling, wrapped in waxed paper and refrigerated. Broil just before serving time.

Delicious Balls
(Makes 2 dozen)
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
- 1 tablespoon fat
- 1 pound finely ground lamb
- ¼ cup canned tomato juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- Dash of nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley

Cook onion and green pepper in fat until onion is golden. Combine with remaining ingredients. Mix well. Form into bite-sized balls. Cook in 2 tablespoons fat until light brown on all sides. Serve hot on toothpicks.

Crab-Meat Rolls
(Makes 2 dozen)
- ½ cup tomato juice
- 1 well-beaten egg
- 1 cup dry bread crumbs
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper
- ½ teaspoon chopped parsley
- ½ teaspoon chopped celery leaves
- 1 6½-ounce can crab meat, flaked
- 12 strips bacon, cut in half crosswise

Mix tomato juice and egg. Add crumbs, seasonings, parsley, celery leaves, and crab meat. Mix thoroughly. Roll into finger lengths; wrap each in half strip of bacon. Broil, turning frequently to brown evenly. Serve hot.

A HOT "dunking sauce" can be especially nice if you want to pass it around for fresh, canned or frozen shrimp propped on toothpicks:

Creole Sauce
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 1 can condensed tomato soup
- ½ cup water
- 1 teaspoon vinegar
- Dash of black pepper
- Dash of tabasco sauce

Cook onion and green pepper in shortening in skillet. Add remaining ingredients; cook over low heat for about 10 minutes to blend flavors.

LYNN SAYS:
Make Simple Suppers Satisfying Meals

A cheese sandwich gives you a hearty and tasty supper if you spread the bread enclosing it in a bit of mustard. Dip the sandwich in egg and milk mixture and fry until golden brown. Serve with broiled Canadian bacon.

Canned corned beef hash becomes something of a treat when you brown it in the skillet until crisp and serve with scrambled eggs over the top.

Canned Spanish rice makes a quick stuffing for parboiled green pepper halves. Top with a slice of American cheese and bake in tomato sauce.

You can cream some canned lobster quickly if you're in a hurry for supper, and serve on easily cooked instant rice.

Marinated leftover vegetables can make a fine salad to serve with slices of cold boiled ham, spread with cream cheese. Place a dill pickle strip on top of the cheese and roll the ham.

Vets Carry Heavy Diamond Load

By GRANTLAND RICE

SIXTEEN major-league ball clubs are under way again in two of the closest-looking pennant races the grizzled old game has seen in many seasons. In the absence of important rookies through the last ten years, the main burden will fall upon veterans, who have been writing most of the story from one campaign to another since 1941.

This means Stan Musial, Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Country Slaughter, Phil Rizzuto, Pee Wee Reese, Eddie Stankey, Bob Feller, Hal Newhouser, Ewell Blackwell, Johnny Mize and many, many more.

Grantland Rice

Baseball is now, in the main, an old man's game with only a few younger stars crowding into the picture. Wars and drafts have more than cut into its natural growth. The scene has changed only slightly from a year ago on this April date.

In 1950 the pennant contenders in the American League were New York, Boston, Detroit, and Cleveland. The same four are rated in the hunt today with Red Rolfe's Tigers rated farther back, due largely to the loss of their star young pitcher, Art Houtteman.

Of these four contenders the Boston Red Sox have drawn the strongest help in the persons of Lou Boudreau, a fine infielder and an inspirational field leader, plus Bill Wight and Ray Scarborough, two first-class pitchers.

Tom Yawkey, the Red Sox owner, is a very stubborn person when he sets out for a goal. He also has what it takes to reach that goal, if you give him time enough and a few breaks. The race in the American League among the Yankees, Red Sox and Indians should carry deep into September's stretch

In the National League a new entry has moved into the picture as far as the pennant race is concerned. This new challenger is Leo Durocher's New York Giants.

The Giants now move alongside with the Dodgers and the Phillies, possibly the soundest club in their circuit. Chuck Dressen's Dodgers have the best team in baseball, outside of the pitchers' corral. Here they are weak, or at least uncertain.

The Two Races

The National League has the better chance for a keener pennant race. Outside of Giants, Dodgers, and Phillies, rated for a photo finish, the Braves and Cardinals can be quite annoying. Both can cause deep trouble and bring much anguish to the leading contenders. So can Luke Sewell's Cincinnati Reds who have been moving up steadily with a younger ball club that should now be about ready. Ten- and twelve-year veterans can't rule this game forever.

The Phillies and Reds have most of the new material baseball has collected recently and this may begin to show for the Reds this summer. It won a pennant for the Phillies a year ago. With Curt Simmons around, I think the Phillies would have won again. They may, anyway.

There are many weak spots in the leading teams from both leagues. No one knows yet how many games the brilliant Joe DiMaggio, a great ballplayer, can handle. No one knows how long Ted Williams' shattered elbow will stay in place. Stan Musial seems to be better set for another year of stardom than anyone else.

It is quite possible that Lou Boudreau will have more effect upon his mates than any other single player. For Boudreau moves into a lethargic squad that needs waking up. If the Red Sox can't win the pennant this season, Tom Yawkey might as well fire the entire squad and start from scratch again. The rejuvenation of the Giants will be one of baseball's most helpful features. The game has needed them badly in past years. The feats of magic to be shown again by the remarkable Casey Stengel will be something to watch. You can be sure that Stengel will get as much out of his line-up as any manager now in baseball. At least he has for the last two years.

The Case of Johnny Mize

In Mantle and Morgan, the Stengel Yankees have possibly the two best rookies in either league. It might work out that way. They have another member of the "M" club in a fellow known as Mize, who isn't a rookie.

It has been a matter of 21 years since Big John, the demon of Demorest, Ga., reported to Greensboro as a first baseman.

In 1931 Mize was batting .337 and he has been a .300 or not far from .300 hitter ever since. He ran into a streak of 15 consecutive years with various teams when he batted an average of .330.

Big John has always been a gentle, easy-going fellow and practically everyone who knows him likes him. He never had the speed to beat out hits after the manner of Cobb, DiMaggio, Jackson, Speaker, Williams and other star hitters. His hits had to come the hard way—earned with his bat and not his legs.

Certain Stains Won't Bleach

Although sunshine is one of the best and safest bleaches for white clothes after laundering, and even though it often fades colors, it may have just the opposite effect on some common stains. Margaret Furry, textile chemist of the U. S. Deparment of Agriculture, has issued a warning along this line:

"The heat of strong summer sun may set and darken stains containing tannin, such as those from cherries, peaches, pears, plums, soft drinks or the mustard served on hot dogs or ham. Play clothes, sunsuits, house dresses or aprons, even bathing suits worn at beach picnics, may be permanently marked by leaving these stains exposed to the sun."

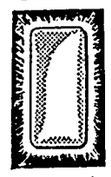
It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD



● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

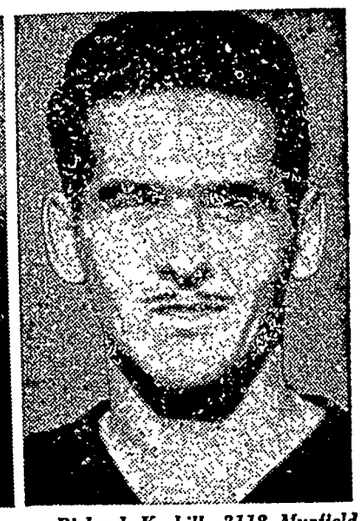
HADACOL HELPS MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Suffering Stomach Distress, Aches and Pains, Weak, Run-down Conditions and Nervousness When Due To Deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron

Mrs. Anna Lavergne, Church Point, Louisiana: "You don't know how wonderful it feels to be in such good condition—after feeling run-down. I had a very poor appetite—in fact, food didn't agree with me at all. I had a hard time sleeping nights . . . sometimes I would stay awake until one or two in the morning and then the next day I would feel tired and groggy all day long. You have no idea how terrible I felt. Now all this is gone . . . yes, now that I have been taking HADACOL, I feel wonderful. I get lots of good, sound sleep, have a fine appetite and just lots of energy. I can eat any kind of food now and it doesn't bother me a bit. I just can't begin to thank HADACOL."

F. W. Horton, 108 74th Ave., Houston, Texas, says about his little son: "Lee was very weak and run-down and just didn't want to eat at all. We heard about HADACOL and decided that was what Lee needed. After he started taking HADACOL his appetite picked up right away. He started gaining weight and eats real well now, and has been feeling real good. HADACOL has been good for Lee and I heartily recommend it to everyone."

HADACOL has helped many children suffering weak, run-down conditions when due to deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron. If your child is puny and run-down due to such deficiencies, HADACOL can help. HADACOL is recommended by many doctors.



Richard Krabill, 3118 Murfield Road, Toledo 14, Ohio: "I am an apprentice pharmacist and I go to the University of Toledo. Going to school and working until 9:30 gets pretty tiresome. I was getting tired and run-down keeping pace with all I had to do. Being married and having a family, I am compelled to work after school. I work in a pharmacy here in Toledo. After selling HADACOL here in the store, I decided I'd try it. You have no idea how much it has picked me up. I'm telling you truthfully, HADACOL is the answer to all my tiredness from sitting up late at night doing homework after I come home from work. Already I have won customers on HADACOL. I am 31 and a veteran of World War II."

HADACOL CAN HELP YOU . . .

. . . if your system lacks these essential elements, you will be amazed at the wonderful results HADACOL can bring you, as it has to thousands of other fine folks who suffered a deficiency of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

HADACOL is that wonderful new preparation—promising blessed relief for your indigestion, stomach disturbances, (gas, heartburn, sour "risings" after meals), as well as that general run-down condition, and annoying aches and pains, if due to a lack of Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin in your system.

Don't go through life suffering with conditions caused by such deficiencies when relief may be as close at hand as the nearest drugstore for sufferers from these deficiencies. Buy HADACOL today. Trial size bottle only $1.25. Large family economy size, $3.50. Refuse substitutes. There's only one true and genuine HADACOL. Sold on a strict money-back guarantee—you'll feel great after the first few bottles you take or your money will be refunded. SPRING CONFERENCE TO BE HELD AT EMMETSBURG FOR AUXILIARY

Protection for Lambs

Widespread use of a new vaccine for prevention of overeating disease in lambs has verified earliest reports on its value. Livestock health leaders regard the vaccine as one of the most helpful developments in recent years and predict that it will play a big part in bringing more lambs to market. Various drugs, including sulfur and bicarbonate of soda, also have been used for the prevention of overeating disease, but none of these remedies is considered as good as the vaccine. This disease, also called enterotoxemia, has long been a top-ranking killer of feedlot lambs, causing heavier losses in some sections than all other lamb diseases combined.

Physical Science Workers

Since the war positions for persons trained in the physical sciences have been readily available. It seems likely that for the next few years there will continue to be a good demand for scientifically trained people, although local conditions and individual circumstances are factors that cannot be assessed in advance. There is some indication that in the near future the supply of engineers may exceed the demand. If so, it may affect somewhat the number of scientific positions available, particularly in physics.

Cotton Insect Control

The bureau of entomology and plant quarantine in its eighth cotton insect survey report for 1950 stated that "while insecticides needed for cotton insect control are in close balance, there is nothing which now indicates that crop losses need to occur because the farmer is unable to secure insecticides that will effect control. "Farmers are urged to use insecticides wisely and apply any kinds of materials of established value if the kind they prefer cannot be secured." Producers are warned to watch cotton fields closely for boll weevil migration and to apply insecticides in order to protect what already has been accomplished by the poisoning programs this season.

Avoid Skippiness in Paint

Every industry has its own terminology which sometimes seems strange to the uninitiated. The paint industry is no exception. The word "skippy," for instance, refers to a paint that is too heavy-bodied for uniform application and causes the brush to skip on the surface, leaving some spots insufficiently coated and others too heavily coated Paint, once opened and stored a long while, sometimes becomes overthick. Your dealer, or the information on the label, will tell you how to thin it to avoid skippiness.

LEGAL NOTICE

WEED NOTICE

TO ALL LAND OWNERS, OCCUPANTS, AND PERSONS IN POSSESSION OR CONTROL, INCLUDING RAILROAD LANDS AND LOTS WITHIN HANCOCK COUNTY, IOWA:--

The Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, in an adjourned April meeting held on May 7, 1951, passed the following resolution, to-wit

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa:

That pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 317 Code of Iowa, 1950, it is hereby ordered·

1. That each owner and each person in the possession or control of any land or lots in Hancock, County, Iowa, shall cut, burn or otherwise destroy all noxious weeds thereon, as defined in this chapter, at such times in each year and in such manner as shall prevent said weeds from blooming or coming to maturity, and shall keep said lands free from such growth of any other weeds as shall render the street or highways adjoining said land unsafe for public travel. Noxious weeds shall be cut or otherwise destroyed on or before the following dates and as often thereafter as is necessary to prevent seed production

GROUP 1 June 15, 1951, for leafy spurge, perennial peppergrass, sour dock, smooth, dock sheep sorrel

GROUP 2 June 30, 1951, for Canada thistle, Russian knapweed, quack grass, buckhorn, wild mustard.

GROUP 3 July 15, 1951, for field bindweed, wild carrot.

GROUP 4 July 30, 1951, for horse nettle, perennial sow thistle, butter print, puncture vine and colklebur.

2. That each person and owner in the possession or control of any lands in Hancock County infested with any primary noxious weeds including quack grass, perennial sow thistle, Canada thistle, field bindweed, horse nettle, leafy spurge, perennial peppergrass, Russian knapweed, shall adopt a program of weed destruction prescribed by the weed commissioner, which in five years may be expected to destroy and will immediately keep under control such infestations of said primary noxious weeds.

3 That all weeds other than primary noxious weeds on all county trunk, primary and local county roads, and between the fence lines thereof shall be mowed by the adjoining property owner to prevent seed production on or before July 15, 1951

4 That if the owner or person in possession or control of any land in Hancock County, Iowa, fail to comply with the foregoing orders, the weed commissioner shall cause this to be done and the expense of said work including costs of serving notice and other costs if any, to be assessed against the land and the owners thereof

5. That the County Auditor be and he is hereby directed to cause notice of the making and entering of the foregoing order by publication in each of the official newspapers of Hancock County, Iowa.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisors Daniels, who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Bird Whereupon the Chairman, F J Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call the vote thereon is Clint Daniels, Clarence Bird, and F J Schoun, Aye Nays, none Whereupon the Chairman declared the resolution duly adopted

Oldest Christian Monastery

St. Catherine's monastery, at the foot of Mount Sinai, is believed to be the world's oldest Christian monastery in the world. Legend says a church was built on its site as early as the fourth century, through the aid of Queen Helena, mother of Constantine the Great. Erected as a refuge for early Christians, it rose at the traditional site of the Burning Bush, from which the Bible says the angel of the Lord spoke to Moses.

ARITHMETIC CLASS—But before Miss Hueneman can permit herself to become greatly excited about her trip to Europe, there are arithmetic lessons among other things to be completed. Pictured at the blackboard from the left are Lois Hummel, Joann Beier, Janice Beier and Eugene Zwald, all members of the third grade. Another third grader, James Beier, also was at the blackboard, but he was hidden behind Zwald.

TO GERMANY—Miss Lois Hueneman, left, uses a globe to show members of her 6th grade class the approximate place in which she will spend the summer. Others in the picture from the left are Winola Zwald, June Mayland and Roland Hummel. Miss Hueneman will spend the summer in Germany through the International Youth exchange program.

To Spend Summer In Germany As Youth Exchange

Lois Hueneman, rural school teacher from Hancock County, will leave for Europe in June

Lois Hueneman finds it hard to believe, but in a few short weeks she'll be crossing the Atlantic en route to Europe and a summer on some farm in Germany The attractive, young Hancock County rural school teacher is one of the two Iowans selected to visit Europe under the International Youth exchange program.

The school term at Liberty No 8, 4 miles west of Klemme, will end May 23, and Miss Hueneman is scheduled to leave for Europe June 13 Between the time school ends and the sailing date, she is scheduled to visit Iowa State college for a few days to become better acquainted with the extension service and how it functions.

Miss Hueneman also will spend a few days in Washington, D. C., and New York City. All details of her pre-sailing orientation have not been made clear as yet.

No "Joyride"

Miss Hueneman has been told that she'll live and work with a German farm family during the most of the summer. Extension officials have warned her that "it won't be a joyride" —she'll have to work.

The rural school teacher has heard that German women are expected to work in the fields beside the men. But that does not worry her. She has had a wealth of experience on her father's farm 3 miles north of Klemme on highway 69

She has had a hand in about everything there is to do on a North Iowa farm — operating tractors, feeding livestock, etc. She likes nothing better than the farm and the outdoors.

In fact, Miss Hueneman is qualified to teach in elementary grades of city schools, but she prefers the rural school and contacts with rural people A graduate of Garner high school, Miss Hueneman has attended Iowa State Teachers classes at Waldorf College and has enrolled in correspondence courses at the State University of Iowa.

So Miss Hueneman expects to do some work in Europe. But she thinks that the new sights and experiences will be more than adequate compensation.

Return In November

Even New York City and Washington, D. C., will be new to the Hancock county school teacher. And she hopes that she will get to visit London and Paris. She is scheduled to return to the U. S. in November.

During next winter Miss Hueneman will be expected to tour Iowa, visiting with rural youth groups and telling them about her experiences in Germany She plans to use the new 35 m.m. camera given to her by the Garner Chamber of Commerce to take color photos which she can use to illustrate her talks.

Language has been a big problem for many of the Iowa young people who have visited European countries on the exchange program. However, Miss Hueneman expects to have little difficulty while she is in Germany.

Her great grandmother migrated to this country from Germany and the family has retained familiarity with the language. Although Miss Hueneman can speak German, she admits that different dialects may be strange to her.

Fulfillment Of Dream

Miss Hueneman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hueneman. Her trip to Germany will be the realization of one of her childhood ambitions. Ever since a relative visited the country and returned to tell about it she has promised herself that "some day" she would go to Germany.

Miss Hueneman was selected to represent Iowa in Europe on the basis of her outstanding record in 4-H club and rural youth work. She is secretary of the Hancock County R.Y.P. During her 4-H career she was a club officer and a member of a county and district champion demonstration team.

As a 4-H club member, Miss Hueneman's record book was awarded state honors. She has taught Sunday school classes at Peace Reformed Church north of Klemme, and she also sings in that church's choir.

Miss Hueneman is a member of the Iowa State Education association and she has served 2 years on the Hancock County council of teachers.

CATTLE FEEDERS' DAY TO BE JUNE 8 AT ISC

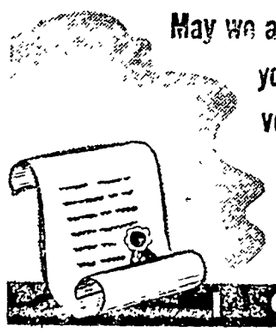
The thirty-third annual Cattle Feeders' Day has been scheduled for Friday, June 8, at Iowa State College, according to C. C. Culbertson, animal husbandry specialist who is in charge of this year's beef feeding experiments. The all-day program will take place at the experimental feeding farm located just south of U. S. Highway 30 on Beech Avenue in Ames

Results of the 1951 feeding trials with urea will be presented and explained during the morning program, which begins at 10 o'clock. In the afternoon, several nationally known livestock men will talk on adjusting to the present beef cattle situation and the feeder cattle outlook for fall.

Several lots of yearling steers have been on feed at the farm since November. They have received urea as a partial or complete substitute for protein supplement.

Appraisers from Chicago will be on hand during the program to appraise the cattle and answer questions about them. Then the profit or loss on cattle receiving these various rations will be figured.

Beef cattle men are urged to bring their wives along to Cattle Feeders' Day, as a special program has been planned for the women. This will be on the central campus of the college and will be under the direction of Paulena Nickell, asscociate dean of the Division of Home Economics.



May we add a footnote to your diploma? The very best of good luck to each of you.

INOCULATION WILL HELP BEAN YIELD

Also Improves Quality Of Soybeans and Straw

Inouclating soybean seed may be more effective in increasing the yield than $20 worth of fertilizer applied per acre. Yet the inoculation can be done for 20 cents an acre.

C. R. Weber, Iowa State College agronomist, reports that tests have shown soybean yields may be increased 30 percent or more by inoculation. In addition, it increases the protein content of the beans, makes them more vigorous and better able to withstand unfavorable early growing conditions, and leaves more nitrogen in the bean straw and roots to be plowed under and enrich the soil after the beans have been combined.

Inoculation adds the bacteria needed for soybeans to form nodules on the roots. The bacteria make it possible for the plants to use the free nitrogen from the air rather than that already in the soil.

Carried By Seed Stores

Good commercial inoculants are available at practically all seed stores or from dealers handling soybean seed. Follow directions on the containers when using inoculants.

It is advisable to inoculate all beans planted on ground where they have never been grown or where they haven't been grown for 3 or 4 years. The practice isn't so necessary if well nodulated beans were in the field within the last 2 or 3 years as the nitrogen-forming bacteria will remain in the soil for a time. If there is any question as to whether or not to inoculate, Weber says it's cheap insurance to do so.

In only relatively recent years, have farmers started treating soybean seed before it is planted. Treating is done to help control soybean disease organisms, thereby improving the germination and stand.

Beats Seed Treatments

Seed treatment generally is not needed in the north central states, which include Iowa, Weber says. It is more generally needed in the southern states where seed of low germination is found.

Treating the seed usually means poorer results from inoculation. This is due to the fact that organic seed treatments prevent the nitrogen-forming bacteria from multiplying or else actually kill them.

There is no positive way to obtain all of the beneficial effects of both seed treatment and inoculation f used at the same time. If seed is high germination, the benefits from the seed treatment usually will be small compared to inoculation, Weber says.

LIBERTY BUSY BEES MET APRIL 21ST

The Liberty Busy Bees 4-H club held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Rachel and Eunice Hueneman on April 21, 1951 at 2:00.

Roll call was answered by 10 members on "How I Can Improve My Posture." This meeting was the Mother and Daughter Tea. Eighteen visitors were present.

Bethel Haberkamp is our Co. officer nominee for Rally Day. Eunice Ruth Hueneman is campaign speaker. Anita Katter and Rachel Hueneman will sing in the County Chorus. Vivian Stromer will help with registration at Rally Day.

Eunice Hueneman and Jeannetta Greiman will attend the 4-H Camp at Clear Lake and Bethel Haberkamp will attend the State 4-H Convention.

It was decided that at our next meeting, which will be held May 19, at the home of Bethel Haberkamp, we would hold a local good grooming contest to determine the 2 girls to represent our club at the County Grooming Contest.

Eunice Hueneman gave a talk on 'Accessories." A demonstration on "Removing Stains from Fabrics" was given by Winola Zwald.

Storm

Mrs. Manville Ask, of near Osage, was in the brooder house lighting a stove, when a high windstorm collapsed the entire structure. Her husband found her dazed, under a pile of boards and splinters. Her injuries were not serious.

COOL WEATHER, MORE LIVESTOCK KEEPING FEED PRICES UP

Cool weather has slowed pasture growth and kept demand for feed strong this spring, reports county extension director, Paul Henderson.

Last year, most millfeed prices dropped in May and early June when grass became generally available and feeding tapered off. However, the current outlook for millfeed prices indicates a less than usual spring price decline, Henderson says.

Iowa State College farm economist W. A. Pearce thinks feed demand is likely to continue above normal with near record numbers of poultry and hogs on feed and a heavy feeding of dairy cows.

Feed mixing plants currently are operating at capacity, with the peak in feed demand yet to come in most sections of the county.

Henderson reports that most oil meals have maintained a strong price trend in recent weeks. Linseed meal has been the only exception, with production 20 percent above last year.

Soybean meal production is reported to be about 30 percent higher than a year ago, but producers are holding onto soybeans and a shortage of supplies for future processing has pushed prices up in recent weeks.

However, the long run outlook for soybeans and oil meals is for increasing supplies and probably lower average prices for the 1951-'52 marketing year.

Metallurgical Specimens

A simple, inexpensive method for mounting metallurgical specimens at temperatures only slightly above room temperature and without the external application of heat has been developed by Denton L. Smith of the national bureau of standards. The technique employs a denture material of modified acrylic resin as the mounting. This material consists of a polymer and nonomer which, when mixed in the proper proportions, will polymerize or set under pressure at room temperature. As the amount of heat generated by the polymerization reaction can be controlled by varying the amount of resin present, the new procedure makes it possible to mount a wide variety of specimens for polishing and microscopic study without disturbing the crystal structure.

Ownership of Farmlands

Private individuals owned nearly 85 per cent of farm land in United States, according to a recent bureau of agricultural economics study Nearly 6 per cent belonged to corporations, another 6 per cent was public and 3 per cent was owned by Indians. Since farm land can be owned by practically anyone, owners were engaged in a wide variety of occupations. About 65 per cent of the owners of farm land were farmers, 8 per cent retired farmers, 3 per cent housewives, 10 per cent business-professional and 14 per cent clerical-laborers. Anderson found that 41 per cent of the farm acreage of the United States was in farms of 1,000 acres or more

Blackleg in Cattle

Blackleg is caused by a spore-forming germ which can live for years in the soil. It may enter an animal's body through small cuts and punctures in the skin, or through grazing. "Suspect blackleg," an American Foundation for Animal Health bulletin urges, "if young cattle develop a high fever, lose appetite, become lame and show great depression. Typical swellings caused by the disease give off a crinkling, tissue-paper feeling if they are touched. Also of great importance is to burn or bury deeply under lime the carcasses of animals which have died

Heart Patients Freed From Tasteless Diets

Evidence that heart disease victims can be freed from tasteless diets by means of the chemical technique used to soften water has been presented. The technique should be employed only under the supervision of a physician.

Patients suffering from heart conditions, high blood pressure and related ailments tend to develop dropsy, or edema—an excessive accumulation of water in the tissues — according to a report by Evan W. McChesney, Ph.D., Frederick C. Nachod, Sc.D. and Maurice L. Tainter, M.D., of the Sterling-Winthrop research institute, Rensselaer, N. Y.

Until recently, it was widely believed that the only way to counteract this tendancy was to limit drastically the amount of water given to the patient to drink. However, according to the report, it has been found that the real difficulty is the inablity of the patient to eliminate enough sodium, such as is contained in common table salt.

This means, the paper said, that it actually is helpful to the patient to drink large amounts of water, the important thing being to reduce the amount of sodium salts in his body by washing them out with water and also by limiting their intake.

"The latter can be accomplished by special diets almost free of salt, or by using salt substitutes," the paper pointed out, "but such diets are tiresome and almost any form of relief would be welcome."

American Rats Decline On South India's Diet

Not even rats can get along on the rice diet of South India's hungry poor; at least American rats can't. An evidence is the poor hunched creatures who starved and suffered for mankind at the Ohio state university in nutrition studies conducted there by Mrs. Rajammal P. Devadas of India.

Working with 281 albino rats, Mrs. Devadas sought to analyze the diet deficiencies of the poor population of her country and to develop suggestions for practical improvements. The rats were divided into 41 groups. A basal diet similar to the rice diet commonly consumed by the poor people in South India was fed to some of the rats, and rice diets with various supplements were fed to the others. Comparisons of the rats in different groups were made on the basis of growth, food consumption, liver vitamin A, and observations on activity, appearance and dermal conditions. Those on the basal diet showed poor growth, consumed small amounts of food, and developed hunched postures, roughened coats, and photophobia.

The study shows that the poor rice diet is primarily deficient in vitamin A, riboflavin, and some other unidentified factors present in eggyolk. Increased production of protective foods, enrichment and fortification of foods are the general areas of improvement which Mrs. Devadas expects to work on in India.

RITES SATURDAY FOR GOODELL MAN

Funeral services for Heiko Brass, 54, were held Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Goodell Evangelical Church with the Rev. A. T. Rollene of the Fundamental Baptist Church of Belmond officiating in the absence of the Goodell pastor.

Heiko Brass, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herman Brass, was born June 14, 1896, at Goodell on the place which is now the Will Janssen farm. He has lived in the Goodell vicinity his entire life.

A few years ago he was married to Wanenta Spurgeon Wessels of Mason City.

In January Mr. Brass suffered a heart attack and received treatment since that time at the Belmond hospital. Two weeks ago he entered Mercy hospital at Mason City where he died at noon Wednesday.

Survivors are his wife, son, Russell, two sisters, Mattie Brass, R. N., who is studying for her master's degree in Ann Arbor, Mich., and Mrs. Lloyd Van Buskirk of Goodell. His parents and a brother preceded him.

The Fulton funeral home of Belmond was in charge with burial in the Goodell cemetery.

Apathy Toward Possible Atomic Bomb Attack Noted by Officials

(The first of two articles.)

During the last few days in Washington, D. C., officials have been considering the most important problem in the United States—the lives of its citizens.

"An extreme apathy—the 'it can't happen here' attitude—has been the reaction of the public toward the many bulletins we have sent out concerning the possibility of atomic attack on this country," said Dr. Richard Gerstell, consultant to the federal office of civilian defense, and author of the book, "How to Survive an Atom Bomb."

A cross-country check on homeowners revealed that initial steps toward individual household safety had not been heeded. This "lack of interest" on the part of the citizens forced Millard Caldwell, Washington's administrator of the civilian defense program, to call a nationwide emergency conference on the problem of indifference to the need of precaution.

Demonstrating interior fireproof housekeeping. Resident of private house cleans attic of refuse, papers, etc., in order to minimize possible problem of fire caused by atom attack.

HOME-OWNERS are urged to immediately enforce the following basic steps:

From hardware or notions counters, get hold-down brackets for Venetian blinds. These tiny brackets will hold the blind firmly to the window sill; the blind will serve as the best window covering not only in stopping flying debris, but in deflecting a great part of the initial, scorching heat flash.

Rid your yard, your basement, your house and attic, of any combustible piles of trash, such as old papers or a basement congestion of furniture storage; it's especially important to clear your basement because it will be your best shelter area in the event of attack.

Decide exactly which area of your home will be the most effective shelter against a bombing attack. Make it a permanent decision so that you and your family will automatically gather there if a panic should start.

Venetian blinds are best window covering if bomb should fall. They protect against flying debris and will also deflect a great part of initial, scorching heat flash. Don all heavy clothing possible for all parts of the body; it's added insurance against burns or flying objects.

NANCY OLSON is going to look just as glamorous in her WAC uniforms, in Warners' "Force of Arms", as she does in her own clothes, which is saying a good deal, because young Nancy is a pretty glamorous person. Army officials have assigned a WAC officer to the picture, to supervise her outfits. She is co-starring with William Holden and Frank Lovejoy in this picture, her last before she retires to await the stork's arrival. There's a beautiful home all ready for the new baby—the farm formerly owned by Burgess Meredith and Paulette Goddard, not too far from New York, which Nancy's husband, Alan Lerner, the "Brigadoon" composer, bought last year.

Screen star Ruth Hussey has turned down a five-year TV deal offered by NBC, at $1250 per half hour film—said it would interfere with her movie career. Also, she is likely to appear in one of next season's stage hits.

Susan Peters, star of NBC-TV's "Miss Susan", was given orders by her 4½-year-old Timmy for adopting a sister for him. She must be his size, be able to walk, talk and fight—but most important, she must be a boy!

Gary Lee Jackson, aged 7, will play Helen Hayes' neighbor in "My Son John." Gary began his movie career at four, has made half a dozen pictures. His brother Curtis, 14, and his sister Sherry, 9, are also movie veterans.

THE FICTION CORNER

SECRETS ARE BAD

By Richard H. Wilkinson

NO ONE caught on to my secret but Sheila. Sheila was smart. Pretty, too. She had smoky gray eyes and titian hair and pure white skin.

We met at a winter sports house-party up in New Hampshire, and the next Monday, back in Boston, I took her to lunch. "I've some friends I'd like to have you meet," I said. "They have an apartment out on the Fenway. Suppose we run out tonight?" She looked at me with a sudden flash of her smoky eyes, and I said quickly: "Sounds like a stuffy evening, I suppose It won't be. Bette and Gill are O K. You'll like them."

3-Minute Fiction

"I'd love to go," she said. And so that night we called on Bette and Gill.

On the way home Sheila said she'd had a grand time, which is why I've always marveled at Bette and Gill, because we'd done practically nothing.

"I like them," Sheila said. "They're married and they seem happy."

"They are happy. They've been married six years and they're happier than when they started. I've known 'em both since high school."

Well, during the six months that followed I saw a lot of Sheila, and together we saw a lot of Gill and Bette. One night I went up there without her, and you'd think those two had been waiting for an opportunity to get me alone.

"Say, listen," Gill said, "you're getting old. I mean, here we've been married six years and you're not even in love."

"I knew it," Bette cried delightedly. "It's Sheila! He's in love with Sheila!"

"How would you know about that?" I grinned at him.

"I knew it!" Bette cried delightedly. "It's Sheila! He's in love with Sheila! Oh, Jim, we think that's grand! She'll make you a wonderful wife!"

"Sheila's all right. Good company. So are the dozen other girls I've been bringing up here."

Gill shrugged. "O.K., Jim. We've been hoping you'd fall for one of them, because you're missing something—not being married."

TWO nights after that I saw Sheila. We went to an in-town hotel to dinner and dance. Around 10 o'clock I suggested we leave and run out to Gill's and Bette's. But Sheila shook her head, and I looked at her in some surprise.

"They're nice people," she said. "I like them, but I'm a little tired of being an excuse."

"Excuse?"

"I've heard about the other girls. They were all excuses, but I'll bet they didn't know it."

"Now, wait a minute," I said. "What is this?"

"Call it a game, if you like." She looked at me steadily. "Jim, you'd better give up. Gill happens to love his wife and I have an idea he'll keep on loving her."

"I flushed angrily. "Of course he will. Who says he won't?"

"Nobody. But you hope he won't."

"I hope what? What the devil are you talking about?"

She sighed, "Oh, Jim, stop pretending. You're in love with Bette. You've been in love with her for so many years you've lost count. You kept bringing pretty girls up there, hoping he'd fall for one of them, hoping she'd break up their match. Then you'd have a chance with Bette.

"Stop!" I yelled. "You're crazy!"

"No I'm not. I'm quite sane. What kills me is that neither Gill nor Bette have caught on." She stopped and bit her lip. "Well, it's none of my affair, but I'll tell you this, Jim: Those two are about the only inspiring people I've ever known. And I'm all for letting them stay that way. From now on, count me out."

I shrugged. "O.K. You're out. There are two dozen others out with you. But you're the first who's guessed the reason." I sighed. "I guess I'd better quit. Gill and Bette think if I married you I'd be getting a prize. I'm beginning to agree with them. Will you marry me?"

"No," said Sheila.

Which is what a chap gets for having a secret like mine.

Dismissal of Mac Showed Disregard of Politics

By Wright A. Patterson

WHAT EVER, IF ANY, may be his deficiencies in other lines, the American people have credited President Truman with a complete knowledge of partisan politics, of how to make or lose votes for his party and its candidates, whoever such candidates may be, and of the need of votes if his party is to be successful.

Such being the case, it is hard to conceive of the promptings of Harry S. Truman, the partisan politician, taking the action Harry S. Truman, the President, did in the case of Gen. MacArthur. To arbitrarily dismiss from the nation's service a man in whom the people had full confidence, a man of demonstrated ability, at the instigation of such as Dean Acheson, secretary of state, and some others, who do not have the confidence of any considerable number of American voters, a condition of which the President must be aware, is a simply incredible action, and one that will be paid for in a loss of votes, now and for years to come. It will come nearer wrecking the Democratic party than anything that has happened since the days of President Johnson.

The President tells us we are facing a grave emergency, a crisis in our relations with Communist Russia. We may be called upon any day to meet the Red army hordes in both Europe and the far east. In the face of such conditions Harry S. Truman, the president, dismisses from the nation's service one of the great military leaders of the century, a man whose ability and knowledge of far eastern conditions we will so terribly need.

To the American people it would be unthinkable to dismiss Gen. MacArthur for any reason, but to do so at the instigation of Dean Acheson will politically condemn Harry S. Truman and his party. It may mean the party's defeat at the hands of the voters for years to come. It was Acheson's bad guesses, if they were nothing worse than bad guesses, that are responsible for the conditions we face in the far east, and have been responsible for our more than 60,000 casualties in Korea.

It is not alone we in America who must suffer from that stubborn will that insists that whatever he says or whatever he does must be right. The people of Japan, of Korea and others throughout the Pacific must also suffer a severe loss. For Stalin, it is like winning the final battle.

The cry of "wolf! wolf!" has been heard frequently from the White House, or from those backing the President's policies, and his demands for more taxes, for more appropriations, for more power, but has been followed within a few hours by the assurance that we are nearer peace with Russia than at any time since the beginning of the cold war. So often has that wolf cry been repeated, with its assuring follow-up that it has lost all of its effect, both with congress and the people of the nation.

Whether the wolf cry comes from the President or from Speaker Rayburn, congress accepts it as but another political-must call, and goes serenely on its accustomed way without undue excitement, and the people have become so apathetic over the war possibility that they no longer take seriously those frightening wolf cries, or the assurance of advancing peace. The wolf cry has outlived its usefulness as a means of advancing the President's policies and his demands for legislation. It has been used too often.

The senate crime committee did an excellent job until it came to reporting its findings to the people. That report, as carried in the Saturday Evening Post of April 7, carried one small line at the bottom of its first page. It said: "Copyright, 1951, by Estes Kefauver, all rights reserved." Senator Kefauver evidently expects his report to be issued as a book, and did not want to detract from his royalties by too wide a reading from which he would receive no revenue.

In these days of billions that cut of a few hundred million from a presidential appropriation request may not seem much, but it was a saving and represented results, not merely talk. Let us have more of the same.

—*—

There are thousands of people in Washington, carried on government payrolls with the backing of the Democratic national committee, with nothing to occupy their time, and more of the same are being added each day.

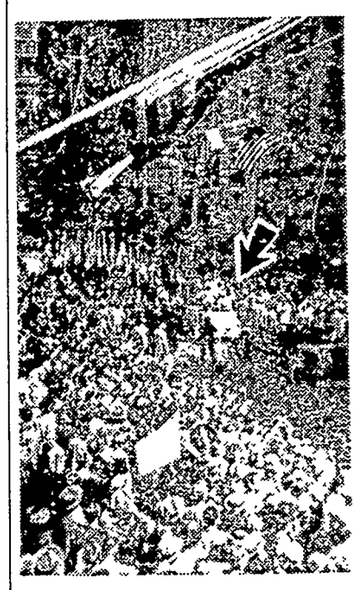
of Main Street and the World

Truman-MacArthur Fight Continues; Chinese Launch Spring Offensive

HOW DIVIDED THE NATION—There was no sign of a letup in the great quarrel on whether President Truman did right or wrong when he fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his Pacific commands. If anything, the man on Main Street was hotter under the collar than ever before following the general's impressive speech before congress. The line of dispute was clearly drawn: The general's supporters believed his proposed plan of action in Asia the only possible realistic one; his opponents were just as positive his plan of action would mean world wide war. The great controversy caused many in the home towns to wonder just how divided can a nation become and still effectively battle communism?

The two viewpoints on the Truman-MacArthur controversy were expressed by Senators Taft and Kerr. Senator Taft charged "the Truman administration is working both sides of the military and political street" and called for bombing of Chinese airfields and a naval blockade of her coast. Senator Kerr, on the other hand, said he is convinced MacArthur's military strategy "would hurl us downward to the awful road of total war."



Ticker-Tape Blizzard

Never before in the history of the U. S., or possibly in the history of the world, has a returning hero received such acclaim as Gen. Douglas MacArthur as he drove through a ticker-tape blizzard to the shouting of 7,500,000 people in New York. It was the climax of welcome home celebrations which began in San Francisco when the general returned to his native land for the first time in 14 years.

THE MILITARY—General MacArthur in his speech before congress said the joint chiefs of staff concurred with his view on conduct of the war in Korea. This brought an immediate statement in which the joint chiefs said they had been unanimous in recommending the dismissal of MacArthur. The statement said: "Operations in the far east are being carried out in accordance with the views of the joint chiefs of staff. These views will be fully explained to the appropriate congressional committees. An analysis of the basic differences which exist between the joint chiefs of staff and General MacArthur will be presented at that time."

The man on Main Street had better hold on to his hat. Everything points to another explosion as the general and his brother officers go before the senate foreign relations and armed services committees to explain the conduct of the Korean conflict. The testimony will blow hot and cold. It will be up to the home-towner to sift it and find the truth.

THE UNITED NATIONS—Members of the United Nations, whether they were in agreement with General MacArthur's policy in the far east or not, were almost as impressed by the general's address as were members of congress.

But the general did not gain any votes in the U.N. for following his policy. His speech confirmed many delegates in the belief that a yawning gulf separates his concept of the way to defeat Communist imperialism and that of the United Nations. Only on one point was there any degree of accord—his demand for an intensified economic blockade of Communist China.

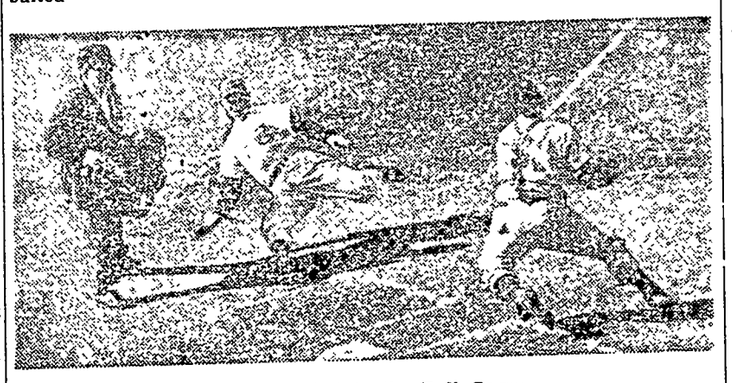
ON THE FRONT—And while the politicians ranted over how the Korean conflict should be conducted, the North Koreans and Chinese Reds opened their long awaited spring offensive. First reports from the front indicated a break-through in the mountainous central sector of Korea by an estimated 400,000 enemy troops. Approximately 300,000 others were reported attacking in other sectors of Korea.

First withdrawals amounted to as much as 15 miles, Allied officers reported, with the Chinese suffering heavy casualties. Nearly 9,000 Reds were killed or wounded by artillery alone on the first day of the attack, the eighth army estimated. Swarms of planes claimed an additional toll of nearly 2,000.

SALES TAX—The Committee of Americans, reportedly a nonprofit, fact-finding research-survey organization covering all 48 states and Hawaii, reports a recent survey indicated the majority of the nation's businessmen favor a retail-sales tax on the federal level.

The organization said it sent questionnaires to some 30,000 businessmen, of whom more than 15,000 replied. The businessmen were said to favor the sales tax by 62 per cent; 12 per cent for such a tax at the manufacturer's level; and 26 per cent opposed to any sales tax.

Whether or not the survey reached to the Main Street businessman was not indicated, but it could hardly be conclusive unless he was consulted



Take Me Out to the Ball Game

Neither wars or threats of wars, politics or the acclaim of a conquering hero could dim the opening of the baseball season on the sandlot of the home towns to the major leagues. Sportminded Americans took time out for the greatest game of them all.

MAIN STREET BUSINESS—Hardware, dry goods and general merchandise, and jewelry stores on Main Street enjoyed a dollar sales increase during March of 1951 over the same month last year, the census bureau reported.

Hardware stores recorded a 22 per cent sales rise; dry goods and general merchandise stores a 20 per cent rise and jewelry stores a 15 per cent rise.

The agency said its figures were based on reports from about 10,000 independent stores. The department gave out no actual sales figures.

PROBER HAILS PRESS—Senator Kefauver, speaking before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said his committee's celebrated investigation into crime could not have succeeded without the support of the nation's press.

The senator restated his theory that the place for "action against gamblers and other underworld elements is Main Street, not Pennsylvania Ave., Washington."

All the press joined in the effort of exposing crime, Kefauver said. "That spark was instrumental in setting off the explosion that has followed."

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

1950 Marriage Rate Climbs 6 Per Cent

The U.S. public health service reported recently the marriage rate rose and the divorce rate dropped in the United States during the past year.

The agency's figures show the number of 1950 marriages—1,669,934 in all—rose nearly 6 per cent over 1949, the first increase since 1946. The total of 1950 divorces—estimated at 385,000—was the smallest since 1943. The drop was 3 per cent from the preceding year and marked the fourth successive year of declines. The agency gave no explanation for the increase in marriages or decrease of divorces.

Statisticians calculated that 11 out of every 1,000 men, women and children in the nation got married last year. Only 2½ of each 1,000 found it did not work out.

HOW MOTHER'S DAY BEGAN

ALTHOUGH MOTHER LOVE IS OLDER THAN THE CHRISTIAN FAITH, MOTHER'S DAY ITSELF HAS ACTUALLY GROWN UP WITH THE 20TH CENTURY. THIS YEAR MOTHER'S DAY IS SUNDAY, MAY 13

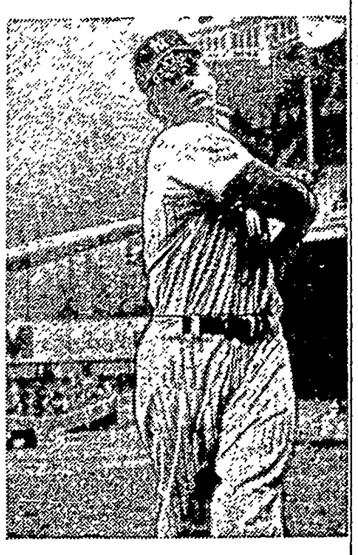
SUNDAY, MAY 13, IS THE 37TH ANNIVERSARY OF MOTHER'S DAY. CHURCH SERVICES, CHEERFUL MOTHER'S DAY CARDS, AND FAMILY REUNIONS WILL OFFER HEARTFELT TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN MOTHERS EVERYWHERE.

ADMIRAL TAKES A WHIRL . . . One of the United States' most beloved war heroes, Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey, enjoys a dance step with a pretty New Yorker, Barbara Watkins, during an evening at the New York night club, the Stork Club, Admiral Halsey, who at present is in business as head of I.T. and T., displays the same smiling face and friendly manner that was so familiar to all Americans during the last war.

NIPPON'S WINNER . . . Shigeki Tanaka, survivor of atomic bombing of Hiroshima, wins 55th annual Boston Patriot's day marathon in two hours, 27 minutes, 45 seconds. The distance of the race is 26 miles, 385 yards.

ATHLETE ACCUSED OF MURDER . . . Jerry Nuzum (center), Pittsburgh Steeler star, and his pretty wife, Mary, confer in Pittsburgh with Charles Margiotti, resigned state's attorney general. Margiotti will defend the pro halfback, accused in the two-year-old murder of Ovida Coogler, New Mexico waitress. Mrs. Nuzum says she will stand by her husband who has repeatedly reiterated that he is innocent of the slaying of the waitress two years ago.



MANTLE OF FAME . . . Eyes of baseball fans are focused on a 19-year-old Commerce, Okla., athlete, Mickey Mantle, most publicized rookie of the generation. He's a switch hitter, expected to step into DiMaggio's shoes later.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Grand Passion

"MY FIRST KNOWLEDGE of what real love is came only after I had been married nine years," writes Jessica Cady from Wilmington. "I was going along quite contentedly, not realizing that I was missing the most wonderful thing in life. I had married at 17, feeling all a girl's foolish pride at being the first of my class to marry. Carleton, my husband, was then 27, and seemed a very important person to me. That we were badly matched certainly occured to us both in the next few years; we were not congenial, we had no common interests in conversation, but we were the parents of two lovely girls, and there seemed no purpose in any course but the usual quiet married life.

"Then, while Carleton was away in the south seas, I met a man I will call Fred. We had worked together in an assembly plant for almost a year before quite suddenly the earth shook beneath us and we discovered our love. Fred also was the father of two children, older than mine. Between himself and his wife at this time there was hardly more than civility.

Ecstasy

"Our love was all the ecstasy, the rapture and delight of all the books and movies, all the great songs and pictures. We were swept off our feet, and for almost a year, while giving the world no evidence of our devotion, we lived in a Paradise of our own. When Carleton came home I told him quite simply of the tremendous change that had come into my feelings, and asked for a divorce.

"That was one year ago, and it has been the most terrible year of my life. My love for Fred is like a tearing fire inside me; I cannot go back and wipe it out as if it had never been. But several circumstances have made divorce seem less than a solution.

"In the first place Carleton insisted that everything should go along in our home as it had been before he went away. He says that if he ever sees Fred anywhere near me he will shoot him; for the rest, nothing is to change. He will not consider a divorce, and threatens me with open disgrace and separation from my daughters if I insist upon it. For the girls' sake this is, therefore, out of the question, for my lawyer tells me that he could claim the girls if he brought the matter to court.

"Fred is anxious for me to leave Carleton, establish myself in my old beauty-parlor work, and wait until matters at his house clear up somewhat, when he will also ask for a divorce. But this seems to me so lonely and uncertain a plan that I hesitate to take the step. Fred will give me written promises that the moment we are both free we will marry, and I know several women who have managed their affairs this way, breaking all ties first and trusting to time. If I had no children I undoubtedly would do this, but they need me now and depend on me.

All Wrong

"But surely it is all wrong, from every standard of real morality and common sense, for Fred to be prisoned in his house with a woman whose affection for him died years ago, and for me to be chained here with a man who despises me, and the empty shell of a life? Is this civilization, and is real love so wrong a thing that it must be penalized this way?

"Can't you help me with some of your own philosophy to find a happier way out than this? I feel as if I should go mad, meekly settling down to a life so empty, so lonely and so purposeless, after having had just a few months of glorious satisfaction. Fred I never see, and although I have sometimes broken my promise, and have written him, he has kept to his word to have no further communication with me at all. Tell me what to do to maintain my own sanity and be happy again."

Of course there is no answer to this letter.

When trouble breaks out in marriage a woman has many bulwarks to uphold her. Society recognizes her position, she has her place and her responsibility to steady her, she can with perfect dignity wait for the skies to clear.

But the illicit affair gives a woman no such comfort. There is no limit to the shame, the longing, the unsatisfied desire that a love-affair such as Jessica's causes, when the glow of it has gone. She has absolutely nothing in the way of self-respect, or the sympathy of friends.

Klemme Schools Close With Community Picnic Satur.

SCHOOL PICNIC IS COMMUNITY AFFAIR FOR EVERYONE

All Families In Community Are Invited To Come To Big Gathering In Park

With Baccalaureate and Commencement now history, the attention of students, teachers, parents, and folks in the community now look forward to the close of the school year with the big annual Community School Picnic to be held in the Klemme park Saturday noon of this week.

Everybody Invited

The entire community is invited to attend the picnic. Each family is asked to bring two covered or hot dishes, enough sandwiches for the members of their immediate family, also their own dishes and silverware. The school will furnish hot coffee, lemonade and ice cream.

From past experiences there will be loads of good food on the long tables and everyone will get all they want to eat.

In Case Of Rain

Nobody wants it to rain, and it very seldom does on picnic day, but in case it should the picnic will be held in the high school gym.

FLY CONTROL DEPENDS ON GOOD SANITATION

Effective sanitation practices should be the foundation for fly control programs on Iowa farms this summer, says Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. Sanitation cannot do the whole job of fly control, but it will make chemical control cheaper and more effective.

All breeding places for flies on the farm should be destroyed early in the season as well as from time to time later on. This will prevent the flies from using them and multiplying rapidly.

Gunderson says manure poses one of the biggest santitation problems around the farm. He advises scraping barn lots down to hard ground in May, hauling out straw and hay stack bottoms in May or early June, and cleaning out all of the farm buildings and keeping them clean this summer. Barn cleanings should be pitched directly into the spreader and nauled out to the field every day or two. If this is not done, the manure should be stored in a concrete pit.

It is a good idea to rake up and burn any weeds that are mowed or else spread them out to dry.

The outdoor toilet is a breeding place for flies and needs some special treatment. If possible, it should be rebuilt according to plans prepared by the Iowa Department of Health. Otherwise, it should be repaired to make it as fly-tight as possible. Then it should be treated with borax every day.

A good rule around the farmhouse is to store all garbage in metal containers. These should be set on concrete or above the ground on a wooden platform. A tight fitting cover should be provided and the can given a thorough washing at least once a week.

Miss Phyllis Boland To Graduate From Waldorf

Miss Phyllis Boland of Klemme will graduate cum laude from Waldorf College at Forest City when the 48th annual commencement exercises are held there on Tuesday, May 29, 1951.

Miss Boland, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boland of Klemme, has signed a contract to teach kindergarten in the Forest City grade schools for the coming year.

KLEMME SHOULD PUT ON A RAT KILLING CAMPAIGN

There are a lot of rats in Klemme and they ought to be exterminated in a general rat killing drive. Whether you know it or not, but a check has revealed there are hundreds of rats in Klemme and every block has quite a number of the undesirable inhabitants.

With the new chemical, warfarin, now available, it is comparatively easy to get rid of the rats. To get rid of all the rats in Klemme, the town should be divided into districts, with someone in charge of each district, or block, to put the warfarin out. In the matter of about a week every rat in Klemme would be a dead rat.

A rat kill campaign would be a good project for the Town Council or the Civic Club. What do you think?

Vacation Bible School May 28 To June 15th

The Daily Methodist Vacation Bible School will be in session from May 28 to June 15, every morning Monday thru Friday, 9:00 to 11:30. All children who will be 4 years old by July 1st up through the 8th grade should attend. The school will be held in the Klemme Methodist Church.

Stores Closed Next Wed.

BUSINESS PLACES WILL BE CLOSED MEMORIAL DAY

As in the past, all Klemme retail business places will be closed all day on Memorial day, which will be Wednesday, May 30th.

Open Wednesday Nights

The exact date for having open nights during the summer has not been set, but most likely the first open Wednesday night will be June 6th. The retail stores will then be open two night a week, Wednesday and Saturdays.

Free Movies

Starting this week there will be FREE movies in Klemme every Wednesday night for sixteen weeks. Starting sometime in June there will be a band concert each Saturday night.

FARMERS GOT IN SOME GOOD LICKS PAST WEEK

Good Weather For Working Ground And Some Corn Planted

With lots of good weather the past week farmers got in some good delayed licks on spring work.

Fields never looked better than the past week as the ground worked up good and many farmers got in quite a few acres of corn planting.

The oats is making good headway dispite the lateness of the season in which it was planted. Grasslands and pastures have an abundance of good, thick grass.

A few low spots in fields had to be by-passed temporarily in some fields, but this ground is drying out good.

Hats off to our farmers, they certainly did a good job under unfavorable conditions, being delayed by cold, wet weather for so long.

Maple Trees Beautiful

Red Maple trees have never been prettier than they are this year. The leaves on most hard red maples are quite brilliant this year and nearly as bright as in the fall. They certainly brighten up the scenery in North Iowa this year.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

May is the time of year when mild, warm weather brings a seasonal increase in highway traffic — the opening of holiday and vacation driving — a time of more driving and more exposure to traffic accidents.

Ending the month is Memorial Day, when only safe drivers and safe cars can help hold down accidents and prevent wholesale tragedy on crowed streets and highways.

That's why your Iowa Safety Congress, in co-operation with the Iowa Automobile Dealers Association, Iowa Department of Public Safety, and a national vehicle maintenance safety campaign, urges you to have your car checked for summer safety.

Show your fellow drivers that you care about their safety, as well as your own, by displaying the windshield sticker for approved cars — the sign of a safe car!

Check your car today — check accidents tomorrow! It's a familiar theme, but it's not an old story. It's as new as the daily threat of traffic hazards.

Remember: Safe drivers drive safe cars!

BASS SEASON OPENS MAY 30TH

With the opening of the bass season May 30, all fish become legal for anglers to catch, except rock sturgeon and paddlefish on which there is a continuous closed season. Included in the sunfish group are large and smallmouth black bass, warmouth and rock bass, sunfish and bluegills. This group of fish are the nest building fishes and become legal prey later than random spawning species, which lay their eggs much earlier in the season.

The bass season opens one day earlier than previous years to allow anglers to fish Memorial Day. The catch limit on large and smallmouth bass is 5, with a possession limit of 5, and this species is the only fish on which there is a length limit of 10 inches.

All other fish caught in Iowa waters may be kept, regardless of size. Daily catch and possession limit on warmouth and rock bass, sunfish and bluegills is 15.

Rural Pupils Enjoyed Trip Thru Mason City Factories

Mrs. Claude White took her pupils of Twin Lake No. 1 school on a tour to visit factories in Mason City Friday. The pupils learned a lot about manufacturing when they visited the cement mills, tile and brick yards, the Globe Gazette, Borden's ice cream plant and the Coca Colo Bottling company.

Last fall Mrs. White took her pupils on a tour which included Decker's packing plant, KGLO broadcasting studio, the First National Bank's accounting department, and other sights.

Daily Vacation Bible School Begins, Mon., May 28th

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church begins Monday, May 28 and concludes on Friday, June 29th. The school will include Bible stories, visual aids, etc. and all boys and girls of the community are invited to attend.

INAUGURATION SERVICES HELD FOR NEW MISSION HOUSE PRESIDENT

Sunday, May 20, was a significant date in the history of Mission House College and Seminary at Plymouth, Wisconsin, when the Rev. Arthur M. Krueger was inaugurated as the sixth president of the institution, one of the oldest schools of higher learning in Wisconsin.

The formal inauguration service was held in a specially constructed amphitheatre on the college campus at 10:30 a. m. Dr. L. W. Goebel, president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church of the United States delivered the main address.

The inauguration ceremonies concluded a four-day May festival, an annual event on the campus.

Attended Tulip Festival

Mr. and Mrs. George Schoenwetter and Mrs. Wm. Ax drove to Pella Saturday to attend the annual Tulip Festival.

Some 200 children, all dressed in Dutch costumes and wearing wooden shoes, gave folk dances, a very pretty spectacle. The thousands of tulips all over the town were at their best and it was a beautiful sight.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

The man standing before the judge was plainly irked, and making no effort to hide the fact. The charge was reckless driving. Two highway patrolmen stood beside him.

"Your honor," said one of the officers, "this man was going about 50 miles an hour through town. He nearly sideswiped 2 parked cars."

"I'm a businessman, judge, and I had an appointment to keep. I can't be bothered with all this nonsense—I'm late as it is. I didn't hurt anybody."

The situation wasn't new. During his ten years on the bench, the judge had heard many others say practically the same thing. He knew such people didn't give much thought to the consequences of careless driving, — didn't give much thought, that is, until someone close to them was hurt or killed in an accident.

"Are you a married man?" the judge asked.

He was and he had 2 children.

"Do you know that your family is in peril every day because people drive through town as you did? And don't you realize that in speeding along residential streets, you are risking the lives of children or adult pedestrians? Is any appointment worth that?"

The judge fined the man $25, but that wasn't all. He ruled that before the man could leave town, he had first to visit the children's ward of the hospital and see the boys and girls who were there as the result of accidents.

As the man drove away, the appointment he had missed no longer seemed important. It would cost him a few dollars. But dollars, he knew, can't buy straight legs and backs.

WHO WILL WEAR A POPPY?

Who will wear a poppy
On our Poppy Day?
"I will," says the Mother,
"For five boys who went away."
Who will wear a poppy
To honor those who fell?
"I will," says the Doctor;
"I've some memories of that hell."
"I will," the Welfare Worker says, "I know what poppies do for widows of our veterans
And their helpless children, too."
"I will," each World War veteran says "There are close ties that bind
Each one of us to help the rest—
The crippled and the blind."
"I will," says the Preacher,
"I don't believe in war;
But I do believe in healing wounds
That's what the poppy is for."
No Single one replies, "I won't."
Instead with what a thrill,
We hear each good American say when asked to give—I will."
—Vera Williams, Manson, Iowa

SWINE PRODUCERS MAY STILL ENTER PROJECT

Eligible farmers may still enter the Master Swine Producers Project. The project is being conducted for its 10th year, and is sponsored by the Iowa Swine Producers Association, Radio Station WHO and the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service of Iowa State College.

Any market hog producer in Iowa is eligible to enter the project if he has at least 10 sows farrowed prior to June 1, and if he has been raising hogs for himself for at least 5 years. The project is conducted in an effort to improve hog raising methods on Iowa farms.

Additional information on the project may be obtained from county extension directors or from any of the sponsoring agencies.

ICC GRANTS PARCEL POST RATE INCREASE

Washington — The Interstate Commerce Commission Friday authorized the postoffice to make an average 25 per cent increase in parcel post rates.

The action was taken on a petition that Postmaster Donaldson filed last October.

Congress had refused Donaldson's request for general advances in virtually all postal charges, but directed that he take up the question of parcel post rates with the ICC.

The ICC left it to the postmaster general to fix the date when the rates will go into effect.

CLINIC FOR CHILDREN WITH DEFECTS AT FOREST CITY, FRIDAY

The annual clinic for children with physical defects will again be held for children in this district at Forest City this week Friday, all day.

Parents who want to have their children examined and receive free consultation by Iowa University Hospital specialist, must make arrangements with their local physician and receive an appointment for the free clinic.

WELLEMEYER ANNOUNCES TWO MEN TO JOIN HIS FIRM

Art Wellemeyer has been remodeling his store for the past few months with the anticipation of expanding his business.

Sometime this fall two young men will join his firm as partners in the furniture business; Donald L. Bacon of Lake Mills and Howard De Motts of Clear Lake. With the added help stepping into the business, Mr. Wellemeyer expects to greatly increase his stock of merchandise in all lines at the store.

Mrs. Patterson Entertained The Saturday Club

Mrs. Wesley Patterson was hostess to the Saturday Club at her home Saturday afternoon. Guests were Mrs. Wm. Fuss, Mrs. Lloyd Lau and Mrs. Franklin Cappon. Contract bridge was played at two tables.

Mrs. Wm. Fuss won the high prize and Mrs. Lloyd Lau, second high.

Mrs. Patterson served a nice lunch after the games.

MARIE'S BEAUTY SHOP HELD FORMAL OPENING FRIDAY P. M.

Miss Marie Blank held a formal opening of her new beauty shop in the Wellemeyer building Friday from 1:00 until 5:00 p. m.

Women and high school girls visited the new shop throughout the afternoon and each visitor was presented with a nice gift.

Miss Blank has one of the nicest and best equipped beauty shops in North Iowa which draws customers from a long distance. She is assisted in her work by Mrs. Moe of Garner, a licensed operator.

The new beauty shop is well located, on the street level and is arranged for the comfort and convenience of customers.

JOE FINNEGAN WILL LEAVE FOR JOB IN NORTH ATLANTIC

Joe Finnegan, who a few months ago disposed of his pool hall business here, has signed up with the North Atlantic Construction Co. as a truck driver.

Joe will leave Monday from Des Moines and from there will be routed to the coast with his exact destination unknown. Joe figures his new job will be in either Iceland or Greenland on government construction work. He has signed up for 8 months.

Mrs. Finnegan and the children will move to Waterloo for the present.

KLEMME JAYBIRDS WON OPENER FROM BELMOND

Behind 5 innings of hurling by big John Eenhuis and one inning each by Bud Neiman and Cooper, the Klemme Jaybirds piled up a 15-4 win over Belmond under the local lights Monday evening.

Other players in the opener were Kaduce, Murray, Cappon, Greiman, Langlitz and Brinkman.

Kaybirds To Play

The other Klemme team, the Kaybirds will open against Garner on May 24th, Thursday of this week.

Come out to the games and see some good action on the home field. A schedule of games will be published.

Displaced Persons

Lesson for May 27, 1951

"D. P.'s" are no 20th-century novelty. This displaced person has for centuries dotted the international landscape. We can define a displaced person as one who, unwillingly or unintentionally, is a long way from a home which no longer exists. A D.P. would usually go home if he could, but he can't. His home has been bombed out, or perhaps his whole home town destroyed. Perhaps he and his neighbors have been forcibly moved out by a government that wants some one else in their places.

Dr. Foreman

The D.P. is usually at first poor, in the nature of the case; a foreigner where he is, sometimes without even a native land to go back to, to say nothing of a home town. Perhaps the most tremendous uprooting of people in recent times has been in Korea, where war victims have had to move out by the million.

The Innocent With the Guilty

BUT THE story is not a new one. Back in Bible times many of the Hebrews became D.P.'s After the downfall of Israel and Judah, thousands of Jews were taken to the country along the Euphrates and Tigris rivers, there to fend for themselves as best they could.

The Bible writers always looked on that experience as a punishment of the nation, and so it was. But the experience illustrates a number of things. One is that the innocent often suffer with the guilty.

Not all those who were forced into those long death-marches had been to blame for their country's wrong-doings. Bad decisions of king and council resulted in personal disasters to thousands who had had nothing to do with their king's bad policies or their aristocrats' debauched lives.

D.P.'s Taking Root

ANOTHER thing to be noticed in the Bible story of these Hebrew D.P.'s is the way they took hold, wherever they were, and helped to build up the country and help themselves at the same time. They took root, in short, and even when later on their descendants were free to go "home," relatively few ever went back to Palestine.

From that time to this, the Jews have been scattered over the wide world, living (where it has been possible) as local citizens of whatever lands they call their own. We can still read Jeremiah's letter (ch. 29) to the D.P.'s from Judah, urging them to buy land, to lay out vineyards and plan houses and generally make themselves at home in Babylon.

We read of an Ezekiel, owning a home and settling down in Babylonia. We find Daniel the boy as a page in the royal household of Nebuchadnezzar, and as a man rising to prominence and power. Many of the D.P.'s took their places among the best citizens of their perforce adopted lands.

D.P.'s In American History

SO it has often been since. The United States alone owes a great deal to D.P.'s. The famous statue of Liberty is a welcome-sign to such people. The Pilgrims who came over in the Mayflower were D.P.'s, already twice uprooted. The Huguenot protestants, driven from France by official persecution, became top-level, successful citizens in England and America.

Revolutionary troubles in Europe a hundred years ago brought to American shores Carl Schurz, for example, a fugitive from the police of two countries because he was a revolutionist; here in America becoming a top success in many fields: general of the army, minister to Spain, Secretary of the Interior, prosperous business executive, editor of great city newspapers, writer and orator of international fame.

Not all D.P.'s become famous; but many thousands of them, throughout the troubled ages, have been a blessing to the lands that sheltered them

So it may be in our time, that as God has before now brought good out of evil, he may in our troubled world bring even from the cruelties of deportation and homelessness again new understandings fresh beginning, and an interweaving of many strands of humanity into a stronger fabric than before

Says New Dry Yeast best in all her cooking experience

70-Year-Old Grandmother Winner of More than 2000 Cooking Awards

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sanders read a newspaper clipping about Mrs. Sanders' latest cooking triumphs. In her 30 years of exhibiting at state, county and local fairs, Mrs. Sanders has won more than 2000 awards! Her most recent are 8 prizes for exhibits at the 1950 Iowa State Fair.

This long-time champion of Waterloo, Iowa, gives plenty of credit to Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast. "In all my cooking experience this New Dry Yeast is the best I've found," says Mrs. Sanders. "It gives me grand results—faster and easier, too!"

You can't beat it—the rich, delectable flavor of yeast-raised goodies. So wholesome and nourishing, too! When you bake at home, use yeast. And use the best—Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast. It's faster . . . faster working, faster dissolving. So much easier to use! Get several packages today . . . you'll like it!

Freeze Foods Now for Later Use
(See Recipes Below)

Successful Freezing

ONE OF THE MOST satisfactory ways of preserving foods that has come into the limelight recently for home use is that of quick-freezing it. Compared with canning and dehydrating methods, freezing is easy.

There are, however, many misconceptions regarding the process of freezing and storing them in home freezer or locker, and one of the main ones is that you simply have to wash the food and store it.

Five essentials are necessary to the successful freezing of fruits, vegetables, poultry and meat. The variety used must be good for freezing; fruits and vegetables must have reached a certain degree of maturity, for like any other preserving process, freezing only keeps food until it's used and does not improve it.

Preparation for packaging must be done carefully, and proper packaging should be used to prevent a common ailment of frozen foods, namely, that of freezer burn. Storage must be at the recommended temperature 0°f., or below.

Equipment for freezing naturally includes a locker or a freezer to which you have ready access. If you rent a locker, then freeze only enough foods to fit into the refrigerator before you can take them to the locker. This must be within 24 hours of their packaging.

High Flavor, Color Gives Good Frozen Product

Generally speaking, in the matter of fruits and vegetables, those with high color and excellent flavor should be used for freezing.

Those who freeze foods have already run into the term "optimum maturity." This means that fruits and vegetables suitable for freezing should have reached their peak of ripeness to be ready for the freezer. Fruits and vegetables at this stage are sweetest, full of flavor and ripe. This is the flavor and appearance which you want to preserve.

Get fruits and vegetables into the freezer right after picking, if it's at all possible. If you wait for too long after picking or harvesting, the produce loses flavor and deteriorates in texture.

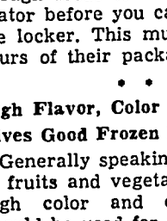
Check These Varieties For Vegetables

If you're planning to freeze any of the following vegetables, check varieties to get the best results. In asparagus, for example, you'll find that both Mary Washington and Martha Washington rate high. The Dwarf Improved and Long Island Improved varieties of Brussels Sprouts are considered good.

Fordhook lima beans retain superior color and flavor when frozen, and so do the Kentucky Wonder green snap beans.

Italian green sprouting broccoli is superior because of its fresh flavor and color for freezing purposes, while the Thomas Laxton and Dark Podded Thomas Laxton peas give a superior frozen product.



Savoy type spinach is recommended for those freezing this vegetable in the Eastern part of the country. For those living West, broad leaf spinach gives the best results.

Always Blanch Vegetables For Freezing

Prepare vegetables for freezing by washing them thoroughly. If you desire a uniform pack, try to sort them according to size as they are washed.

Scalding or blanching of vegetables should never be omitted in preparing vegetables for freezer use Scalding retards enzymatic action and stops deterioration. It improves color and saves vitamins, and also softens the vegetable making packing easier. Scald a pound or so at a time, using steam preferably, or plunging the vegetable into hot water. Five minutes by steam is used for most vegetables except greens such as spinach which require only 2½ minutes and green peas which need 3 minutes.

Place the vegetable in water and ice until thoroughly cooled, then drain on a tray with absorbent paper or toweling. Package at once and refrigerate.

Only moisture and vapor-proof packages should be used for any type of freezing. The liners should be used only once although the carton may be re-used. Leave head space in all cartons as food always expands during freezing.

Use Syrup for Fruits To Be Used For Sauce

If you're putting apples into sauce for freezing, use Baldwin, Greening, Northern Spy or Yellow Transparent varieties; for pie, use any high acid variety. In blueberries, use any small seeded variety.

Montmorency is a good variety in the sour red cherries, while in peaches of the yellow type, Hale Haven and J. H. Hale are excellent. For white peaches, choose Golden Jubilee or Georgia Belle. Any type pineapple is good.

Wash fruit carefully, but do not allow it to soak. Drain thoroughly on absorbent cloth or paper, and let stand in refrigerator, if possible, to permit fruit to become firm for packaging.

Stem and seed berries. Peel fruits such as apricots, apples, peaches and pears but place immediately after peeling into a solution made of one gallon of cold water with 3 tablespoons lemon juice, or 4½ teaspoons citric acid to a gallon of water to prevent discoloration. Let remain only a minute, then drain.

If using dry sugar, as for whole fruit, sift sugar with a flour sifter, right into the package. The minimum amount to use for freezing is one part sugar to eight parts of fruit. More may be added when fruit is thawed. Seal, label and freeze package at once.

To make medium syrup for fruit, use 1 cup sugar to 2 cups water. Cook for 5 minutes and let cool before using.

LYNN SAYS:

Serve Summer Foods With a Flair

Keep the flavor intact in those tender asparagus spears. Don't scrape, just brush it. Break, don't cut and tie with a string. Cook with the heads up, then served with browned butter and bread crumbs.

Lemon gelatin salads are cooling for hot days. Choose a canned fish for plain gelatin and lemon juice molds: shrimp, sardines, lobster or crabmeat. Serve with garden red tomatoes.

Those summer fruits and berries make wonderful fritters, and are tasty for dessert served with honey sauce. Make the sauce by cooking together a cup of honey with two tablespoons of heavy cream, the juice of a lemon and two tablespoons of butter.

Fry plenty of chicken next time you're making it, and serve the other half chilled well the following day. Put on the plate with cold, sliced tomatoes, black olives and bread, butter and lettuce sandwiches.

Old 'Speed' Pitchers Were Best

By GRANTLAND RICE

WHEN a new baseball season opens or a new racing season begins there is usually one important argument you can wade into without much trouble.

This is the matter of an important factor known as speed—speed of the faster race horses or speed of the faster pitchers. You might be surprised to know how many wordy debates this subject can develop.

Grantland Rice

Who is the greatest pitcher or the fastest pitchers? From long talks with ballplayers, managers and umpires at various times, I would establish this order: No. 1, Walter Johnson; No. 2 Bob Feller; No. 3, Robert Moses Grove; No. 4, Rube Waddell; No. 5, Dizzy Dean; No 6, Dazzy Vance; No. 7, Joe Wood.

I would say that Rube Waddell and Dazzy Vance had the fastest-breaking curve ball of the lot. But for sheer speed there was no one quite up to the Big Train. His strike-out record speaks for itself. And Johnson did this with a fast ball, unaided by a curve.

Waddell and Feller set their remarkable strike-out marks with speed plus a fast-breaking curve ball. When Feller first broke in, he depended almost entirely on blinding speed that almost equalled Johnson's flame ball.

But the Big Train was the only pitcher I recall who forced a sick roll call on the day he was nominated to work. Good hitters usually like speed. In the case of Johnson they knew that only speed was coming up and that it was also well controlled. But they wanted no part of it. They were not too keen to hit against Feller and Grove, for that matter.

Amos Rusie with his small hands had blazing speed, and so did Dizzy Dean when he cared to use it. His "fog ball" was close to the Johnson rating.

There have been a lot of fastball pitchers who had plenty, too many to mention them all. Addie Joss, who pitched a large number of one-hit games, had fine speed, but he also had a great curve ball and unusual control.

Rex Barney has enough speed if Rex only had a vague idea of where his fast ball would wind up.

There is no one pitching today who can match Johnson, Feller and Grove at their best.

Speed Horses

You can slip into just as many arguments over speed horses as you can over speed pitchers. Who are they? Certainly Man o'War, Citation and Coaltown belong in this group.

"How are you going to beat Johnstown on the day he is right?" Harry Grayson asked one day at a Derby party. I don't see how you can. He won the 1939 Derby, beating Challedon, by eight lengths.

But Johnstown had head trouble and he disliked a muddy track. Yet according to accurate clockers he had more than one mile workout below 1.34. One report had a certain workout at 1.33 2/5.

Johnstown's speed was terrific. Citation is credited with the world mark of 1.33 3/5, made at Golden Gate, and Coaltown is marked up with two or three records. These marks, however, were all set on lightning-fast tracks.

Both Man o'War and John P. Grier turned on killing speed in their famous meeting in New York around 30 years ago.

Count Fleet was another who could burn up a track when he had to move. Count Fleet is close to the top although I still believe Johnstown in his earlier days as a three-year-old was as fast as any thoroughbred I ever saw run.

I haven't seen any horse around today that had Johnstown's or Count Fleet's capacity to handle a fast mile. Or to run with Citation and Coaltown.

Noor had fine speed, plus the ability to go a route. But it is difficult to judge horses who made their time on California tracks where it is not uncommon for horses to run six furlongs in 1.08 2/5 or 1.09.

The track has more to do with speed than the horse on many occasions.

Freak Sizes in Sport

One wrought-up correspondent writes in to say that basketball's main trouble came when the game went out for freak sizes—usually somewhere between six-foot-six and seven-foot tall players.

"Did you ever hear of another game that centered on giants, or human cranes?" he asked.

We can't see that a man's height has anything to do with his ability. But it does in basketball.

For example, football is a good deal rougher game than basketball ever was. Yet such stars as Frank Hinkey, Albie Booth, Cotton Warburton, Frank Frisch and many others of less than average height weighing from 140 to 150 could never have made a modern basketball team.

Bismarck Fray Is Described

INDIRECTLY, Herman Goering was responsible for the destruction of the German battleship Bismarck, it has been revealed

Rear Admiral D. V Gallery U.S N, recently cited the reluctance—or refusal—of the Luftwaffe to come to the aid of the German battleship as one of the factors that led to her sinking by the British on May 21, 1941

At the same time. Admiral Gallery, who interrogated survivors of the ill-fated dreadnaught, points out that the entire battle was virtually a comedy of errors on both sides, with luck and British miscues favoring the Nazis The latter pulled several boners themselves. Gallery states

"The Nazis committed a fatal blunder at the beginning Concern with the fuel supplies completely dominated the plans of the admirals on both sides Nevertheless, the Bismarck sailed from Norway 2,000 tons short of her full capacity of fuel!"

A serio-comic touch was lent to the entire "Battle of Blunders" the Admiral states, when the Germans, without radar of their own kept accurate track of the British ships stalking the Bismarck by means of excellent listening devices. The British employed radar for the same purpose. As a result of the tracking, each navy jumped to the conclusion that the other had stolen its technical secrets.

Admiral Gallery reveals that the British might have sent a boarding party aboard the floundering Bismarck but failed to do so. "She was a pushover to board, there was little to lose in trying, and there was a glorious page in naval history to gain, if the attempt succeeded" Had the Bismarck geen towed to port, it would have given the greatest boost of the war to British morale.

3 Reasons Why

HADACOL IS PRAISED BY THOUSANDS

HADACOL brings relief to folks troubled with Stomach Distress, Weak, Run-Down Conditions and Nervousness when due to deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron

Norman Christopher, 2344 Cumberland, Houston, Texas: "After I got out of the Army I was underweight, nervous, couldn't sleep and had a terrible time getting food to agree with me. When I would wake up in the morning I would always be sick at my stomach — I could never eat breakfast—imagine having to wait until noon before eating the first meal of the day. Even then just a few mouthfuls of food would fill me up. At night I couldn't sleep—I would just roll and toss all night. After the third bottle of HADACOL I could tell a difference in my eating and sleeping habits. Now after a year's time of taking HADACOL, I have gained almost 20 pounds. I sleep well—and the most wonderful thing—I can enjoy three full meals a day."

Mrs. John A. Feight, Jr., Rt. I, Bedford, Pennsylvania: "Anything I ate made my stomach ache and churn all night. . . . My food never seemed to get digested and therefore I would wake frequently in the night with pains. I would be nervous and think over the day's nerve-racking experiences. Every little thing irritated me. I couldn't stand children around me. They made me nervous. I would holler at my two-year-old daughter, Vickie, for nothing at all. Since taking HADACOL all my nausea and nervousness have passed away. All I can say for HADACOL is that it's made me see that this is a beautiful world after all. I'm 20 years old and am a housewife. I really do feel as great as I look on the photograph."

Mrs. Maurice Bellard, P. O. Box 226, Church Point, Louisiana, says about her son, Archie Bellard: "Some friends of mine have been taking HADACOL and found that it had done them a lot of good, and they suggested that I start giving HADACOL to my 16-year-old son Archie Bellard. He has been taking HADACOL for about two months, and since taking it he feels much better. Before he started taking HADACOL he felt weak, and was rundown, and he didn't feel like playing or working. Since he is taking HADACOL he has more energy, and he has a good appetite. I owe the friends, who suggested HADACOL to me, many thanks, but I owe HADACOL many more thanks, and since it has done Archie so much good, I will never be without it again."

Virginia Blanchet was six years old this week. She brought us ice cream for treats.

Mrs. Blanchet and children and Mrs. Guth visited our room.

In art we drew a picture of a duck by following the directions which were given to us in a poem. Then the children made different backgrounds for their picture.

We went on an excursion to the Creamery and watched them bottle and cap milk. The boys and girls saw where they pour the milk when the farmers bring it in. The large tubs which they use to churn butter in were shown and explained to the children. We want to thank the creamery for the treats they gave the children.

First Grade News

In Reading we have been reviewing some of our stories. We each picked a story that we especially enjoyed and drew a picture of something in the story Then we each told the story that we had chosen.

In Art we made pictures using colored chalk. We had many nice sailboat pictures and other things.

Mrs. David Hackett was a visitor in our room Friday.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Second Grade News

The second grade all brought sack lunches Monday for a picnic dinner. Since Daryl Kothenbeutel was absent having his tonsils out, we decided to have another one the following Monday when he could be with us.

This week we have been reviewing spelling and finishing our readers. We all made booklets of our favorite make believe story in reading.

Friday we had a visitor, Marlene Kothenbeutel visited our room as well as some of the other rooms.

Dean Neuberger returned his dental card. Half of the cards are still not returned, signed We would like very much to have all the cards returned.

—Miss Brones

Third Grade News

On Wednesday, May 9th the third grade had an exhibit for their parents. On display were different objects which they had made during the past school year. We were very glad to have so many mothers come. Also at that time the children presented their mothers with the gifts which they made them.

On Friday we had a music contest between the second and third grade. We chose three of the best singers out of each class.

JoAnne Jacobs heads our spelling this year for not missing one word in our spelling test for 35 weeks. Congratulations JoAnne!

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

This has been a very busy week for us getting prepared for semester tests next week. It has a lot of us wondering if we remember very many of the things we were supposed to learn.

Robert Thiemann was absent several days this week with the pink eye.

The third grade visited our room on Friday afternoon to hear us recite poems and do some choral speaking.

In our arithmetic contest the Fox Tribe won. The members were Carroll Priebe, Craig Larson, Judith Gilpin, Jerry Janssen and Cozette Lau. The Sioux Tribe took second place with Jerry Lee LaFavre as the chief.

—Miss Franken

Circles To Meet

The Circles of the Klemme Woman's Society will meet this week as follows:

KLEMME

A Prosperous Farmer's Town

Some thirty years ago, after the automobile had replaced the horse and buggy, Retail Customer's seeing the City Store ads, which continualy offered "something for nothing," drifted around in their autos trying to find the place where they could get the most for their money.

City Stores, with large stocks to select from had an advantage, but customers discovered that city prices are definitely higher, quality considered, than Country Store prices; and we have all discovered that there is no such thing as "Something for Nothing."

In the meantime, stores in live country towns like Klemme, rebuild their store buildings so as to carry large and well selected stocks of merchandise and immediately the Retail Customer begins to discover the convenience and economy of buying in a live country town like Klemme. The drift is now back to the country Town. Even city folks often drive many miles to buy furniture from a Country Store.

Advantages Of Trading In Klemme Include These

First—Our business places are individually owned. When you enter a store you meet the proprietor who usually owns both the building and the stock of merchandise, many times the Boss himself will wait on you, and the main idea, in our Klemme stores, is to help the customer make a wise selection, knowing that a customer well served will return—this is a good honest way to build business.

In City stores, the smooth young men who do the selling often work on commission and care little whether the customer ever comes back or not.

Second—Stocks of merchandise in Klemme are heavier than in former years. Thus the customer has a good selection to choose from. We, at Wellemeyer's, have often been told that our stock of linoleum and hard surfaced floor coverings is larger and more varied than any stock in nearby city stores.

Third—Rents, taxes and living expenses are less in the small town, which gives Klemme Merchants an advantage. And then there is no parking meters to annoy the customer.

There is an air of prosperity about the town: Thada's have built a large brick building, the Coop. Grain Co. have just completed a large new building to help them handle their growing business, the Lau Brothers are building an addition to their Implement Store.

The Wellemeyer Store is being remodeled to provide one-third more floor space for furniture and rug display.

More space and more business will require more people to run it. Sometime this fall we will add two young men to the store personnel, who will be partners with Mr. Wellemeyer. These men are Donald L. Bacon of Lake Mills and Howard De Motts of Clear Lake.

These two new men, together with Arthur Wellemeyer and Henry Wessels will run the store same as always only better.

It was the ancient philosopher Seneca who said:

"Our forefathers have done much,
but they have not finished anything.
We shall not finish things either,
But, we can make them better."

U.S. Home Owners Are Urged To Prepare for Atomic Attack

(The second of two articles.)

Because of public apathy toward a possible atomic attack on this nation, civilian defense officials have renewed their appeal to home owners throughout the nation to be prepared.

If you live in a private home that is well built, the cellar is the safest place to be in case of an atomic attack.

Preparation for atomic attack . . . keep an assortment of canned goods in atomic shelter.

The lower you get, the more barriers there are likely to be against blast, heat and radioactivity.

Select the basement wall nearest the probable target area of your city. If the house is blown over, it will most likely fall away from this wall. If you have a work bench or strong table, big enough to get under, move it into your shelter area, near a wall or strong supporting column. If the time comes when you actually have to take shelter, lie under the table.

If you live in a home that has no basement, choose a shelter area without windows, on the ground floor. An interior hallway is probably best. In time of emergency, the shelter area should be cleared of mirrors and other objects that might cause injury.

If you live in an apartment house, rules for taking shelter will be posted in your building. Learn them!

IT IS HOPED—but it's not at all certain—that news of the attack will come through in sufficient time to enable air raid stations to warn the citizens. The alert will be a warbling siren blast lasting three minutes.

Immediately close all your Venetian blinds to keep radioactivity as much as possible out of the house. Go to your shelter.

Your shelter should be supplied well in advance with the following items:

1. First aid kit.
2. Fire extinguisher.
3. Axe and crowbar; a shovel.
4. Battery operated radio to listen for instructions or all-clear signal.
5. At least one flashlight.
6. An emergency supply of canned food and bottled water in the event that an attack continues for several hours.

Household preparedness plus many important facts concerning the actual strength and effects of atom bombs are part of the new film authorized by the federal office of civilian defense, "Survival Under Atomic Attack". Dr. Richard Gerstell, consultant to the federal office of civilian defense, and technical advisor on the flim, urges every American to see the picture and follow its advice.

Says Dr. Gerstell: "It can happen here—it can happen anywhere!"

The film is available to church groups, factory, club, or private home owners at Castle Films, 445 Park Avenue, New York City.

THE FICTION CORNER

FIXATION ON FATHER

By Richard H. Wilkinson

MR. Harlow sat bolt upright in his chair. The psychology lecturer was saying: "And in the normal family, when the daughter reaches the age of 12 or 13 it is quite likely that her fixation will shift from her mother to her father. They will become great friends. Often this fixation on father will remain until the daughter transfers her affections to a mate However, if father does not respond to daughter's fixation, the child will, unconsciously, shift back to mother, who, in many cases has resented the original transfer—"

3-Minute Fiction

Mr. Harlow rose. He made his way down the long aisle, paying no heed to the annoyed glances of other listeners, gained the outside lobby and paused there, dabbing at a moist brow with his handkerchief.

So that was it! he told himself. So that was the cause of his wife's indignation and wrath and resentment. In his mind's eye the pieces of the puzzle that had troubled him for the past month fell into place. He understood now what had happened; he could see it taking place, step by step. Virginia, his only child had attained the age of 13. She was nearing maturity. Gradually, unconsciously, her fixation had transferred from mother to father. The two had become great friends. Mr. Harlow had been tremendously proud and happy.

Not so Mrs. Harlow, Mrs. Harlow was annoyed. She hadn't understood and presently her annoyance changed to resentment against her husband.

Abruptly she flung her arms about her father's neck and promised him that no matter what happened she would keep his secret.

. . . Mr. Harlow returned late that night. It was not his habit to return home late, but tonight there was a definite purpose. Mrs. Harlow had retired, and 10 minutes after he entered the house his daughter Virginia came in. Virginia had been to a party.

Seeing a light in the living room. Virginia came to the door. At sight of her father sitting there alone she uttered a little cry of delight and bounced upon his knee, with the full intention of providing him with details concerning her evening's activities. Something about the expression on her parent's face, however, restrained her.

MR. Harlow smiled at her in a manner that bespoke faint embarrassment. He attempted to brush something from his coat but failed. Thus having had her attention attracted to the something, Virginia investigated and found it to be a daub of powder. She looked at it and frowned. Looking further she discovered a long strand of blond hair.

Horror filled her eyes, a hurt look, an expression of awe and wonder and incredulity, gradually giving way to something bordering on accusation and scorn.

"Why, Daddy! Whatever—who—"? Mr. Harlow interrupted, gesturing airily, saying something about an apology, presently lapsing into a lengthy but rather stupid discourse and ending by stating that it would not be wise or necessary to mention the matter to her mother.

Virginia stared. Abruptly she flung her arms about her father's neck and promised him that no matter what happened she would keep his secret. It would be their secret. Poor mother. She must never know But he must promise—

Yes, yes. Of course he'd promise It was all very silly anyway. Just one of those regretful things that would never be repeated.

After awhile Virginia rose and left him. Her attitude brought a lump into Mr. Harlow's throat. But when she had gone he sighed in vast relief. Beginning tomorrow, he knew, his daughter's fixation would be transferred back to her mother. Mrs. Harlow would cease to be irritable and resentful. Harmony would reign once more in the household. And sometime, Mr. Harlow told himself, when Virginia was safely married and away, he would explain it all—and hope that she would understand.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Learn How To Relax

By Lawrence Gould

Can you teach yourself to relax?

Answer: Probably, unless you suffer from more than your share of "nervous tension." Try to forget your emotional problems and concentrate on your body. I have found it useful to "go down one side and up the other," relaxing one set of muscles at a time—and don't forget that the muscles of your face may be the last to stay tense. It is also a good idea to "lie (or sit) heavy," emphasizing the idea that your whole weight is being supported and that you do not have to hold any part of yourself up. Like anything else, relaxation requires practice.

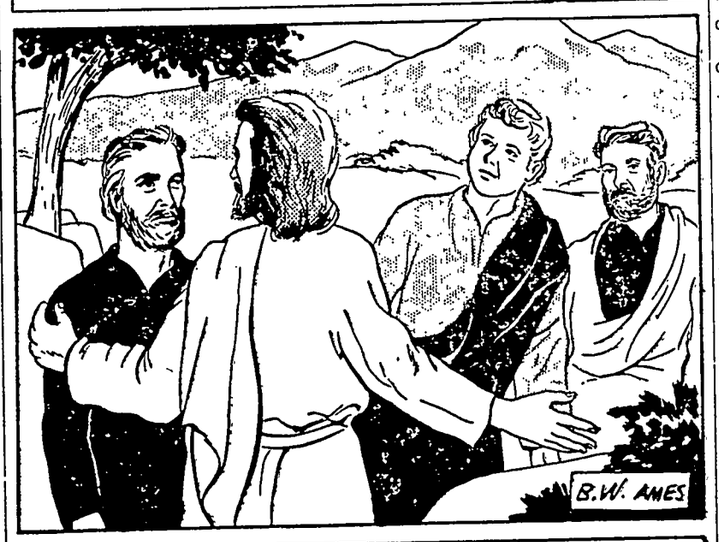
May a guilty conscience make delinquents?

Answer: Yes, says Alice R. McCabe of the Community Service Society of New York. Social workers should learn to distinguish between the child who commits acts of delinquency from lack of moral training and the one who does so in order to be caught and punished. The former may make a great show of repentance but repeat his acts at the first opportunity, while the latter shows no regret because he feels he deserves what's coming to him. You may recognize neurotic delinquents (or criminals) by their poorly executed plans which always leave a trail leading to the discovery of their behavior.

Is thumb-sucking a neurotic symptom?

Answer: That depends on whether the child does it in order to satisfy a natural desire or to console himself for something else that is making him unhappy. A baby who sucks his thumb is generally gratifying an entirely normal impulse, but when thumb-sucking persists or is reverted to after babyhood is over, it is likely to reflect an emotional disturbance. Don't try to break a child of the habit by scolding or ridicule—find out what is making him unhappy and correct it so that he no longer will need consolation.

LOOKING AT RELIGION



MODERN SCHOLARS AGREE THAT MT. HERMON WAS THE PLACE OF THE TRANSFIGURATION SINCE CHRIST WAS THEN IN THAT NEIGHBORHOOD. "AND AFTER SIX DAYS JESUS TAKETH PETER, JAMES, AND JOHN HIS BROTHER AND BRINGETH THEM UP INTO AN HIGH MOUNTAIN APART, AND WAS TRANSFIGURED BEFORE THEM." Matt 17:1

KEEPING HEALTHY

Allergy, Infected Tonsils, Adenoids

By Dr. James W. Barton

PARENTS ARE sometimes greatly disappointed when removal of their child's enlarged tonsils has not brought about the disappearance of the symptoms for which the operation was performed. That allergy (sensitiveness to various substances such as foods, feathers, fur, pollen) may be causing the symptoms and not the enlarged tonsils is stated in California Medicine by Dr. Ben F. Feingold (Children's Hospital, Los Angeles).

"Swelling is the chief factor in enlargement of tonsils in allergic children. A large, pale, boogy and juicy-looking tonsil results, which, when coupled with symptoms of allergy (itching of nose, sneezing, running nose, drip from back of nose into throat and cough) give a picture of symptoms often mistaken for infection of nose and throat." Because this syndrome or group of symptoms is really caused by the effects of allergy on lymphoid tissue (tonsils and adenoids), surgical removal of these tonsils and adenoids, with no infection present, will not relieve the symptoms. On the contrary it may aggravate the symptoms.

"The general rule should be that if no infection (or obstruction) is present, the removal of the tonsils and adenoids should not take place. When tonsils or adenoids produce symptoms of obstruction, removal is justified only when the allergic condition is adequately managed before and after the operation."

It is known that with infection the allergic disease is aggravated. As the infection gradually subsides, the allergic disease improves. Thus where either infected tonsils or adenoids, or both, are present in allergic individuals, attacks of these infections occur more frequently. In conditions like this it is important that infected tonsils and adenoids should be removed surgically.

"An allergic child who, after complete management of allergic disease for a reasonable time, still has the infections of nose and throat, which infections involve tonsils and adenoids, should have tonsils or adenoids or both removed," Dr. Feingold writes.

Senator Byrd Tries To Save Nation Nine Billion

By Wright A. Patterson

SENATOR BYRD, Democrat of Virginia, says, and knows, that there can be a cut from the President's budget, that calls for taxes of better than 71 billions of dollars in order to pay as we go for our war preparations. Of these more than 71 billions, Senator Byrd proposes to cut more than nine billion, without hampering the defense preparations to the extent of a single dollar. He would take out of that budget only those items that call for expenditures on strictly home projects, either those proposed to start, such as the St. Lawrence waterway, or those for continuing work on projects started in previous years, or those new or continuing projects, in this country or abroad, that have no possible connection with our American defense

In the United States there are approximately 30 million families. That immediately unnecessary nine billion of taxes, means a burden of some $300 as an average for each of those 30 million families. That is a sizable item in the budget of the average American family. In adding such an amount to the family expenditures, adjustments must be made to provide for the unneeded tax item. A family of my acquaintance had a family discussion as to what expense they could cut out in order to provide for that additional new tax item.

There are few American families that would not willingly sacrifice family or personal interests in order to assist to the utmost in the effort to protect this, their, country against Stalin and his Red army. They fully appreciate living in this land of freedom, liberty and opportunity, but they object to making sacrifices so as to pay unneeded taxes in these inopportune times; they object to financing more TVA enterprises, building more dams to produce more power or more light, when private enterprise will provide all we can use; starting new projects such as the St. Lawrence waterway, or continuing work upon those that were started in past years.

Those things we can get along without until a more opportune time. That family could not see why they should be called upon to discontinue little Margaret's music lessons, at a time when she was making such magical progress, or why they must stop movies for Margaret and the two boys, or deprive them of ice cream cones or candies, and cut out their weekly allowance. These expenses, plus the new clothes and new shoes for the children, a new dress for Mother and Dad's annual new suit, must all be sacrificed in order to pay the tax collector, so the government could do things now it could just as well do at some other time.

Of course the Dad and Mother of this family realize that the $300 they must pay will not all be collected from them directly. A portion will be paid indirectly, but directly or indirectly it must be paid in full. The increased wages and the increased taxes the manufacturer and processors pay will be added to the price of their commodities, and members of the families pay in the price of what they buy. The problem in the case of the 30 million families is that they have no one to whom they can pass this extra $300 they must pay. Whether it is paid directly or indirectly, it must come out of the family budget, and each one of those 30 million must make drastic sacrifices to pay their $300 that the government may spend nine billion on things we could get along without at this inopportune time. They consider the forcing of such sacrifices unfair, and they vow dire retribution when election time comes. Senator Byrd's effort to save that nine billion would seem to be better politics than that of the President in demanding the sacrifices the paying of that $300 would entail on each of the 30 million families.

I overheard two members of the local American Legion post discussing ways and means of boycotting all motion picture productions in which any one or more of the cast were listed as members of the Communist party, or any subversive organization. That would be a laudable move. The most sensitive nerve in the picture industry is the box office. May the Legion accept the idea.

PROTEST "BLACK MARKET WORKERS" . . . Pickets tour Berlin streets carrying signs proclaiming against "black workers," people who draw unemployment benefits from the government and then take work on the side from firms without payment of taxes and insurance rates. The workers are preferred by many firms to regular employees because they will work for lower wages. According to officials, about 30 per cent of all hairdressers, tailors, plumbers and construction workers' jobs are taken over by the "black workers." The city loses large amounts because of the tax evasion involved.

MORE BULK THAN WORTH . . . Corporal Winthrop L. Hart of Amesbury, Mass., finance clerk of the fifth air force's 49th fighter bomber wing somewhere in Korea, is loaded with money, seemingly enough to retire on comfortably. But looks are deceiving. In the first place, the money isn't his. And secondly it totals only $333, the amount which Capt. George A. Finnan of Creskill, N.J., finance officer of the wing, fans out easily with a few fingers. The enormous bundles of money Corporal Hart holds represents 2,000,000 won. The Korean money is used to pay civilian Korean laborers.

LADY AND LEPRECHAUN . . . One of the "Little people" from the Emerald Isle has come to amuse Pamela Howard. The magic is done by George Andre Martin, French puppeteer, whose novel act with the dancing puppets is one of the features of the Embassy Club, London. He makes the leprechaun dance by clever manipulation of the fingers. After seeing his act, one shouldn't be hard to convince that the "little people" actually exist.

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL . . . Funnyman Bob Hope cavorts with Marilyn Maxwell in a performance of what he hopes is the Lambeth Walk at a party in his honor at Ciro's Club, London, after he opened at Prince of Wales theater.

NEW COMMANDER INSPECTS MP'S . . . Earl D. Johnson (civilian dress), assistant secretary of the army, and Lieutenant General Matthew B. Ridgway (wearing fatigues) inspect the MP platoon of the G.H.Q. reserve corps following their arrival at Matsushima, Japan, air force base to begin their tour of inspection of the corps. General Ridgway is wearing the usual fatigues, but his dress is lacking the usual hand grenade.

R.F.C. HEAD . . . W. Stuart Symington, named to head the reorganized Reconstruction Finance Corporation, tells congress that President Truman has promised him a free hand in running the agency.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Mrs. Grundy

"CAN'T YOU DO something about scandalous tongues, and the disgusting way women have of suspecting the worst of each other?" writes one Hartney George of Billings. "My wife and I were happily married for nine years," his letter goes on, "and we had two sons, now 5 and 7. Jean died three months ago in a motor accident. At that time her sister Constance had been living with us for more than a year, their parents both being dead. We three were extremely congenial, and Jean was grateful to have Sunny, as we call Con, for a companion and helper. Con is now 25, seven years younger than Jean, and has always been a sort of pet.

"Since Jean's death Connie has gone on caring for the boys and keeping the household going. The death of my wife was a terrible shock to me; I am not likely to put anyone in her place for a long, long time. Connie, too, was devoted to her sister, and finds her greatest happiness in caring for Jean's boys. So just why gossiping tongues have busied themselves with our affairs is a mystery. But they have, to an extent that makes us both extremely resentful.

Causing Scandal

"Two elderly women, friends of Connie's mother, have called to say that the matter is causing scandal, and yesterday our minister, who has always been a close friend of the family, came in to talk frankly to us both, and to say that we must try to get a 'kind, elderly woman' in to make things right.

"Even if we could find the kind elderly woman we couldn't afford her. Connie has no help except a man for cleaning once a week, and help I give her now that Jean is gone. On Sundays we clean house, and for the rest we try, the boys and I, to spare her. My salary of $5,000 a year does not run to pay of a kind elderly woman who would expect at least $1,200 of it. Everyone in this neighborhood reads your weekly articles, and a good strong reproof to these evil-minded folk might do some good. Is there no such thing as a safe and honorable relationship between man and woman, especially in circumstances like these? Connie is cut to the heart and I am plain mad over this sort of thing. I would like to punch somebody in the nose."

You are punching somebody in the nose, my dear Hartney. I am taking especial care to disguise your location and your name because you are flouting that very important old lady Mrs. Grundy, and conventionally speaking you haven't a leg to stand on. From the standpoint of that code of morals and character and self-control and social responsibility that we are all desperately trying to uphold in these difficult days, you and Connie are proposing to do something that simply can't be done.

An attractive man of 34 and a charming unmarried girl some years younger do not keep house together, unless an older person is somewhere in the picture. Outsiders not only suspect something irregular but more often than not their suspicions are quite justified. Unless a man and a girl under such circumstances actually dislike each other and are burning with resentment and intolerance, they are growing steadily nearer and nearer the moment when propinquity gets in its deadly work.

Find a Solution

Connie, is this case, must either move out or find someone to come and lend dignity to the establishment. Surely there is some mother or aunt or Cousin Lulu who will fill that place until Hartney either finds another wife, or, as seems likely, asks Connie to step into her sister's place.

The laws that control these romantic situations are based on long experience of the weakness of human hearts. If Connie insists on defying convention she may easily find herself in the position of another girl who wrote me some years ago.

This girl—call her Sally—lived on in her sister's house after that sister had died, mothered two babies, and shortly fell so deeply in love with her brother-in-law that she was easily won to give him her full trust in a complete surrender.

The first year went by, and Sidney made no mention of marriage. Another year was well advanced when Sally saw the beginning not only of reproof in the eyes of her neighbors, but pity. Sidney was in love with a fresh young thing who was quite confident that she could manage the house and the babies.

Tee for Two

Add a mother-in-law story. Niblick, a man inordinately proud of his golf scores, took his mother-in-law with him to the course one day. After depositing her on a bench, he and a chum started for the first tee. There Niblick announced, "I want to make a good, long drive now. My mother-in-law is watching from the bench outside the clubhouse."

"Why, that's almost 300 yards!" his chum cried. "You couldn't possibly hit her from here."

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS WASTE

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Don't suffer longer with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

"I do general farming on 600 acres and have a herd of 100 registered Guernsey cattle. I have used Firestone tires for 13 years and have them on all 3 of my tractors today. I'll stick to the Firestone Traction-Center tires until somebody else shows me that another tire will do a better job."

Firestone CHAMPIONS BOTH

LIKE Richard Pappe and Earl Thompson, you probably have a definite preference for either an Open-Center or a Traction-Center Tire. That's because you know the soil conditions on your farm better than anyone else.

If your judgment and experience tell you that an Open-Center Tire is better, take a good look at the Firestone Champion Open-Center.

It is the only Open-Center Tire with Power-Arc traction bars, tapered and curved to take a deep, full-traction bite. The bars are curved and flared to cup the soil for a better grip and positive cleaning.

If your judgment tells you that a Traction-Center Tire will do a better job, then there's just one tire for you — the patented Firestone Champion Traction-Center. It's the only Traction-Center Tire on the market. It is the stand-by of a million farmers today.

Either of these tires will do a great job for you. They're both Champions.

Has Iowa a Diamond Cutter?

Do you know, we have 100 skilled crafts in the U. S. . . . and all but one of them in Iowa.

The missing one . . . diamond cutter.

And I'll bet we could find an Iowa diamond cutter if we looked hard enough.

That's another of the great things about this state of ours. We have so many different kinds of people, such diversified interests, so many different ways of making a living and of enjoying life, too.

Merge them together and you have a typical Iowa town.

Just think what it would be like if we had our trades dictated to us, like they have in some foreign countries! We wouldn't like it any better than we would like having our ideas and tastes dictated. We work as we please, think as we please . . . and each of us respects the other's right to do the same.

Long live our different points of view . . . and our respect for the other fellow's point of view.

Had Enviable Record

The Valedictorian of the graduating class this year was Mary Ann Blumer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blumer. Mary Ann had a four-year average in all subjects of 3.8, a near perfect record. A one hundred percent would be a 4. This was one of the highest records ever made by a Klemme high school student.

In addition to being Valedictorian, Miss Blumer also won the Citizenship Award and Medal. This is a new award and is presented by the State Bar Association. County Attorney "Bill" Templeton presented the award to Miss Blumer.

Miss Lacey was a close second to Miss Blumer and was the Salutatorian of the Senior Class. She was also one of the outstanding students in the Klemme high school.

FIRST OF FREE MOVIES DREW LARGE CROWD

Free Movies In Klemme Every Wednesday Evening For Sixteen Weeks

The first showing of free movies in Klemme was held last Wednesday night with a large crowd present. This was the first of 16 free weekly movies to be held in Klemme during the summer months.

Free movies are held on Main Street on Wednesday nights and Band Concerts will be held on Saturday during the summer.

Other entertainment will include soft ball games under the lights at the Klemme field a couple of other nights each week. The schedule will be published when available. Most of the games will be on Tuesday and Thursday nights, we understand, and some games are scheduled for Sunday.

The free movies in Klemme are sponsored by the business folks of Klemme for your enjoyment.

PANEL DISCUSSION ON TAXES HELD AT GOODELL

The Goodell Community Hall was the setting of another of the Farm Bureau discussion type of meetings on last Wednesday evening, May 23rd.

Vern Schluter, director of Avery township, was in charge of the meeting. The group was formed in three smaller groups, headed by an acting chairman who was spokesman for that particular group. Mrs. C. A. Arnold, Mr. Francis Sandry and Mr. J. J. Cook were the spokesman who represented their group.

Paul G. Shurts, county Farm Bureau fieldman, acted as moderator for the discussion. At the panel table were Mr. Fred Missal, county assessor; Maynard Schoneman, county auditor; Roy McMillin, county treasurer and Wm. Butz of the Goodell bank. A very interesting discussion was held on various phases of taxation, questions that varied from the increase of taxes necessary to pay the new law for the increase of money for the support of the county extension program to "Taxes on Taxes." Even our dogs came into the discussion relative to the possibility of a mandatory rabies inoculation of all dogs in the county.

The tenative plans for the June meeting is for a corn borer discussion panel which will be held at the Goodell Community Hall on Thursday, June 28, Twin Lake township will be the host at this meeting.

Party Friday Afternoon

Mrs. Wesley Patterson invited Paiges' school friends in for an afternoon party on Friday. Games were played and the youngsters had lots of fun, playing with Paige before she leaves soon for her new home. A nice lunch was served by Mrs. Patterson.

Picnic Supper Held At McIntosh Woods For Pattersons

A group of young people held a picnic supper at McIntosh Woods State Park at Clear Lake Sunday evening as a farewell party for Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Patterson and family. A weiner roast with lots of other food was enjoyed by all.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and Lindy; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wille; Carol Brager and family; Merlin Neuberger and family; Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Ahrenkiel and Bobby; Bud Murray and family; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, Jr. and Judy; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hartzell; Pete Kilgore and Miss Elizabeth Goll.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

School's out! In the next few weeks thousands of Iowa school children will be happily shouting this old phrase.

Yes, it's the time of year when youngsters can look forward to full days of playing baseball, riding bikes, swimming and lots of other fun outdoors.

"Safety Sake" joins your Iowa Safety Congress in wishing all youngsters: "Happy Vacation, Kids!" And he adds, "Make it a safe, happy summer."

Play safe on playgrounds away from traffic. When you do ride your bikes on the street, obey all traffic rules. And swim only in guarded pools and lakes where you know how deep the water is.

Don't be a show-off or a chance-taker. You'll only invite trouble and may be seriously hurt. You wouldn't want to spend your vacation in a hospital while your playmates, who follow safety rules, enjoy playing outside all summer long, would you?

Remember: Follow safety rules while you play, so you'll be able to enjoy the next day.

WORK ON REPAIRING WATER TANK COMPLETED SAT. NIGHT

Fred J. Arnold and Roy Schaefer Saturday night completed the rapairing of one of the city water storage tanks which sprung a leak a couple of weeks ago. Since that time the town has been serviced with water from one tank only.

The tank, which was undergoing repair has been in service since along about 1918. The men worked over the entire bottom of the tank and found over 100 weak spots which they welded. It is their opinion that the tank should give service again for another 5 to 10 years.

A new pump was recently installed at the station and Klemme's water system now should be in good shape for a number of years. All of the water meters in town are being checked, repaired or replaced. It was found so far in checking meters that less than half of the meters were accurate.

Completes School Year

Mrs. Mildred Weisbrod, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schoenwetter of Klemme, has successfully completed a year of teaching in Rural District No. 9 near Rockwell. Mrs. Weisbrod and family have been living at Rockwell.

HANCOCK COUNTY CROPS COMING ALONG GOOD

With good weather the past week, Hancock County crops are looking good. Oats is doing a lot better than was at first expected and there are some good looking fields of oats.

The weather has been good for corn and many corn fields are up and showing rows the last of the week. Some corn will get under cultivation this week. Farmers say the stand appears to be good.

Pastures and haylands have an abundant growth and the hay crop should also be good.

STROMER NOW RAISING HIS OWN SHETLAND PONIES

There has been such a big demand for Shetland ponies at the Stromer Kennels and Pony Stables, operated by V. A. Stromer at his farm north of Klemme on highway 69 that he is now raising his own stock.

At the present time Stromer has 27 brood mares on his farm, as well as a number of Shetland colts and ponies for sale.

Besides selling ponies and dogs, Mr. Stromer manfacturers pony carts and wagons and is doing a brisk business in that line. His carts and wagons are in great demand by pony raisers.

R E A Meeting June 6th

HANCOCK COUNTY RURAL ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE TO MEET JUNE 6TH

Reports And Election Will Be Held At This Meeting

The Annual Meeting of the Hancock County Rural Electric Cooperative at Garner, Iowa will be held on the grounds of the cooperative June 6th.

The meeting will start at 10:30 A. M. and the forenoon session will consist of the annual reports of the President, Victor Loebib; Secretary, Aaron Stromer; Treasurer, Geo. E. Gaskill and Manager, H. L. Bush, Jr. The election of directors will also take place at this time.

A free lunch will be served during the noon hour and at 1:15 P. M. the afternoon session will begin.

The speaker of the day will be Mr. Ed. Helm. The title of Mr. Helm's speech will be "This Is Our Problem." This talk will be a condensed report of the first Freedom Forum held. The Freedom Forums are sponsored by Harding College and a joint committee of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, and the Association of National Advertisers. This joint committee was organized during the last war to publicize War Bond sales, Blood Bank and Scrap Drives for the war effort. Rather than disband this active committee, they formulated plans to help improve the public understanding of the American Way of Life. Mr. Helms presentation of this subject will be aided by visual boards upon which he will illustrate his points.

The cooperative has employed Mr. Harris Nelson, "Comic Instrumentalist" as the entertainment for the annual meeting. Harris plays three trumpets at the same time, trumpet and slide trombone at the same time, piano accordian and trumpets at the same time and many other novelty effects. Mr. Nelson is not only an outstanding musician in his own right, but one of the country's most versitile comedians. His program is of interest from the youngest to the oldest—a program definitely of family interest. A program that you don't want to miss!!

Door prizes will be given away at the conclusion of the meeting.

The cooperative members are urged to attend this meeting of their own electric cooperative. Visitors from town and non-member farms are invited to attend.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

His car was five year old and in nice condition. Of course, lately he'd noticed that the brakes sort of pulled on the left side. But he figured it wasn't serious. Anyway, it was only a 10-mile drive to town.

As he slowed down for the stop sign at the highway, he noticed again that the brakes slipped a little. But he got stopped all right

In town he did some shopping, talked with friends. He considered taking the car to the garage and getting those brakes tended to, but time slipped by and he had to get back home.

Half way home, cruising along at moderate speed, he was noticing a neatly fenced-in field and thinking he could use some of that kind of fence himself when a small boy chased a dog onto the road.

He saw a flash of blond and blue. He jammed on the brakes. But the brakes weren't there.

It wouldn't make much difference, now, to the boy and his dog. But the man would never drive again without seeing, on the road ahead, a small boy lying very still, his dog beside him.

EVENING PROGRAM PLANNED FOR 4-H RALLY

Hancock County 4-H girls are making plans for their 4-H Rally Day and evening program to be held at the Garner High School on June 5. The evening program will be presented by the 4-H club members. It will include the County Girls Creed which will be given by Rachel Huenemann of Liberty Busy Bees, the installation of offficers conducted by the 1950-51' county 4-H officers, the initiation of honorary member to the county 4-H Girls Organization, presented by the Orthel Jolly Workers and Bingham Boosters, the county 4-H girls chorus with all clubs represented and the Good Grooming Revue.

The 4-H girls will hold their annual business meeting in the afternoon session of Rally Day with their annual election of officers as their main item of business. The Better Grooming Contest will be held in the afternoon with one junior and one senior member of each participating. The music appreciation contest will be conducted in the afternoon with announcement of the club winner at the evening program.

The evening program is being held this year especially for the parents and friends of 4-H. If you are interested in what Hancock County 4-H girls are doing spend an evening with them at this special program which is a part of the 4-H activities.

CHOIR HAD PICNIC SUPPER IN HONOR OF DIRECTOR

The members of the Klemme Methodist Choir and their families had a picnic supper at the fireplace in Rev. Egeland's yard Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Wesely Patterson, who had directed the choir here for several years.

The large group enjoyed 'hot dogs" and lots of other food at the picnic.

Mrs. Patterson was presented with a gift from the choir members.

OVER 100 CHILDREN WERE EXAMINED AT FREE CLINIC FRIDAY

There were 101 children registered in for the crippled childrens' clinic held at the Lutheran Church in Forest City Friday. Specialists from Iowa City examined children, of all ages who had some physical defect. The specialist were assisted by volunteer registered nurses and volunteer workers.

Mrs. Lester Stille, Mrs. John Chambers and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson from Klemme assisted in clerical work and helping with the children. Registered nurses from Garner who assisted were Mrs. E. H. Phillips, Mrs. Walt Edelen and Mrs. J. Dallas Gibson; Mrs. Edith Elling and Mrs. Ed Bock assisted, as did Mrs. E. G. Schaeffer of Forest City. Mr. A. L. Kingery of Fort Dodge was present to give advise on re-habilitation work.

It is planned to hold another clinic in the fall, which will probably be held in Hancock County for this county and Winnebago.

Parents with crippled children or children with some physical defect may take their children to these clinics where they will be examined by specialist from the University hospital. Parents who want to take their children to the next clinic should contact their local physician for an appointment. There is no cost as the clinics are paid for out of the Easter Seal funds.

New Signs On Cafe

A Mason City firm put up new signs on Gerardi's Cafe on Friday. The new signs are quite attractive and add to the appearance of Ernie's place of business.

HELLO FOLKS

COUNTY TO BE REPRESENTED AT STATE 4-H CONSERVATION CAMP

Winton Dorow, 18 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dorow, Garner, has been named to attend the Iowa 4-H Conservation Camp at Camp Mitigwa near Boone, June 5-8.

He was selected for outstanding 4-H club activities and interest in conservation by the state 4-H club staff at Iowa State College. The camp activities will include field tours and discussions on conservation of fish, soil, birds, trees and plant life, and geologic formations.

On the lighter side of the program will be general camp activities including sports, vesper programs, campfire sessions, handicrafts and parties, according to Paul Henderson, extension director.

The program is sponsored by the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service and the Federal Cartride Company, Minneapolis. A total of 55 boys and 55 girls attend the conservation camp, along with staff members.

Badger Clark, Black Hills poet and philosopher will be on hand to lend color to the sessions. He will arrive at the camp a day late. He will receive an honorary doctor's degree from the South Dakota State College.

Winton will have a chance to look over the Iowa 4-H Camping Center site, located a few miles down the Des Moines River from Camp Mitigwa, a boy scout camp. Two groups of conservation campers will see the 4-H camp site and hear about plans for its development.

Winton has been in club work for 8 years and has received the following recognitions, Chicago Producers Swine and Beef medals, the Thomas E. Wilson Meat Animal Award, 5 record book awards, a food production medal and a leadership medal.

Winton has also been active in Church and school activities. He was valedictorian of the 1951 graduating class at the Ventura High School, is active in FFA, basketball, baseball and football. He also plays in the High School band.

Winton will be available for talks on conservation when he returns from the camp.

ED. THOMPSON STARTS MAKING METAL CORNERS AGAIN

Ed. Thompson moved one of his die cutting presses into the basement of his store the past week to again begin manufacturing corners, which are used extensively in making screen windows.

Thompson's stock of corners became exhausted and the demand for the corners he makes continued to roll in so Ed. decided to start his presses again in manufacturing corners for the trade.

National, State Parks Provide Vacations for Home-Towners

May 27-June 2 is Park and Recreation Week. During this week the eyes of all America will be centered on the millions of acres of national parks, U. S. forests and wild life areas and thousands of scattered state parks throughout the country.

The week gains added importance in the eyes of Main Street because state and national parks have become the favorite vacationland for home town America. The home-towner likes the idea of getting into his automobile, piling in the family and sometimes even the family dog, and taking off for a tour of his own country to see its wonders.

For example, over 30,000,000 people visit the nation's national parks, monument areas, and capital parks annually. As for state parks, it has been estimated that 125,000,000 people use them annually.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

As for small town parks, with a real estate value of billions of dollars and with thousands of ball diamonds, recreations buildings, swimming pools, tennis courts, etc., it could not be estimated how many people use them. The home towns of America provide their citizens with more than 20,000 separate park units.

During the past 50 years park and recreation properties, facilities and services have shown tremendous growth and influence. Today they make a major contribution to the welfare and happiness of the American people in every community in the land. The small town that has a federal or state park near it has learned from experience that it has meant business to the community. And it is a wise community that advertises its facilities and beauties

The whole story of the local parks is not even yet known statistically, but listed figures show that 1,465 cities, towns, and villages operate over 19,000 separate park and playground units, with an area of nearly 5,000 acres valued at well over $2,000,000,000.

The man on Main Street should be sure that he gets his share of the benefits and joys that are his for the asking. National and state parks belong to him.

Foot Care in Focus For Foot Health Week

Summer is the toughest time of the year on your feet. So with National Foot Health Week (May 19-26) to remind you, it's a good idea to pay some attention to them.

Unfortunately, many people are less careful in summer about hygiene than during any other time. Outdoor activities and sports put unaccustomed strains on many persons who lead a sedentary existence during the rest of the year, and this results in burning, aching soles and toes that play havoc with posture, appearance and disposition.

Clinical records show that footwear of improper fit or material often is the principal cause of frustration and fretfulness during otherwise perfect summer day. Feet, like any other part of the body, breathe. Constant exchange and passage of air are essential for comfort, especially since feet tend to expand during physical activities in warm weather. That's why podiatrists and other foot specialists are unanimous in recommending roomy oxford-type shoes equipped with leather soles for all-around outdoor wear.

Shoes with leather soles are especially important in summer because leather's porous structure allows air to enter and maintain healthful foot temperatures.

The home towner should take advantage of the years of experience has given his local shoe store salesmen and ask for their advice when they are purchasing summer footwear. It will eliminate many of a foot-ache.

A summer foot ailment that bedevils many Americans to an extent second only to the common cold is known as athlete's foot. The term is actually a misnomer for even persons whose most strenuous activity is lying in a hammock are as susceptible to it as professional ball players.

To prevent this pesky germ from getting a start and to remain on a sound footing, the American Foot Care Institute recommends the following basic foot rules which every home-towner will find helpful:

1. Wash Frequently!—Bath your feet frequently in tepid water, dry carefully and use powder afterwards.

2. Change Often!—Never wear the same shoes two days in succession, and change socks or stockings at least daily.

3. Wear Right!—For coolness and ventilation wear all-leather shoes, both soles and uppers. Save sneakers and playshoes for the beach or soft surfaces.

4. Fit Right!—Feet swell in summer. So be sure to wear the correct size shoes and stockings (a half inch longer than the longest toe). When buying shoes it is important to have the salesman fit you properly. Years of experience makes his advice worth listening to.

5. Exercise!—Limber up your feet at intervals—they have muscles, too. Wiggle your toes!

6. Prevent Athlete's Foot!—Ringworm of the foot thrives only in hot, soggy environment. Wear leather soles which absorb foot perspiration.

7. Take Care!—Don't be a "bathroom surgeon". If your feet need attention consult a podiatrist or chiropodist.

Illinois Legion to Sell Poppies to Aid Veterans

Since last November more than 12,000 wounded and disabled veterans of both world wars and Korea have been busily engaged in Illinois hospitals fashioning together pieces of cloth.

Their finished products—bright red poppies, the memorial flower of the nation's war dead—go on sale in Chicago and Cook county on May 25. Sales will be conducted for the rest of the state on May 26.

Proceeds from the street corner sales are earmarked for the aid of sick and disabled veterans and their families. Every penny taken in after expenses, goes directly into veterans' rehabilitation funds.

Some 15,000 volunteer workers will be at posts in Chicago from dawn to dusk, and additional 17,000 over other parts of Illinois.

Since 1931 poppy days have been held in Illinois under the auspices of the Veterans Poppy Day Association of Chicago, composed of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Spanish-American War Veterans.

COMMUNICATIONS

Western Union Begins Second Century of Service in the U.S.

On April 1 Western Union began its second century of service to the nation.

Organized April 1, 1851, as the New York and Mississippi Valley Printing Telegraph company in Rochester, N. Y., and changing its name to Western Union five years later, the nation's telegraph company observed its 100th anniversary through April.

Because of the world situation and the unusual load of business and responsibilities, the company did not have any elaborate celebration marking the anniversary.

Western Union's first executive office in Rochester, N. Y., back in 1851 was equipped with a single roll-top desk, a few chairs and a cast-iron cuspidor shaped like a plug hat. It was a modest beginning for a company that now has 43,000 employees.

Today, Western Union annually moves some 200,000,000 telegrams, 8,000,000 foreign and domestic telegraph money orders, and 5,000,000 cablegrams, many of a military and diplomatic nature. Additional billions of words are handled for the nation's press and over private wire systems leased to many leading industries.

The latest communications miracle developed by Western Union is the High-Speed Fax. It is the fastest overall communications method in the world.

Over the High-Speed Fax a message can be sent at the rate of 3,000 words a minute or 180,000 words an hour. It will transmit written, printed or picture matter, and there is no limit to the distance over which it may operate if a suitable circuit with electronic repeaters is provided.

Company Linked the East to the West

A part of the history of Western Union that fascinates most Americans today was the linking of the east and the Pacific coast by telegraph wire.

California was virtually isolated from the rest of the country. The wilderness west of the Mississippi was spanned only by pony express riders who galloped on relays of ponies from St. Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento in 10 days.

When the company planned to span the nation with wire, experts warned it would take 10 years. President Lincoln was skeptical. He didn't think it could be done; there were no poles on the treeless plains and too many hostile Indians.

But the wire was strung in three months and 20 days. On October 24, 1861, the job was completed and the first telegram over the line was from California to President Lincoln pledging loyalty of that state to the union cause.

Household Hints

After searing less-tender cuts of meat such cooking methods as stewing, braising and pot-roasting should be used.

Protein foods require clean, covered, cool surroundings to keep them free of harmful bacteria.

Cook dried peas, beans and lentils in the water in which they have been soaked so that valuable nutrients may be saved.

* * *

Warm weather brings youngsters outdoors to romp and play. And that means a ring around the bathtub. Keep the bathtub sparkling with a sprinkling of baking soda on a damp cloth. Soda is an excellent cleanser for enamel tubs and bowls.

The best vegetable buy for March is celery with carrots, escarole, potatoes, lettuce, parsnips, turnips, snap beans and sweet potatoes on the plentiful list.

No need for steel wool to rust and become unattractive. Between uses, store it in a jar of baking soda-water—three tablespoons soda to a cup of water. Soda is a rust inhibiter.

Plentiful proteins in March are eggs, turkeys, broilers and fryers, frozen fish fillets, cottage cheese, peanut butter and dry beans.

Housework Easy Without Nagging Backache

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Don't suffer longer with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Luncheons of Distinction May Be Prepared Easily Around Seasonal Foods

WHEN YOU'RE entertaining, the foods need not be elaborate to make a big hit. If they're well-prepared and attractively served, you may be certain to create the right impression.

Using seasonal foods and taking full advantage of their freshness and color will lend a distinction and elegance which is hard to achieve when you work with out-of-season produce.

Fresh summer greens, pink and red, with a gay touch of yellow are now at their height, and they can be brought to the table at their best. Plan your special luncheons around foods which feature these colors, and you'll receive compliments galore on even the simplest fare.

FOR EXAMPLE, sandwiches of the double-decker type teamed with an attractive salad of pineapple and cherries and a Pineapple Torte gives you color and tasty foods at the same time.

Double-Decker Sandwiches
(Serves 8)

- 2 hard-cooked eggs
- 1 tablespoon pickle relish
- 1-2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- Salt and pepper
- 24 slices bread, crusts removed
- 8 slices ham
- 8 lettuce leaves
- 8 slices tomato
- 16 stuffed olives
- 8 radishes

Combine eggs, relish and mayonnaise; season with salt and pepper. Spread 8 slices buttered bread and top each with a second slice of bread, buttered on both sides. Place slice of ham and lettuce leaf on each. Top with a third slice of bread buttered on one side. Garnish with tomato slice, stuffed olive and radish rose.

Pineapple Cherry Salad
(Serves 8)

- 2 packages lime-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 pint soured cream
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple
- ⅔ cup dark, pitted cherries
- ½ cup slivered blanched almonds
- Salad Greens
- Mayonnaise

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Cool. When mixture is slightly thickened, fold in soured cream, salt, pineapple, cherries and almonds. Turn into individual molds and chill until firm. Unmold on crisp greens and garnish with mayonnaise.

Peach Shortcake
(Serves 8)

- 2 cups cake flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¼ cup sugar
- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup buttermilk or sour milk
- 3 cups sliced, fresh peaches
- ¼ to ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon

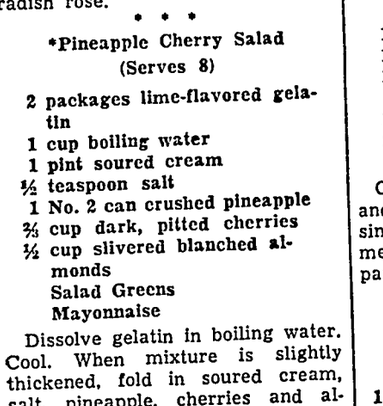
Sift flour with salt, baking powder, soda and ¼ cup sugar. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add buttermilk. Mix just until dough follows fork around the bowl. Pat out in greased 9-inch round pan. Bake in a hot (425°) oven for 20 minutes. Split hot shortcake. Fill and top with sliced peaches and sprinkle with remaining sugar and cinnamon. Serve with cream, plain or whipped. Note: To sour milk, add 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar to ½ cup sweet milk.



Chunks of lobster combined with celery and cucumber are combined with chicken-flavored gelatin to make a cool but substantial salad for an elegant hot weather luncheon. To serve, the salad is laced with mayonnaise, greens and hard-cooked eggs.

Pear Sundae with Chocolate-Mint sauce is a flavor innovation which is bound to please the most discriminating taste. This type of dessert satisfies several types of tastes for dessert since it includes fruit, ice cream and sauce.

ANOTHER DISTINCTIVE luncheon features hot soup with a chilly salad of lobster. It ends on a pleasant note with a Pear Sundae served with Chocolate - Mint Sauce.

Clam Mongole
(Serves 8)

- 1 can condensed pea soup
- 1 can condensed tomato soup
- 1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 1 can minced clams
- 2 cups light cream
- Parsley

Combine soups, minced clams and cream. Heat thoroughly and simmer for 5 minutes. Serve immediately with 3 small sprigs of parsley.

Lobster Salad
(Serves 6-8)

- 2 cans rock lobster
- 1½ cups chopped cucumber
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup French dressing
- 2 packages unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup cold water
- 3 chicken bouillon cubes
- 3 cups boiling water
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Mayonnaise

Cut lobster in chunks; combine with cucumber and celery. Pour French dressing over this mixture and allow to stand while preparing the remainder of the salad. Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Dissolve bouillon cubes in boiling water and add to gelatin. Allow to cool. When gelatin mixture begins to set, add pimiento, onion and salt to lobster mixture. Pour into ring mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Set in refrigerator until firm. To serve, unmold on a bed of lettuce and fill center with mayonnaise. Garnish with hard-cooked eggs, sliced or quartered, and parsley.

IF YOU PREFER a plain salad, you'll like this type which is just a bit simpler:

Lobster-Caper Salad
(Serves 6)

- 2 6-ounce cans lobster
- 1 cup thinly sliced celery
- 2-3 tablespoons French dressing
- Salt and pepper
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- Capers

Combine lobster meat with celery and French dressing. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Chill and drain. Serve topped with mayonnaise and capers. Garnish with lime or lemon wedges, ripe olives and deviled eggs.

LYNN SAYS:

How to Select Fruit For Table Use

Fresh figs are best when they're soft to the touch and vary as to size. Avoid those which are molded or decayed on the surface. Plump, over-ripe figs have a sour odor which is caused by fermentation.

Pineapple is abundant now and can be eaten if soft to touch, golden yellow in color and fragrant. To test for ripeness, you may also pull a leaf or spear from the top. If it pulls readily, the pineapple is ripe.

Watermelon should have a symmetrical shape and a fresh attractive exterior. A ripe melon scratches easily on the skin with a nail and thumps with a dull hollow sound.

Honeydew melons are best when the blossom end is slightly soft, the flesh green, juicy and sweet. You'll also be able to tell ripeness by the aroma.

Strawberries are the only berries which keep their caps when ripe. For the best selection, choose those which are medium-sized, tart and well-shaped.

Locke Considered Top Golfer

By GRANTLAND RICE

New York—A portly fellow by the name of Bobby Locke is on his way from South Africa to England, and from England to the United States. This is one of the longest invasions that sport has known.

Bobby Locke is a South African golfer that many rate as the greatest of them all. His supporters bar nobody.

He is headed for the Goodall Round Robin at Wykagyl in early June, and later to the U.S. Open in Detroit, two of the major tests that golf has to offer.

Locke is, beyond any argument, the greatest golfer the other side of the Atlantic has developed since the reign of Harry Vardon. Bobby is now British Open Champion.

His showing in our Goodall Round Robin has been a trifle better than sensational This is a grinding test where every player from a picked field must meet every other player. The total result tells the story

In three Round Robins, the records we have show that Locke has won two and finished second in the other start. He has won more money, taking a general average of his play on this side of the bunkered pond, than any golfer we can recall at the moment. In any event, he has won a healthy chunk, his full share of doubloons.

Grantland Rice

Unfortunately Ben Hogan won't be able to stand the long 36-hole march of the Round Robin test. But Hogan will be on hand at Oakland Hills, for the Open, later on.

For all that, Locke will have a rather savage test to meet.

He will have such competitors as Lloyd Mangrum, Sammy Snead, Jim Ferrier, Skee Riegel, Jimmy Demaret, and others from the pick of the big field. Hogan is now Open champion and master of the Masters, two of the highest peaks golf knows today.

But the Round Robin is also a terrific test of both skill and stamina.

What this country and golf in general needs is the arrival of a few new faces. The old guard is wearing out. Hogan, Nelson, Snead, Mangrum, Ferrier, etc., haven't too far to go. They are moving to the borders of the Forty-Year-Old country, where the laurel and the olive begin to fade.

Bobby Locke is no part of a kid. for that matter. Bobby has been around a long time.

The Locke Swing

Bobby Locke's stroke is closest to a completely natural golf swing of any we have seen.

You can see the iron-shod schooling, the hours and years of practice, back of the Hogan groove. This goes for Nelson, Mangrum, and most of the others.

They have hammered themselves into a set style that allows for rare errors. There is the straight left arm, the body turn, the fixed head, the hand and wrist action that controls the club head.

With Ben Hogan, especially, there is rarely the slightest change from this killing routine. Sammy Snead has one of the best-looking swings golf has ever known. But Locke's swing still looks to be a trifle simpler and less complicated.

It is more in line with the so-called "St Andrews Swing" of ancient years.

Another factor of Locke's swing is its consistency or steadiness. You rarely see him wandering too far from the trapped or pitted highway. He is also a sound competitor who rarely gets bothered or upset by any errors or mistakes.

In addition to this, Locke has an extremely short game. There is no one better from just off the green to the bottom of the cup. He can chip and he can putt.

He has his full share of concentration and determination, and he has a swing he trusts implicitly, which is a major help.

Locke's visit will be the shot in the arm which golf needs today because of the lack of younger stars who seem to be in no hurry to report.

His presence on the greens will help the tournament appeal. American golfers, too, will remember the ability of the South African visitor.

Big Money

About one stable in ten makes any real money from a race track —breeding, selling or racing.

The horse player takes quite a healthy beating, year after year, but the horse owner takes an even bigger trimming. For example, Greentree, one of the best, makes money about one year in ten.

The Whitneys, Vanderbilts, Wideners, Wrights, Sloanes, Jeffords, Klebergs and a few others support racing.

Mrs. Warren Wright's famous Calumet stable with Citation, Ponder, Coaltown, Bewitch, etc., had dominated the bank account of the game steadily until Mrs. Sloane's Brookmeade stable took charge in 1950. Calumet ran second.

SEDIMENT IN WATER SUPPLY

Question: Can you tell me what's wrong with a pump or well that pumps fine white sand and after water has stood in pails, the side of the pail turns red like rust? We bought a little home and have a swamp near the pump. What can we do to correct this? My clothes show color from the rust or iron. Our pump is 90 feet deep and has iron pipe.

Answer: The white sand undoubtedly is in the water supply, but the rust is more probably either in the iron pipe or the pump. If you do not wish to take the pump to pieces to find out, I believe the simplest thing to do would be to have a rust removal unit installed. This may or may not take out the sand that seems to be in suspension in the water. Strictly speaking, a filter would have to be put in also to filter out the sand For the names of these units inquire of the Architects Samples exhibit, 101 Park Avenue, New York 17

DECORATING BASEMENT

Question: We are planning to decorate our basement Would it be advisable to apply a coat of aluminum as a sealer before applying basement paint? What is the best paint to use for the basement?

Answer: For the masonry parts apply a cement base paint without any other base. It must go on a clean unfinished surface Ordinary oil paint is not used on masonry walls which are apt to be damp. The cement paint is sold by dealers in masonry supplies and building materials; it comes as a powder to mix with water. For the wood parts use two coats enamel undercoater and a coat of of enamel Use only a rubber base floor paint for the cellar floors or asphalt tile.

MUSTY SMELL UNDER HOUSE

Question: Part of my basement isn't dug out. There is about two feet of clearance in this part, with practically no air circulation There is a bad musty smell from this part of the basement, especially in damp weather. and I was wondering if there were anything I could use to eliminate this bad odor.

Answer: Try to provide more ventilation under the house, and in addition, if you can manage to crawl underneath, you could sprinkle the ground with chloride of lime. Cover your face with a gas mask while working to protect yourself from inhaling the stuff. If the space is too cramped for you to work in there, the only alternative would be to locate someone with an agricultural spraying machine.

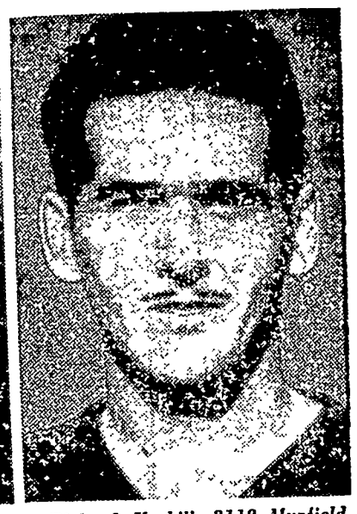
HADACOL HELPS MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Suffering Stomach Distress, Aches and Pains, Weak, Run-down Conditions and Nervousness When Due To Deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron

Mrs. Anna Lavergne, Church Point, Louisiana: "You don't know how wonderful it feels to be in such good condition—after feeling run-down. I had a very poor appetite—in fact, food didn't agree with me at all. I had a hard time sleeping nights . . . sometimes I would stay awake until one or two in the morning and then the next day I would feel tired and groggy all day long. You have no idea how terrible I felt. Now all this is gone . . . yes, now that I have been taking HADACOL, I feel wonderful. I get lots of good, sound sleep, have a fine appetite and just lots of energy. I can eat any kind of food now and it doesn't bother me a bit. I just can't begin to thank HADACOL."

F. W. Horton, 108 74th Ave., Houston, Texas, says about his little son: "Lee was very weak and run-down and just didn't want to eat at all. We heard about HADACOL and decided that was what Lee needed. After he started taking HADACOL his appetite picked up right away. He started gaining weight and eats real well now, and has been feeling real good.

HADACOL has helped many children suffering weak, run-down conditions when due to deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron. If your child is puny and run-down due to such deficiencies, HADACOL can help. HADACOL is recommended by many doctors.



Richard Krabill, 3118 Murfield Road, Toledo 14, Ohio: "I am an apprentice pharmacist and I go to the University of Toledo. Going to school and working until 9:30 gets pretty tiresome. I was getting tired and run-down keeping pace with all I had to do. Being married and having a family, I am compelled to work after school. I work in a pharmacy here in Toledo. After selling HADACOL here in the store, I decided I'd try it. You have no idea how much it has picked me up. I'm telling you truthfully, HADACOL is the answer to all my tiredness. Already I have won customers on HADACOL. I am 31 and a veteran of World War II."

HADACOL CAN HELP YOU . . .

. . . if your system lacks these essential elements, you will be amazed at the wonderful results HADACOL can bring you, as it has to thousands of other fine folks who suffered a deficiency of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL supplies.

HADACOL is that wonderful new preparation—promising blessed relief for your indigestion, stomach disturbances, (gas, heartburn, sour "risings" after meals), as well as that general run-down condition, and annoying aches and pains, if due to a lack of Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin in your system.

Don't go through life suffering with conditions caused by such deficiencies when relief may be as close at hand as the nearest drugstore for sufferers from these deficiencies. Buy HADACOL today. Trial size bottle only $1.25. Large family economy size, $3.50. Refuse substitutes. There's only one true and genuine HADACOL. Sold on a strict money-back guarantee—you'll feel great after the first few bottles you take or your money will be refunded. If your dealer does not sell HADACOL order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana.

4-H CONVENTIONS WILL BE IN JUNE

Local Groups Choosing Their Delegates Now

Local boys' and girls' 4-H clubs are now preparing for state meetings—Iowa 4-H Girls' Convention and Iowa 4-H Boys' Short Course.

They're selecting their delegates to the annual meetings of 4-H club members, making nominations for state office, selecting leaders to accompany them and making arrangements for transportation.

Both state meetings will be held on the Iowa State College campus. The girls' convention comes first—June 19 to 23, followed by the boys' short course, June 25 to 27.

The 1951 4-H boys' short course was shortened one day due to the shortage of farm labor. It usually runs for four days instead of this year's three. Among top features for each meeting will be headline speakers, discussion sessions, initiation of honorary members, annual business meeting and election of new state officers.

Announce Themes

As an added feature this year representatives of each group will visit the Iowa 4-H Camping Center site, 9 miles south of Boone.

Theme of the boys' short course program will be "4-H'ers Serving in Today's World," G. A. Lineweaver, state 4-H club leader, has announced. Speakers and discussion topics will center around three topics: what we have in America that is worth preserving; what forces are tending to destroy our way of life; and what 4-H members as citizens can do to preserve it.

The girls' convention program will deal with: how to become better world citizens and how to work together for better world understanding by the United Nations speakers' bureau will address 4-H girls and leaders, according to Esther Whetstone, state girls' 4-H club leader at Iowa State College.

Special Studies, Tours

Girls' delegates will learn of new developments in the fields of foods and nutrition in the home furnishing, and clothing from extension specialists and college home economics instructors. They'll also see Iowa's Better Groomed Girls, who will be selected at the convention.

Field trips to the college agronomy farm and special programs by the animal husbandry and agricultural engineering departments of Iowa State College will bring the boys up to date in those fields.

Tours of the state college campus are on the program for both groups. Their leaders will take part in sessions aimed at making the 4-H club programs more valuable in meeting the needs of boys and girls.

History Repeats Itself!

Once again the farm machinery industry and the various farm lobbys have failed to convince congress that agriculture is basic and vital to our welfare. Steel for farm machinery has been cut one third as of July 1 this year and the steel surplus in manufacturing plants is used up.

With what we have on hand and what is promised us in July, we can still offer a reasonable variety of OLIVER Machinery. Later on, we will be back to conditions about as they were in 1943. Why not look ahead and get what you are going to need while it is still to be had?

LEGAL NOTICE

ORDINANCE NO. 40

AN ORDINANCE REGULATING THE USE OF STREETS, ALLEYS, AND PUBLIC PLACES FOR THE MOVING OF BUILDINGS, AND THE MAKING AND REPAIR OF EXCAVATIONS THEREIN, AND PROVIDNG A PENALTY FOR VIOLATIONS THEREOF

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE TOWN COUNCIL OF THE TOWN OF KLEMME, IOWA.

Section 1. No person shall move any building, or structure along, across, or over any street, alley, or public place, unless he shall first secure a permit therefor. Such permit shall be issued only upon application to the Mayor, stating the kind of building and structure, the height, and size thereof, the location from which and to which same is to be moved, and the streets, alleys, and public places along and across which the same is intended to be moved. A bond, with good and sufficient surety to be approved by the Mayor shall be posted with said application for such permit conditioned to idemnify the town and any other person, company, or corporation damaged thereby, against any and all liability to persons, property or other damages arising out of the moving of such building or structure, and also providing that the District Court of Hancock County, Iowa, shall have jurisdiction of any suit for recovery on said bond.

Section 2. Upon receipt of any such application, the Mayor shall unless otherwise agreed, give any person, company or corporation, having telegraph, telephone, electric or power wires or poles, along the streets, alleys, of public places of the town, written notice of such application, and fix thereon a time and place of hearing, not less than two days from the date of service of such notice, and upon said hearing, the person desiring the permit, and such person, company or corporation shall be entitled to present evidenece and be heard upon the question of the proposed route, and the Mayor, after hearing such evidenece may grant a permit in writing for the moving of such building or structure, by such route, as he shall find from such hearing most convenient for the public, and shall designate said route in the permit Upon issuance of any such permit, the Mayor shall give written notice to any person, company or corporation having telegraph, telephone, electric, or opwer wires or poles along the route designated in such permit to move any wires or poles which interfere with the moving of such building or structure, for not to exceed five hours and not earlier than eight o'clock in the forenoon, nor later than three o'clock in the afternoon, the route and time for moving said building or structure to be fully designated in said written notice from the Mayor to such person, company or corporation, served twenty-four hours before the time of such removal of any such wires or poles. The cost of such romoval and the replacement thereof shall be fixed by the Mayor and paid by the owner of the building or structure to the Mayor for the benefit of the owner of such wires or poles before the giving of the notice for the removal of the wires or poles. Any person, company or corporation shall not be required to move any part of its high potential electric transmission lines provided that in the judgement of the Mayor, any other suitable route exists for the moving of said building or structure, and shall be entitled to forty-eight hours notice from the Mayor of the necessity of the removal of any such high potential electric transmission lines.

Section 3. No person shall excavate in, on, under or remove or disturb any sidewalk or paving, or excavate in any location in any street, alley, sidewalk, or public place, under which are located any telegraph, telephone or electric lines, including cables and or conduits, drainage systems or water systems, including any and all appurtenances thereto unless he shall first obtain a permit therefor from the Mayor. Whenever such excavation or removal is completed such person shall then restore any such sidewalk, paving, street, alley, or public place, to the same condition in which it was prior thereto, all at such person's cost and expense. A bond with good and sufficient surety to be approved by the Mayor shall be posted with said application for such permit conditioned to indemnify the town and any other person, company or corporation damaged thereby, against any and all liability to persons, property or other damages arising out of such excavation, and also providing that the District Court of Hancock County, Iowa, shall have jurisdiction of any suit for recovery on said bond. No person shall leave any such excavation without properly barricading the same and maintaining at night warning lights thereon, or upon any pile of earth, plank stone, or other material placed nearby.

Section 4. Anyone violating any of the provisions of the ordinance shall, upon conviction, be subject to imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. Whenever the fine and costs imposed for violation of this ordinance are not paid, the person convicted may be committed to jail until the fine and costs are paid, not exceeding thirty days.

Section 5. All ordinances or parts or ordinances in conflict with the provisions of this ordinance are hereby repealed.

Section 6. This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication as provided by law.

Passed and adopted this 16th day of May A. D., 1951.

V. A. COOK, Mayor

ATTEST:

CAMP FIRE GIRLS

Junior High School Girls Learn How to Live in Outdoor Camps

In spite of eight-cylinder automobiles, television sets, electric dishwashers and innerspring mattresses, America continues to be a nation of pioneers.

If you doubt it, visit a Camp Fire Girls camp this summer.

Out in Whitman, Wash., you would find a group of junior high school girls living in a primitive clearing, 20 minutes by boat from the main camp where the younger girls live.

In Gypsy Haven, the pioneer camp, the only permanent installations are a storage tent, tool-shed and toilet. The campers bring along chow pans, axes, rope, lashing cord and sleeping bags. With the Forest Ranger's permission, they cut down trees from which stools and tables are built. Needled, small-stem branches become mattresses under their bed rolls. The girls also make other camp craft necessities such as sunken food-coolers, reflector ovens, stone-lined baking holes, drainage systems and trash pits.

Blue Birds (junior members of Camp Fire Girls) think breakfast cooked on hobo stoves tastes better than any other, in spite of such hazards as "sunburned" noses and pancakes.

During their stay at Gypsy Haven the girls cook their own meals and make friends with the area's wild life. A doe and her fawn visit the camp daily and chipmunks come up to eat from the girls' hands.

IN DES MOINES, IA., seven lucky Horizon Club members of senior high school age, accompanied by three counselors, last summer paddled a 24-foot war canoe 35 miles down the Des Moines river. Sandbars and rapids added thrills to the trip which involved five steady hours of hard paddling.

When an experienced camper in Portland, Ore., reaches the ripe old age of 14, she gets to live in a unit of tree-houses.

An added zest goes with outdoor cooking in Dickinson, N. D., where Camp Fire Girls prepare frogs-leg dinners from frogs they catch themselves.

Even Blue Birds, who are seven-to-ten-year-olds and the youngest members of Camp Fire Girls, are imbued with pioneer spirit. They love to cook on tin can stoves or on sticks over an open fire. Their pride in their own efforts produces an enthusiasm that occasionally far exceeds results. As one little San Diego Blue Bird said last year while she munched happily on a badly "sunburned" bread twist, "I wish my mother could cook like this."

In a recent issue of The Camp Fire Girl, Ernest F. Schmidt, director of Schiff Outdoor Activities in Mendham, N.J., gave Camp Fire campers two rules to follow when hiking.

The first is to stop, look and listen if they become lost: stop to collect thoughts; look for landmarks, and listen for sounds of trains, automobiles or running water.

The second suggestion is always to carry with them a Litepac Lost Kit of emergency tools. The kit, which each girl can assemble herself, should include a small compass, snare wire and fishing tackle, matches, bouillon cubes, paper and pencil, and razor blade. All these articles fit into a cigarette-type plastic case or a typewriter ribbon box, either of which can be waterproofed with nail polish or shellac cut 50 per cent with alcohol.

Judy Garland's tremendous success in the English music halls has restored her health, her self-confidence, and her sunny disposition. Theatres all over the continent are offering her fabulous sums, but after a brief tour of Scotland she will return for a picture with Bing Crosby.

Dana Andrews' favorite part in RKO Radio's "Sealed Cargo" is one you won't see He acted as technical adviser on this sea yarn. Owner of two boats, an 85-foot ketch and a 55-foot cutter, he is quite an authority on nautical problems.

Carleton Young's voice is going to sound familiar as your next door neighbor's when you see him in RKO Radio's "The Blue Veil". He is regularly on dramatic programs on all four major networks, played the Count of Monte Cristo for six years.

"I Was an American Spy" tells the true story of Claire Phillips, famous and fearless American espionage agent in the Philippines. Ann Dvorak impersonates her in this Allied Artists picture, but General Mark Clark plays himself in the prologue.

THE FICTION CORNER

O.K. BY HER

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THE MAN who had rented Freda the outboard motor told her that any fool could run one of the things. However, right now, drifting in the wrong direction in the middle of Mirror lake, with the sun beating down unmercifully, she would have given a good deal to have the man's neck between her two hands. Just for luck she gave the crank one more spin. The motor went "chugurg, chugurg"—and died.

3-Minute Fiction

"Damn!" exclaimed Freda. She was so furious she could have cried. Instead she stood up and began to wave wildly at a boat that had suddenly appeared around an island point. The boat kept serenely on its course and Freda was about to give up yelling and abandon herself to fate when the other craft swerved and headed in her direction.

Two minutes later a black-haired youth was grinning up at her pleasantly. "Trouble?" he asked.

"There's not a thing wrong with this motor," said Freda, "except that it won't run."

The young man climbed aboard. He had a wrench in his hand. "I'll fix it," he said.

Freda thought he was pretty confident, but a moment later she changed her mind.

"Strainer got clogged." he said. "I'm an expert on outboards. My business is retrievin' 'em."

"Retrieving them?"

"Sure. Plenty of motors lost in this lake every year. I invented a special magnet to find 'em, then I grapple for 'em, haul 'em up, repair 'em and sell 'em. My name's Len Curtain. What's yours?"

Freda told Len Curtain her name without even stopping to think.

"Freda Brandon," said Freda, without even stopping to think.

"Freda Brandon, eh? You're the girl who's going to marry Ray Hubbard. Well, they say money will do anything; but deliver me. Well, so long."

Freda didn't catch her breath until she got back to camp. Her mother had news.

"Darling! Ray wired he's coming up! He's arriving tomorrow."

Freda's spirits sank. "Goody, goody," she said sourly.

Freda set off in the outboard the next morning 10 minutes before Ray was due to arrive. Thirty minutes later she saw a familiar looking boat anchored in a cove and camp up alongside.

"Hi!" grinned Len Curtain "How's things?"

"Fine. Say, look, what do you do in the winter?"

"Oh, this and that." Len hauled in his grappling iron. "False alarm. Nothing here. How about anchoring that scow and taking a ride around with me?"

Ray Hubbard was waiting on the dock when she got back. He didn't like the idea of her not being at camp to greet him, but she didn't care.

THE DAY after Ray departed Len Curtain came into the dock and Freda went down to see what he wanted.

"It's a funny thing, but I'm in love. Will you marry me?"

Freda almost fell into the water. "Goodness! I'm going to marry Ray."

"Pshaw! You don't love him. Marry me and we'll have fun."

Freda caught herself wondering if that wouldn't be a good idea. She laughed, sounding like a frog with a sore throat.

"Marry you and fish for outboards all summer—and do what in the winter?"

Ray grinned. "There's no fishing in the winter. We'd get along. I've just sold my grappling magnet invention to the Sea Demon outboard people. That's only the beginning of the things I can invent."

Freda blinked. Good heavens, was he going to be as startling as that all his life. "I'll have to think it over."

"Give you five minutes. Hop in and we'll ride around in the meantime."

Freda heard of people being hypnotized, and she guessed that was what was wrong with her. She hopped in and they rode around. When five minutes was up Len Curtain kissed her and she kissed him back and that settled the whole business.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Never Buy A Child's Love

By Lawrence Gould

Should you "bribe" a child to kiss you?

Answer: Not unless you want to make a little hypocrite of him by teaching him that he can get things he wants by pretending an affection which he does not feel at the moment, or that he can get you "in his power" by refusing A- child should know that you like him to kiss you when he wants to, but you should no more demand or coax for his love than you should force yours on him. He cannot help loving you because he needs you so much, but the more spontaneous his love remains, the more real and satisfying it will be to him and to you.

Can psychiatry make fewer "unemployables"?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Robert V. Seliger of the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic, Baltimore. The experience of the Clinic during World War II showed that in a time of manpower shortage, short-term psychiatric treatment could enable men and women who would normally be considered unemployable to get and keep jobs. Thirty-seven out of fifty-six patients treated "were salvaged through psychiatry and productively employed by war or essential industries." In one case "we kept a schizophrenic man employed for a year after his wife refused the recommended commitment."

Do psychiatrists "go after" patients?

Answer: No profession is entirely free from dishonest practitioners, but most reputable psychiatrists and mental hospitals have more patients than they know what to do with and have neither time nor inclination to try actively to get more. The person who believes that the psychiatrists are "on his trail" and will "put him away" if he is not careful is probably suffering from delusions of persecution. He is secretly afraid that a psychiatrist might unmask him to himself and force him to give up the false notions about himself and his neighbors which unconsciously are such a comfort to him.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Bad Posture Affects Health, Looks

By Dr. James W. Barton

A RECENT NEWSPAPER STORY told of a young bandit who entered a drugstore and while being served, quietly pointed a revolver at the proprietor and demanded the contents of the till. The druggist handed it over and the bandit quietly left the store. During this whole procedure two messenger boys lay on the floor reading the comics and were so intent thereon that they saw or heard nothing of the holdup and theft.

While this story illustrates primarily the boys' complete absorption in the reading of the comics, it touches on another point in which parents should be greatly interested, that is, that keeping the body in the same position for long periods of time can affect the shape and growth of the body.

In The Medical Journal of Australia, Dr. Jean Macnamara (Melbourne) mentions two basic principles which are helpful in viewing this problem in young persons: (1) The form of any living, growing thing is determined by inheritance, nutrition and position habitually assumed; (2) habitual position is most potent in altering the line of growth from that which was expected by inheritance in early life during periods of rapid growth and when nutrition is poor. Approximately this would be from ages of 9 or 10 to the teen ages.

A favorite position of children when lying face down to read is to rest the weight of the head on the palm of the hand. Thus weight is transmitted through the forearm to the elbow which rests on the floor or bed. The palm is pressed firmly against the bone of the cheek. This position causes a distortion of one half of the upper jaw—the dental condition known as crossed bite.

In addition to causing a deformity of the teeth and face, it can easily be seen how this position, with head held high, leads to curvature forward of the lower part of the spine or "sway back" as it is popularly called. Sway back in children very often persists into manhood and womanhood, making necessary snug fitting corsets for women.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Sway back is a common cause of sciatica and low back pain.

Watch the posture of the child and prevent deformities of face and body.

Enuresis—bed wetting—is caused by emotional disturbances and poor training by parents. It can be corrected in the majority of cases.

There is one food always found on the diet list for weight reduction—protein (meat, eggs, fish, milk).

Proteins do a number of important jobs in the body besides giving heat and energy.

* * *

Fat and sugar are stored in the body tissues to be used when needed, but protein is not stored.

Gen. Charles Dawes Served Nation in Many Ways

By Wright A. Patterson

THE LATE GEN. CHARLES G. DAWES was an interesting character, a man of many varied experiences. The general, and his brother, Rufus, were almost wholly responsible for the holding in 1933 Chicago's Century of Progress exposition. A group of the city's wealthy men had proposed that such an exposition be held at that time—and then the depression broke.

The proposers objected to financing an exposition at such a time. The two Dawes brothers insisted that, having been announced, the show must go on. During the days it was held I watched Gen. Dawes on many occasions stand in front of a numbering machine in the administration building, as it checked off the visitors, one by one, as they passed through the paid admission turnstiles. In the end, there were enough such admissions to enable the exposition to pay out. Under its charter it could not make a profit, but there was enough left after all bond holders were paid, plus interest, to raze all the buildings, and to beautifully landscape the five mile long lake front park through which rolls every day many thousands of automobiles from within and without the city.

That is one of Chicago's beauty spots, and for it the people of the city can thank the Century of Progress.

Gen. Dawes served his country. As a soldier, he was purchasing agent of the American army in France during the first World War. As a civilian he served as vice president, as ambassador to England, as first director of the budget and comptroller of the treasury. The Dawes bank, Central Trust of Illinois, was the first big—$13 million—borrower of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and every dollar, plus interest, was fully repaid. Through the years he spent in Chicago he was a leader in the city's promotion. For many years a man of wealth, he died comparatively poor.

It is broadly rumored in Washington that other heads than that of Douglas MacArthur are to fall under the blows of President Truman's execution axe. Rumor has it that J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F.B.I. is included in the next list of victims. Hoover and the F.B.I. have been largely responsible for the conviction of such Russian spies as Alger Hiss.

As political misadventure, the removal of the popular F.B.I. director would be second only to that of the now immortal MacArthur. It would be resented by the American people, and cause them to think, if not express, their opinions as to which side of the iron curtain the President and his advisers, are standing. Politically, it would complete the job so definitely started by the summary removal of MacArthur.

It is possible the disasterous results of the MacArthur decapitation may result in staying the hand of the President in the case of J. Edgar Hoover. His party cannot afford another such result, especially between now and the 1952 elections. Should the people receive another slap in the face within the next few months at the institagation of Dean Acheson, we might as well save the expense of the next election.

The administration at Washington continuously insists we will offer nothing that can be considered as appeasement to Communism, but at the behest of England, the granddaddy of all appeasers, and the insistence of the socialistically inclined Dean Acheson, the President fired the one man more generally feared by Stalin and his Red hordes than any one else. That was appeasement, and the American people gave ample evidence that they did not like it.

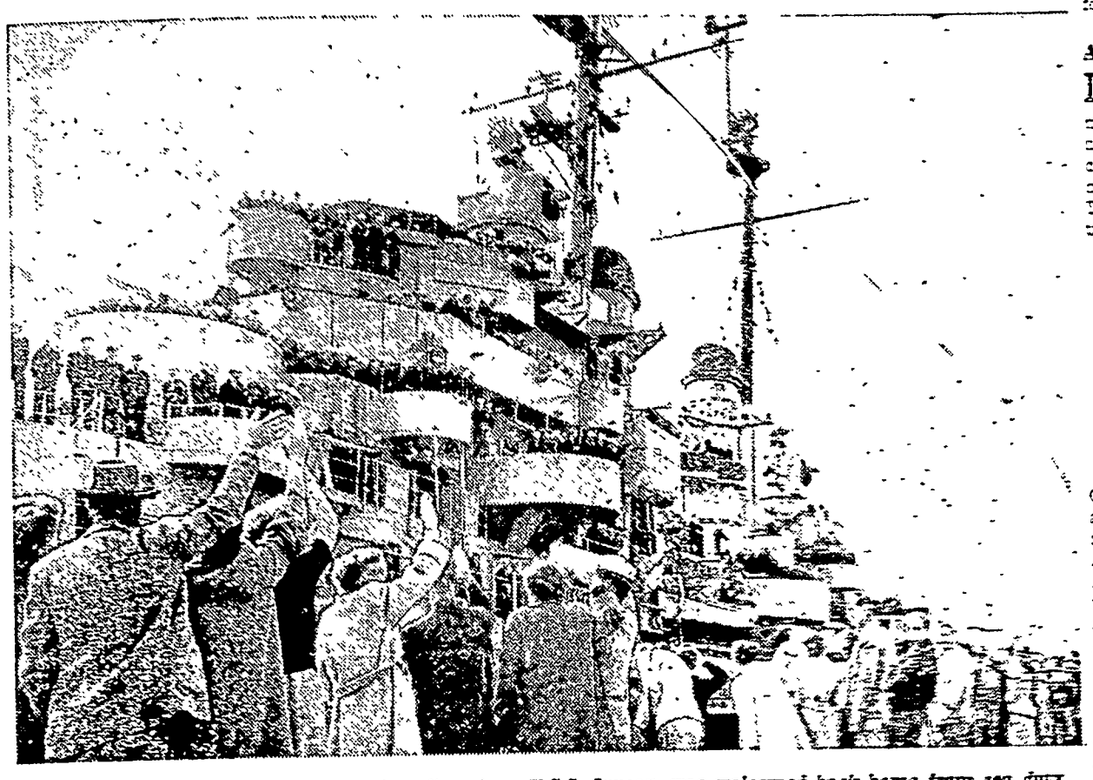
—*—

It would seem that it might be a good thing for President Truman that the recall system does not apply to the presidency.

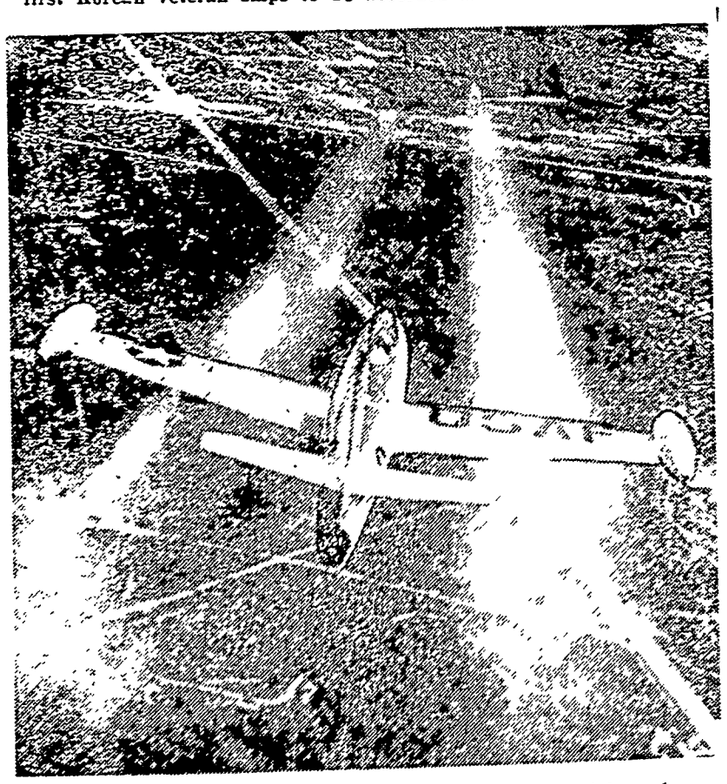
—*—

The day will come when Dean Acheson will need a safe hiding place if he is to escape the presidential hair brush.

NEWSPAPER CLOSED . . . Police of Rome, Italy, have padlocked the front door of the Rome Daily American, an American newspaper in Italy, because, the excuse reads, "its flatpress makes too much noise." Jack Begon, the editor of the American newspaper, says, "It is obvious that the real issue behind the closing of the newspaper is not the noise. It is, I'm afraid, a modified version of the Argentina 'La Prensa' action." Two Italian workers on the closed paper are reading the order of closure on the front door of the plant. Journalists fear it is another attack on freedom of the press.

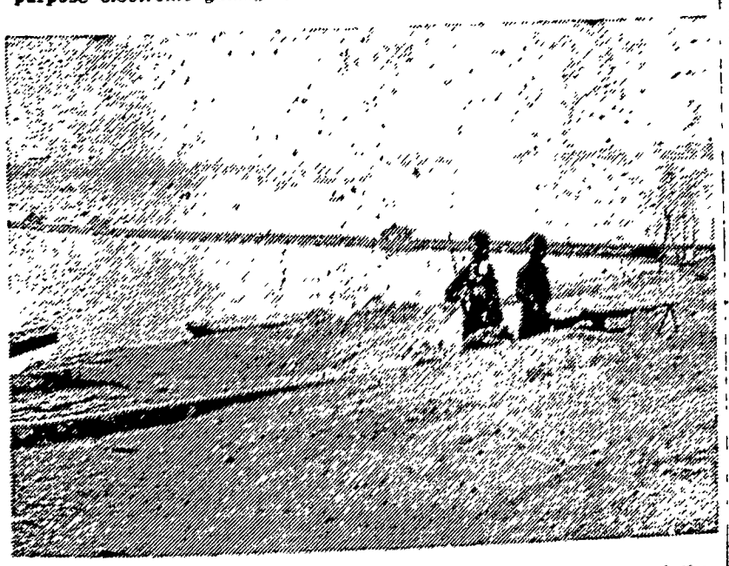


WELCOME HOME! . . . The anti-aircraft cruiser, U.S.S. Juneau, was welcomed back home from sea duty lasting one year recently at Long Beach, Calif. Streaming a balloon-supported pennant ribbon from the bridge, the fighting craft gets a tremendous ovation as she docks. Crew members shared pieces of the pennant as mementos of their year-to-the-day stretch away from home. Only a few days after South Korea was invaded by the Communists from North Korea, the Juneau was in the action, supporting the landing of United Nations men and supplies to combat the act of aggression. The Juneau is one of the first Korean veteran ships to be accorded an ovation.



IN ROCKET'S RED GLARE . . . A Thunderjet at Elgin airforce base, Florida, fires five-inch velocity rockets with split-second accuracy. The fighter first demonstrated its prowess in 1949 firepower demonstration by carrying and firing 32 five-inch rockets. The 600 m.p.h. planes have chalked up a commendable record in air strikes over enemy concentrations over Korea. They are equipped with triple-purpose electronic gunsight.

THE LIP DROOPS . . . With his team going down for 11 consecutive defeats, New York Giants Manager Lippy Leo Durocher, coaching at first base in the Polo Grounds, epitomizes the picture of defeat.



SUPPLY ROUTE ACROSS HAN . . . South Korean soldiers guard the northern end of the military pontoon bridge across the Han river as U.S. trucks shuttle between the north and south shores hauling supplies to U.N. forces holding a line north of Seoul. The Chinese Communist attempt to recapture the battered capital by May Day fizzled in the face of U.N. opposition here. Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet claimed a big victory.

Out of Ruins

Lesson for June 3, 1951

A GERMAN who came through World War II recently said "At present there is no country in the world where a man can live more like a man than in Germany. This is because yesterday has been reduced to ruins and rubbish . . . We can thank God that he has blessed us with ruins more than he has others."

Dr Foreman

This may sound shocking, but it sounds not unlike the Bible. There were Jews in ancient times who lived to thank God for the ruins of Jerusalem.

At Last They Believed

If you had asked a resident of that city, at the hour when the enemy army was burning his beloved home if God's hand was in the catastrophe, most likely he would have said, No, not by any means. This is Nebuchadnezzar's work or the devil's—certainly not God's."

Consider what good came out of it. For one thing, it taught the Jews that God is really a God of justice, after all. The nation that sinneth, it shall die: the nation that takes the sword shall perish by the sword. The prophets had been trying to tell them that for many a long year; but no attention had been paid.

The sins the prophets had said God would surely punish went on and on, and there seemed to be no reckoning and no punishment. The nation was deluded into thinking it could get by with anything for as long as they pleased. But after the crash of 586 B.C., they all knew the prophets had been telling the truth.

Yesterday Is Dead

For another thing, the exile cured the Jews, for a long time, of trying to be a political nation like other nations. God had called them to another kind of existence. So long as they had been an independent nation they had kept looking around with politics, armies, international intrigue. After all that had been swept into Nebuchadnezzar's furnace, the people's hearts turned more and more to God and his ways.

Another way in which that city-wide ruin was a blessing was that it "killed yesterday." Before the fatal year 586, the Hebrew kings and people had more or less looked backward. Every king wanted to be a great conqueror like David, a wealthy potentate like Solomon. But they never would look the cold fact in the face, that those days were gone forever.

But when the exiles came back to rebuild the ruins, the younger ones at least looked forward. Yesterday was dead, they built now for tomorrow.

Blessed With Ruins

Ruins can be a blessing in other ways than one. St. Louis and San Francisco and Baltimore were better cities after their big fires. Louisville improved after its great flood. The "New South" of today is blessed as the Old South, for all its glamor, could not have been.

Sometimes a man who has been depending on anything but God for hope and happiness—on his money, on his friends, on his health, on his position—finds these things swept out from under him, and then at last comes back to God.

After a man's childhood faith has been shattered by manhood's disillusionments, it has often come to pass that out of the ruins of the childish beliefs he rears a tower of faith far stronger than anything he has lost.

Let's Not Make Ruins

Yes does not mean, of course, that we ought ever to go out and deliberately make ruins. The best way to improve other nations is not to drop bombs on them, the best way to be improved ourselves is not to act in such ways as to tempt other nations to drop bombs on us.

The best way to build a better faith is not to scrap all the faith we have. The best way to find God is not to go out and find him in a fox-hole. The blessings of ruins are not the best God has, but sometimes they are what it takes to bring a man to his senses.

And if the crash does come, and the towers fall, and life lies in rubble around us, we must remember what the Hebrews learned: that even in the ruins we may better than ever, come to know the living God.

Mac Urges Action Against China; Farm Land Prices at Record Peak

MAN WITH A MISSION—At last, much to the relief of the average home-owner, the emotional thinking that manifested itself with the return of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the United States gave way to considerable sober reasoning as the general testified before congress concerning the cause and results of his removal as commander in the Pacific.

Stripped of the superficial, the general's testimony revealed him a man with a burning mission—to bring the Korean conflict to a swift and successful conclusion. His objective was no different from that of the administration, except by the method it could be reached.

Before the Senate

Testifying before the house and senate armed services and foreign relations committees, Gen. MacArthur pressed for a new far east policy and an attack on China. His testimony was called a two-fisted attack on the administration by many Republicans.

Unfortunately, at one point the general allowed himself to be maneuvered by the politicians into an all-out attack on the administration. He did not question, however, President Truman's authority to remove him, and he admitted he had expressed the opinion that the Chinese would not intervene in the conflict.

But he called again for air attacks on China proper, a naval blockade and use of Chinese Nationalist troops. At this point he said he did not believe this would draw Russia into the fight. He added that Russia was in no shape for an all-out war in Asia.

MacArthur's expressed opinion that there is no end to fight for the Korean conflict and that some policy should be worked out to end the war appealed to the man on Main Street. The question now facing the nation is whether to follow the general's policy and risk all-out war in Asia, or continue with the more cautious one advocated by the administration.

THE OTHER VIEW—And after MacArthur presented his views of how to conduct the war in Korea, the one military man who in the eyes of the home-owner equals MacArthur in ability and popularity, Secretary of Defense Marshall, told the congressional committees that MacArthur's peace appeal to the enemy last March destroyed for the time being any chances of a Korean war settlement.

Marshall made it clear that in his opinion MacArthur's war plans would risk an all-out war with Russia, expose Europe to attack, and perhaps split the free world into two camps.

Step by step the 71-year-old Marshall disputed many of MacArthur's statements and warned against the general's proposal to step up the Korean war by bombing Red China and forcing a Communist surrender. It was MacArthur's outspoken call for this action—and the use of Chinese Nationalist troops—that led to his dismissal.

That is the other side of the picture. But the question remains—which plan for removing peace will the nation follow. It is a question that must be settled in the mind of each individual American, not just in congress.

LAND PRICES HIT NEW HIGH—Main Street economy is built around the land and what it can produce. And any fluctuation in land prices and its products is a good indication of the economic future of the home town.

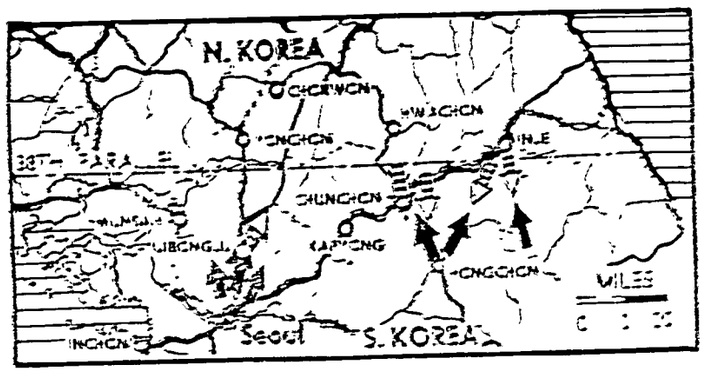
Good farm property is in demand because people think prices are going higher. Land is a good hedge against rising prices. With the government predicting there will be a good market for every thing produced, good farming land is a good investment.

The agriculture department measures rural land values by a national index. This index uses the years 1910-14 as the base period. With 1910-14 prices at 100, the index in March stood at the record high of 193. This was 14 per cent above a year earlier, and 9 per cent higher than the previous peak registered in November of 1948.

MIDWEST FEEDERS HURT—As expected, the OPS regulations ruling over beef prices raised a howl of protest from cattlemen across the nation. But of all the industry, the midwest feeder was hardest hit by the new regulations.

According to economists in the meat industry, 15 per cent, or seven million steers slaughtered under federal inspection last year, came to market over the feed lot route. But the feeder is now expected to cut down in operations for a time because he cannot buy cattle at a price that will pay him to fatten them.

Fred Tomlin of Pleasant Plains, Ill., said in his case: "There is no reason for me to go out and pay 34 or 35 cents a pound for cattle with the prospect of selling them at 31 or 32 when fattened."



Communists Regroup in Attack

Beaten back in a slaughter that claimed as many as 75,000 casualties, Communists in Korea regrouped for another thrust in the south. UN commanders believed the fighting would stay in the area indicated in the above map.

THE BATTLE ISN'T OVER—The Communist spring offensive ended in the slaughter of approximately 75,000 Chinese and North Korean troops without any notable gains. But the battle isn't over. The Reds retreated into North Korea to regroup for the next phase which could mean another all-out attack at any point along the line.

It may well be that the second phase will begin at any moment. But UN commanders believe it, too, will end in slaughter unparalled in history.

It was clear that UN troops remain in Korea because of superior air power, artillery and mobility. How long this superiority will remain on the UN side if the Chinese use their air forces in support of their troops, is questionable.

HOME TOWN BORROWING—The home owner who thought his own might get that much needed road, school, water system, drainage or sewage-construction project in the near future may be in for a big disappointment.

Charles E. Wilson, mobilization director, has asked states, cities, and counties to get clearances before borrowing in excess of $1,000,000. He made his requests on the need to halt inflationary spending and to save defense-needed materials and man power.

The mobilization chief also asked that soldiers' bonus payments, war memorials, recreational, and other postponable projects be put off for the duration of the defense emergency—at least where funds must be borrowed to pay for them.

THE JUNE GRADUATE

Employers Disregard Military Status

Even if this year's college graduate rates 1-A in the draft, the big corporations are hiring him, even for a few months' work, if he is desirable employee material and will have his job waiting for him when he returns from military service again. This is the prevailing trend reported by college placement officials in the annual employment survey made by Northwestern National Life insurance company.

Smaller employers hiring only a few men, for specific vacancies, try to get draft-exempt personnel, the survey finds.

The big firms, however, feel the present cold war situation may last for many years and for that reason are hiring graduates regardless of possible military service within a short time.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to

REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different.

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "washing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical "washed-out" feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy" energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

HAVE REACHED PEAK IN FALL PIG MARKETINGS

The peak in marketings of the 1950 fall pig crop has been reached, reports Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

He says more hogs will come to market during the month of June than did a year ago, but the volume of sales will taper off.

Pork prices have been below the top permitted under the ceilings, but they are expected to work back to ceiling levels as the summer let-up in sales approaches, Kutish says.

ANIMAL KIDNAPERS SUBJECT TO PROSECUTION

In spite of widespread publicity and education, animals and birds are being subjected to an unprecedented wave of kidnapping by Iowans. Possession of protected young birds and animals is prohibited by law and each offense of animal or bird-napping is punishable by a maximum penalty of $100 or 30 days in jail. Conservation officials estimated that last year as many as 2,000 baby raccoons were held illegally in Iowa, many in an unsanitary and starving condition.

Young animals that have been taken from the wild and held in captivity even for a few weeks when again released seldom are able to readapt themselves to the wild and soon fall prey to their natural enemies.

A Commission spokesman has stated "Young animals found in the wild are almost never abandoned by their parents. Usually the youngsters have been left in hiding by the mother or wandered away like mischievous children and will be found by their parents unless kidnapped. It is not that we do not want youngsters to have animals as pets-- but they should stick to white mice, guinea pigs, or unprotected species like the crow."

IOWA DAIRYMEN URGED TO CONSERVE EQUIPMENT

The attention of Iowa dairymen was called this week to the possible shortage of dairying equipment. Karl Wester, extension dairyman at Iowa State College, said that equipment might become shorter in supply as time goes on, especially that made of steel, nickel alloys and tin.

Some of the common pieces of equipment which may be short in supply include milk and cream cans, mechanical coolers, cream separators, milking machines, pails and strainers. Wester said that dairy farmers, and milk and cream processors can help prevent acute shortages of equipment by taking steps to conserve and care for all of their present milk producing, processing and delivery equipment.

He had these brief suggestions: Guard against damage in the handling and cleaning of equipment, make necessary repairs before the equipment is beyond repair, and clean equipment regularly and thoroughly.

In the case of milk cans alone, Wester said that proper cleaning and retinning will add years to the service of cans, saving steel needed for defense, and at the same time facilitate the production of food vital to the health, strength and vigor of our civilian population and fighting forces.

Services Held Tuesday For John Heginger, Teamster

LAST RITES HELD AT KLEMME METHODIST CHURCH JUNE 5TH

Retired Farmer And Teamster Was Over Eighty-Two Years Old

Last rites for Mr. John Heginger, 82½ years of age, were held from the Klemme Methodist Church Tuesday afternoon, June 5th, with the Rev. E. M. Igeland officiating. The Wellemeyer Funeral service was in charge of all arrangements.

Burial was in the family lot in the Ell Township Cemetery near Klemme and Mr. Heginger was carried to his resting place by the following friends and neighbors: Henry Josten, Vern Disom, Emil Beier, Fred Kluckhohn, Fred Bell and Dr. D. P. Anderson.

The story of Mr. Heginger's life appears elsewhere in this issue of The Klemme Times.

SET WEDDING DATE—Mr. and Mrs. William Lacey of Klemme announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Ruth Ann, to Richard L. Kaduce of Klemme. The wedding will take place June 17 at St. John's American Lutheran Church in Belmond.

JOLLY WORKER'S CLUB MET MAY 11TH

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Mae Blumer May 11th. Sixteen members answered roll call by telling their plans for Mother's Day.

Mrs. Marjorie Wille and children were visitors in the afternoon.

The club members brought cookies and gave them to Mildred Gruis and she sent them to Woodward for the little children. We also spent $5.00 to bring fruit for them too. Louise Pearson read a letter of appreciation from the hospital thanking us for our kindness. Edith Kramer thanked the club for the bouquet of flowers she received from K.G.L.O.

Entertainment was furnished by Maude and Marilyn Bachman. A Town and Country quiz was enjoyed by all. The town team was the wiser for the day.

An exchange of gifts was enjoyed for Mother's Day.

A lovely lunch was enjoyed by all of us and was served by Mae Blumer with Lois Schlichting as co-hostess. The June meeting will be at the home of Nettie Roths with Mildred Gruis as co-hostess.

632 Miles Of Iowa Highways To Be Resurfaced

The recent announcement by the Iowa Highway Commission that 632 miles of badly damaged primary roads are to be resurfaced at a cost of $9,480,000 comes as welcome news to Iowa motorists. The commission says that two million dollars worth of the resurfacing will be completed this summer and the remainder will be finished late next year.

The most welcome news, however, is that the work can be done without financial interference with the general road building program. Gov. Beardsley has commended the commission's program and said it is the best answer to the state's very critical present road situation. The road break up last winter and this spring was the worst in history because of the extremely bad weather conditions.

Will Hold Rehearsals For The Members In Beginners Band

Charles Whitford, the new director for the Klemme school bands, announces that he will hold rehearsals for those who were enrolled in the beginners' band the past year.

Those who are interested in learning an instrument and enrolling in the beginners band should contact Mr. Whitford, to arrange for lessons. Beginners band rehearsal will be held at the time most convenient for all members.

BRITT-CRYSTAL LAKE ROAD TO BE SURFACED

The Hargraves Construction Company of Cedar Rapids recently began the surfacing of highway 111 from Britt to Crystal Lake and Woden. The project involves approximately 15 miles of stabilized base and single course bituminous surface treatment. The total cost of the blacktop project is $399,876. The highway traffic is being detoured over county roads while the contruction is in process.

Fees Increase

INCREASE IN DRIVERS' LICENSES JULY 5TH

New Fee Will Be $1.50 Each Beginning Thursday, July 5

Des Moines—The present 50-cent fee for Iowa drivers' licenses, new or renewal, will be charged on all licenses issued through Tuesday, July 3.

Beginning Thursday, July 5, all drivers' licenses and school driving permits will be $1.50 each.

No person whose birthday occurs on or after August 4th may escape the fee increase by applying for renewal of his license before July 5th.

These points in connection with the fee increase authorized by the General Assembly were explained by Lieut. Harry O. Brown, assistant chief examiner in the drivers' license division of the State Department of Public Safety, in an instruction bulletin to all license examiners and highway patrol officers.

Examiners were instructed to "adhere strictly to the 30-day renewal period" before expiration of a license, which requires that the license be renewed within the 30 days preceding the driver's birthday. Thus, no licenses will be issued before July 5 to any person whose license expires on or after Aug. 4th.

For a person who, because of a vacation or other reason, will be out of the state during his 30-day renewal period, an extension certificate will be issued free. This certificate will be valid for the period the driver is out of the state, up to a maximum of six months, but the person must apply for renewal of his license when he returns to the state.

The fee increase from 50 cents to $1.50 applies to school driving permits as well as regular drivers' licenses. Instruction permits are issued without charge. For chauffeurs' licenses (for drivers of commercial vehicles), the present $2.00 fee will remain unchanged.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

The safe way to work is the right way, and the right way is to take time to work safely!

Your Iowa Safety Congress says: "You don't have to run to get the job done."

Speed is needed in these critical times to manufacture enough equipment and goods to supply the needs of the armed forces, as well as civilians. But careless speed can cause time-wasting accidents and needless pain and injuries.

If you run on the job, you may bump right into an accident. Walk—especially on stairs. When you carry things, be sure you can see over and around them. You can avoid danger if you can see it coming.

Neatness is also important for safe, efficient work. Pile materials neatly—you'll save space and save plenty of headaches. Keep aisles and exits clear, too.

Remember—if you always watch your step, you'll be more likely to stay on your feet.

FORMER KLEMME GIRL GRADUATES FROM WATERLOO WEST HIGH

Will Enter State Teachers College To Major In Music

LaNelle Harvey, 17, daughter of Mrs. H. E. Harvey, 300 Williston Avenue, Waterloo, and a senior at West High School, Waterloo, last Tuesday evening won a $200 college scholorship presented annually by the Waterloo Panhellenic Association.

Miss Harvey was in the upper fourth of her class scholastically. She is active in band and orchestra work, president of the Future Teachers of America and a member of the Kappa Gamma Pi, honor club, the Order of Rainbow for Girls and the junior auxiliary of the Waterloo Woman's Club.

LaNelle is a former student in the Klemme schools and was active in band, glee club and music. At Waterloo she has been teaching piano and is getting her music pupils ready for a recital June 15th. She is also working on a recital in which she will play the latter part of the month.

Miss Harvey will enter the State Teachers College at once to begin her college work. She will major in music.

JUNE 11-17 NAMED AS SOIL CONSERVATION WEEK

Next week, June 11-17, Iowans will have their attention called to the value of the state's chief natural resource—its soil. The week has been officially designated as Iowa Soil Conservation Week by Gov. Wm. S. Beardsley.

County soil tours and field days will mark the week's special activities. Taking part in the special events will be clergymen, county extension directors, soil conservation district commissioners, Iowa State College extension specialists, personnel of the Farm Security Administration, United States Soil Conservation Service and the Production and Marketing Administration, and other agricultural and community leaders.

The week is set aside to emphasize the job of conserving Iowa's most important natural resource. In addition to pointing out the need for work to be done, accomplishments through the years will be stressed at various occasions.

Obituary Of John Heginger, 82

JOHN HEGINGER was born October 10, 1866, in Viski, Austria. Three years later his parents, Joseph and Josephine Heginger, brought him with them to America.

The family settled on a farm near Cedar Falls, Iowa, and later moved to Belmond, here John attended rural school and became a member of the Lutheran Church. Later he transfered his membership to the Klemme Methodist Church.

In March 1896, at the age of 28, John Heginger and Fannie Kratchmer were married at the home of the bride's parents in Shellrock, Iowa.

They lived on a farm in Avery Township for many years, then farmed in Liberty Township for twelve years, after which they moved into the town of Klemme, which has been their home for the past twenty-six years.

John and Fannie Heginger lived together fifty-four years, and then death took Fannie, this was in October 1950, seven months ago.

They celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary in 1946.

John Heginger brought a team of horses and some farming equipment with him when he moved to Klemme. And then for a quarter of a century he served our community by plowing gardens, mowing weeds, hauling away ashes, bringing in fill for lawns, — all humble tasks, but well and faithfully done.

About a year ago John Heginger retired from the strenuous work being a teamster, and since then became gradually weaker and finally "faded away" on Saturday evening June 2nd, 1951.

He reached the age of 82½ years, and leaves 59 direct descendants: Eight children:

Mollie - Mrs. Lee Price, Mason City
Martha - Mrs. Will Tiggeman, Klemme
Anna - Mrs. John Pannhoff, Garner
Carl Heginger, Klemme
Fannie - Mrs. Jacob Blumer, Garner
Doris - Mrs. Edwin Medaus, Klemme
Cecelia - Mrs. Taas Harms, Belmond
Ruth - Mrs. Harold Lassahn, Klemme.

Also forty-two grand children, nine great grandchildren, and other more distant relatives and friends.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

The highway patrolman was talking with a friend when a car slowed down and its driver waved a greeting The officer waved back, then turned to his companion.

"That man is one of the safest drivers in the county," he said, "but four years ago he was a highway menace.

"He used to average an accident a month. Couldn't keep that car on the road. He was always running into telephone poles or other cars. It got so no insurance company would handle his business.

"The judge restricted his driving several times, but when he was allowed to drive again, he'd go and have another accident.

"Well, I got interested in the case, so I started looking through his record. I found that nearly all his accidents happened at night or just after sundown.

"On his statements he usually said light got in his eyes and blinded him. So he was ordered to take a sight test, and do you know what the trouble was?

"The doctor found out he had night blindness. Couldn't see anything if he was driving at night and meeting another car. He was restricted to driving only during the day, and he hasn't had an accident since."

METHODIST CHURCHES TO CHANGE TIME SCHEDULE

The time schedule of Sunday services in the Klemme and Liberty Methodist Churches will change on next Sunday and will continue through June, July, and August. All morning services will be advanced one-half hour, with the evening Youth Fellowships continuing to meet at the usual 7:30 hour. This will mean that the Morning Worship at Klemme will be at 9.30 followed by Sunday School at 10:30. The Liberty services will be: Sunday School at 9:45 and Morning Worship at 10:45.

Carol Humphrey Of Garner Received Seeds From Osaka, Japan

Carol, 11 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Humphrey Garner, will be growing morning glories this summer from seed that came almost half way around the world to Iowa 4-H members.

The package of seeds was sent by M. Aoki, director of Japan 4-H Club, Inc., from Osaka, Japan as a token of good will and appreciation of the help the United States has given them in developing youth programs.

One of the Japanese local 4-H leaders wrote, "You 4-H leaders in America have been wonderfully good in helping us build our 4-H clubs. As a small token of gratitude, we are sending you 2,000 packages of one of our most popular flowers."

Twenty packages of these seeds were sent to Iowa, one of which is being grown by Carol Humphrey.

GOODELL FARM SOLD AT $350 AN ACRE

A deal has been closed in which Harvey Harberts sold his 160 acre farm on the west edge of Goodell to D. Dubondt of Grinnell at $350 per acre. The Dubondts have 6 children and will take possession March 1, 1952. The Martin Burrs family are tenants on this farm.

IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE TO ORGANIZE THURSDAY. NIGHT

The Hancock Chapter of the Izaak Walton League is to receive it's charter at Crystal Lake on June 7th.

John Farris of Crystal Lake, acting president, stated that Mr. Paul Clements, of Minneapolis has been secured as the principle speaker for the evening Mr. Clements is one of the outstanding conservationist in the United States today. We are highly honored that he will be with us for the meeting Hugh Gildner, state director, from Ft Dodge will be in charge of the charter presentation.

The Nominating committee reports a fine group of officers for election at the meeting and it promises to be a good year for conservation in Hancock County.

Other Conservation Clubs and people interested in conservation along with the ladies are invited to attend.

A good film has been selected for the meeting and a lunch will be served.

The meeting is to be held in the Legion Hall at Crystal Lake at eight o'clock on Thursday, June 7th.

CORN, SOYBEAN CONTEST RULES ARE AVAILABLE

Sponsoring organizations that want to enter the 1951 Master Corn and Master Soybean Growers' contests should get 1951 rules soon, reminds Joe L. Robinson of Iowa State College, who is in charge of the contests.

Civic clubs that sponsor county contests may get official rules from their county extension directors or by writing the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers' Association, Ames, Ia.

The Master Corn and Master Soybean contests help Iowa communities in a number of ways, Robinson observes. They stimulate higher yields by encouraging competition in better cropping practices, and they help determine cultural methods that produce highest yields. The most important reason, however, why the contests should be popular this year is that we need corn and soybeans.

Decency

SOME TIME AGO I wrote an article about decency.

Decency. Just plain old-fashioned modesty in speech, in the books we read and the clothing we wear and the jokes at which we laugh. I asked the women who read that article to write me.

They wrote me by the hundred. The letters and postcards came in tied in bundles. And they all said one thing: that America's mothers and teachers are sick of nakedness and coarseness in pictures, and radio programs, in drugstore books and shameless jokes.

Because I simply cannot answer all these messages personally, I say thank you for them here And I ask these mothers and teachers to take up this work of protecting our young people from the contagion of vulgarity, of ugly familiarity with the most degraded aspects of criminal and sexual depravity. Take up this cause with your own children first, with your club, with the parents-teachers group, and with protests to your movies. Keep it up steadily and patiently; talk about it. If this flood of mail is any indication, every responsible woman in the world is with you.

Is It Too Late?

One woman wrote me that she did truly believe in decency, in self-control, in modesty, in purity. But, she asked, has the world any use for them today? Is it too late to start training daughters in the old-fashioned virtues of purity?

"My daughter is 17, and she is lovely, gifted and intelligent," says Harri Paget's letter. "In her younger school days she was the center of a merry, admiring group of girls. But at 15 and 16 all that dropped. The girls became boy-crazy; they began to 'go steady.' They drifted away, making dates in their early teens that we would not have been allowed to make at 20. Pamela shared none of this. I had long prepared her mind for the fact that she was not to be one of the crowd that flocked about to drugstore counters, night clubs, and sophisticated movies; her father and I saw to it that she had a normal, happy time, but we watched her amusements and her books, and above all, her associates.

". . . became boy crazy . . ."

"What was the result? Why, that she was regarded as a prude, and gradually dropped from all the plans of her friends. Pamela, they said, was no fun, couldn't do anything, never got away from parental apron-strings; she was actually disliked because she supposedly thought herself superior.

"What encouragement does her story offer to mothers anxious to bring up their girls in the old dignified way? Pam's week ends are empty. If she sees a movie it is with her father or myself. And, yet as I began by telling you, she is an exceptionally lovely and gifted girl. What chances would an ordinary girl have if this is the present attitude toward decency, character and self-control?"

Half the Problem

To this mother I say in answer that she has only grasped half the problem. Merely to forbid children dangerous amusements is to leave a big vacuum in their lives. That vacuum must be filled by safer occupations, and if Pamela's mother and father haven't been finding them and developing them, they are almost as much to blame as are the purveyors of the more dangerous sort.

Since childhood Pamela should have been encouraged in friendships that her parents could approve. Not all girls are wild; not all comic strips and paper-covered books are filthy; not all movies stress the immodest and sexy side of life. Most of our American families, living in apartments, in suburbs, in small country towns, have high ideals, and most mothers and fathers are in touch with enough that is going on in civic and social and church and charitable circles to introduce their children to some of life's realities.

By this time Pamela should know affectionately and intimately the children of her parents' friends; they should be at home in her house; there should be occasional informal suppers, pencil games, dancing to radio music, picnics and week end excursions right through the year. To see to this end of Pamela's life is as much an obligation on her father and mother as the care of her teeth, schooling health. Apparently the Pagets sat back, critical and dissatisfied, and contented themselves with blanking everything out of life.

Use Easy-Mix Recipe for Perfect Pastry
(See Recipes Below)

Perfect Pastries

YOU MAY HAVE to be a magician to pull rabbits out of a hat, but amateurs and experienced cooks can make perfect pastry if they have the right directions!

There was a time when you had to have that certain touch to make light, fluffy, tender, melt-in-your-mouth pie crust, but all the guesswork has been taken out of pie making with recent developments. The only requirements needed are exact measurements and the ability to read directions. All fuss, muss and extra utensils are eliminated.

New type pastry is made with liquid shortening and an ordinary kitchen fork. The pastry is rolled between two pieces of waxed paper, thus eliminating the need for extra flour which in the past has often toughened perfectly good pastry.

Easy-Mix Pastry
(Makes 2 8 or 9-inch crusts)

- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup salad oil
- ¼ cup plus 1 tablespoon ice water

Sift together flour and salt. Combine in a measuring cup, the salad oil and ice water. Beat with a fork until thick and creamy. To avoid separation, immediately pour (all at once) over entire surface of the flour mixture. Toss and mix with fork. The dough will be moist. Form into a ball with the fork.

Divide dough in half. Before rolling, shape each half with the hands into a flat round, making top and edges smooth. Roll dough between two squares of waxed paper. Remove top sheet, invert dough over pan; peel off paper. Fit pastry into pan. Roll out top crust. Cut gashes for escape of steam. Fill pastry-lined pan with desired filling. Place top crust over filling, and trim ½-inch beyond the rim of the pan. Seal edge by folding top under bottom crust. Flute edge. Bake at temperature required for filling used.

PIE FOR LUNCHEON can be an easy matter with this new type crust because it's so simple to make, so successful always. Why not try this pie, plain, or with the addition of weiners or fish if you like it meaty?

Provencal Potato Pie
(Serves 6)

- 6 medium potatoes
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley
- 1 recipe easy-mix pastry
- 2 tablespoons butter
- Few grains pepper
- 1 cup light cream or top milk

Peel potatoes; cut in very thin slices and place in bowl. Add salt, onion and chopped parsley and mix all together. Cover and let stand while preparing pastry. Line an oblong baking dish (10x6x2 inches) using ½ of the pastry rolled ⅛ inch thick. Drain onion-potato mixture. Fill pastry-lined dish. Dot with butter and season lightly with pepper. Roll out remaining pastry for top crust. Cover potatoes. Seal and flute edges. Make several slits in top to permit escape of steam. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven about 1¼ hours or until potatoes are tender. Remove from oven. Turn off oven. Slowly pour cream over potatoes through slits. Return pie to oven for 10 minutes longer. Potatoes will absorb most of the cream. If desired, pie may be prepared several hours in advance and held in refrigerator until ready to bake. Serve with meat, cut into squares or wedges.

Cheese Straws
(Makes 40 straws)

- ½ recipe easy-mix pastry
- ½ cup grated American cheese (sharp ceddar or processed)

Prepare easy-mix pastry as directed. Roll out dough in rectangle, ⅛-inch thick. Sprinkle with one-half of the grated cheese; fold and sprinkle with remaining cheese and fold again. Roll to desired thickness. Lift dough and place on cookie sheet. Cut in strips 5 inches long, ¼ inch wide. Twist, if desired. Bake in a hot (425°F.) oven 8 to 10 minutes or until light brown. Serve as a soup or salad accompaniment.

Coconut Cream Pie

- ¼ cup cornstarch
- ⅔ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups milk, scalded
- 3 slightly beaten egg yolks
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup moist, shredded coconut
- 1 9-inch baked pastry shell

Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt. Gradually add milk. Cook in double boiler until thick, about 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Slowly add small amount of hot mixture to egg yolks; stir into remaining hot mixture. Cook 5 minutes. Cool. Add butter and vanilla. Stir in coconut. Pour into cooled pie shell and spread with meringue: Combine 2 egg whites, unbeaten, with ½ cup sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons water in double boiler. Beat with rotary egg beater until thoroughly blended. Cook 1 minute over boiling water, beating constantly. Remove from hot water; beat 2 minutes longer or until mixture stands in peaks. Pile lightly on pie and sprinkle lightly with toasted coconut. To toast coconut, spread on cookie sheet and brown lightly in a hot (400°) oven. Watch it carefully as it should brown only until golden.

Pep Wilted Appetites With these Tempting Foods

Consomme is fine served hot or cold and even more tempting when you mix together equal parts of strained clean broth and clear chicken broth. Serve with a blob of salted whipped cream and a slice of lemon.

Real flavor treat is a slice of eggplant marinated in French dressing then sprinkled with thyme and dusted with bread crumbs before broiling on both sides.

Baked Bean Rarebit? Yes, it's a hearty supper dish made by melting sharp American cheese, grated, and then mixing in canned baked beans and pork. Serve on toast.

Any green vegetable will be the better if served with Maitre d'hotel butter which is made with sweet butter, lemon juice and minced parsley. Serve very hot.

For a good vegetable plus protein luncheon you'll like a spinach ring in the center of which are served creamed eggs and mushrooms. It's pretty enough for guests, too!

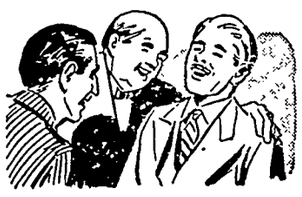
MIRROR Of Your MIND

Pampered Son Resents Favor

By Lawrence Gould

May sons resent being waited on?

Answer: Yes, and often justifiably. A mother who is at heart unwilling to see her son become independent of her may unconsciously try to prolong his childish helplessness by "waiting on him hand and foot." She believes it is unselfish love that makes her do this and feels bitterly aggrieved if the boy lets her know that it annoys him. But he is not really ungrateful—he is trying to defend himself against an urge (which has its echo in his own heart) that seeks to retard or to deprive him of his manhood. A man who enjoys such ministrations too much is a poor risk as a husband.



Is prejudice waning?

Answer: It would seem so, reports Rose Zeligs in the Journal of Genetic Psychology, on the basis of the difference between answers given to questionnaires by twelve-year-old school children in 1943-4 and those given in 1931. Explaining their attitudes towards members of other groups, both sets of children cite "customs, costumes, cleanliness, language, religion, character qualities and civilization," but "the recent trends are away from prejudice because of racial and physical differences." The change has been slow but is greater than is generally realized.

Is "style" achieved deliberately?

Answer: Usually not in creative work like writing, painting or composing music In a recent radio interview, a composer known for his "distinctive style" said that he never thought of anything when writing music except how best to express the feeling he was trying to convey, and the same is true in general of painters and of writers in words Thinking about style tends to make you feel self-conscious and seem insincere and artificial. Once you have learned the technique of your medium, you will be most original when you try least to be so.

Cortisone Can Relieve All Arthritics

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN A DISEASE existed in animals before man appeared on earth, has existed in many ever since, and after all these years may finally disappear, we can readily see why physicians, and patients suffering with arthritis, are watching the almost daily reports on the effectiveness of ACTH and cortisone.

In the Chicago number of Medical Clinics of North America, Dr. Edward F. Rosenberg, chief of arthritis clinic, reports the results obtained by the rheumatoid arthritis group of Michael Reese hospital, Chicago. This group of outstanding research workers and clinicians outline the various types of arthritis treated, the length of time suffered by each patient, the reaction of these new wonder drugs and the results obtained by their use.

While the report is too long for a single article, the general comment gives a most encouraging picture.

"Administration of cortisone to patients with rheumatoid arthritis (the commonest form of arthritis) invariably resulted in relief of the arthritis." This means that just as surely as insulin controls diabetes, and liver and liver extract control pernicious anemia, this drug gives relief from arthritis. Further, the immediate outcome of the treatment shows how long and how much the patient has suffered with arthritis before he began treatment with cortisone.

Patients whose symptoms have been present for less than six months have shown immediate and remarkable benefits from cortisone. "In such cases, improvement generally has been recognizable within two or three days after the start of the treatment." Improvement in these cases is shown by the improvement in appearance of the arthritic condition—less swelling, improved x-ray reports—and by the feelings of the patient—less stiffness in the joints and more strength in the muscles.

In more advanced cases, the effect of the cortisone treatment depended upon the amount of destruction present in joints and adjoining tissues at time treatment began.

PREPARING TO LAY ASPHALT TILES.

Question: Does a basement cement floor need any special treatment before laying asphalt tile?

Answer: The concrete floor must be dry, clean, and free of paint or other finish Spread a special mastic cement over the concrete with a paste spreader and then press the tile down into place You will need a linoleum knife and a blowtorch to soften tile for cutting and trimming Be careful not to put down too much cement, for it will ooze up between the tiles Such work is usually done by a floor contractor

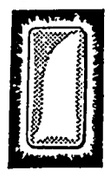
It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD



● Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Just what is inflation?

It's money that seems more valuable than it really is. When there's a greater supply of money than of goods . . . when it takes more and more money to buy fewer and fewer things — that's inflation. It happens when goods get scarce, and you and your neighbors compete unfairly for these few goods. That boosts prices — up and up, until the prices of more and more things are higher than you can afford to pay.

The danger of inflation is already here!

Will it get worse — as more peacetime goods get scarce? That depends upon you and every other American. We can halt inflation — if all of us voluntarily will follow the rules listed below. Let's all pull together to lick inflation. It will take all 150 million of us to do the job!

Here's what all of us must do to halt INFLATION*

Business, Government and Everybody must:

1. Strive for still more efficient production.
2. Halt the upward spiral of prices and wages.
3. Buy only for current needs. Hold business inventories down.
4. Curtail all non-essential government spending and support moves toward this end.
5. Save in every way! Buy U. S. Defense Bonds.
6. Support credit restrictions.
7. Support higher taxes to help balance the budget.

IT WILL TAKE ALL 150 MILLION OF US TO LICK INFLATION

Martha Circle Met With Mrs. Fred A. Arnold May 23

The final meeting of the 1950-51 Martha Circle was held at the Mrs. Fred A. Arnold home on Wednesday, May 23, with Mrs. Harry Gibbs, co-hostess.

Mrs. Gibbs, Circle Chairman, opened the meeting with the poem, "To May." Mrs. Lester Neuberger led the Worship Program with thoughts on "Thanks For Healing." She also gave us a couple interesting articles from the Methodist Woman: one was on the "Miriams" concerning the women hymn writers and the other article was "My First Impressions of Puerto Rico." She closed her programs with prayer.

Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, on behalf of the Circle members, presented a gift to our chairman, Mrs. Gibbs, in appreciation for her leadership of the Martha Circle this past year.

Mrs. Roy Arnold read a summary of the Circle's activities for the year.

Our recreational period was under the leadership of Mrs. Virgil Cook.

A lovely lunch was served by our hostess to the 14 members present, 4 visitors and 6 children.

DEHUMIDIFIER CAN BE USED IN DRY BASEMENT

Damp basements cause a great deal of damage to home equipment each year, observes Carroll Worlan, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College. The moisture rusts home workshop tools, machinery and other expensive equipment.

Excessive moisture can also corrode electrical equipment and furnaces, make basements and storage rooms clammy and musty smelling, and often useless because of dripping pipes and sweating surfaces.

This damage can now be eliminated by using a dehumidifier in the basement to reduce the humidity to a constant, safe level, according to Worlan.

The dehumidifier is essentially a small refrigeration unit with a fan that cools or circulates the air. This allows the moisture in the air to condense out into a pail or drain.

Worlan reports that a continuously operating dehumidifier will use about 8 killowatts of electricity per day and control the excessive moisture in 6,000 to 8,000 cubic feet of space. However, operation during relatively high humidity conditions is usually all that is necessary.

BUDGETS - -

AND NOW WE HAVE THE LOCAL BUDGETS

During July and First Half Of August More Than $250,000,000 of Local Spending and Taxes Will Be Scheduled

There has been rather keen interest during the past three months in the debates dealing with expenditures by the state legislature which spends just a little more over $100,000,000 per year, of which more than $60,000,000 will be returned to local units of government or direct to taxpayers as homestead credit and other similar refunds and exemptions.

Congress is trying with some measure of success to reduce the proposed spending of the federal government, but at best it will amount to at least eight or ten times the state bill to each of you.

During the next ten weeks the officials of counties, cities and towns, school districts, hospitals, and a few other taxing units will submit to public hearings budgets of more than $250,000,000 and property tax levies of more than $160,000,000. Almost $400 per family is involved.

The difference between the budgets and the taxes is represented by "receipts from other sources," the main item of which is state aids of various types is YOURS. Are you interested?

If you are, then let us repeat once more the old but ever new story of why Iowa taxpayers should be especially interested and how they can have just as much to say about the amount and character of public expenditures as the public officials charged with the duty of governing.

At the hearings, you have the opportunity to present your own ideas as to the proposed expenditures and taxes. If you do not agree with the officials and are not satisfied with their decision, you may, with not less than two other taxpayers present at the meeting, ask the clerk to enter on the records the fact that you object to the budget.

You then have until the first Tuesday in September to file with the county auditor a protest or appeal which must be signed by a number of taxpayers equal to one of each four hundred votes cast for governor at the preceding election but not less than ten in any case.

Here is the most important provision in the law. AT LEAST THREE of the signers of the appeal MUST HAVE OBJECTED to the adoption of the budget at the hearing. Without these objectors there can be no appeal.

If an appeal is filed, the auditor certifies same to the State Appeal Board consisting of the State Treasurer, State Auditor and State Comptroller. The Board then sets a date for a hearing in your community at which everyone may appear and be heard. The Appeal Board may reduce, approve or eliminate any of the items in dispute, and its decision is final.

On either new or increased proposals the burden of proof is on the officials but if the item is not new or increased, the objectors must show why it should be reduced.

No financial liability is involved in making an appeal and no witness fees are paid.

Since you are thus given an EQUAL voice you have EQUAL responsibility. Either you appeal or you don't. If you don't you have no kick coming. If you appeal. It's YOUR budget, In either case the officials are protected against unjust criticism if taxes are increased.

NUTS IN MAY, JUNE AND JULY

A recent report by a U. S. Senator shows that in August, under the price support program the government bought about 14 million pounds of shelled peanuts for more than $2,000,000—then sold for a loss of about $906,000. In September, the report said, nearly 12 million pounds of goobers were bought for more than $1,000,000 and sold for a loss of about $48,000.

STORAGE FEEDERS WILL LIGHTEN POULTRY LABOR

Iowa poultry raisers can cut their chicken chores in half through wise range management during summer when labor is scarce and field work requires long hours, says W. R. Whitfield, Iowa State College extension poultryman.

This can be done with storage feeders that hold 400 lbs. of feed and barrel-type waterers that will cut down the number of trips to the range and will provide the birds with an ample supply of feed and water.

When it's time to put feeding and watering equipment outside, Whitfield advises locating it in the shade where the birds will be willing to use the equipment even in the hottest part of the day. He says shade trees, shrubs or a cornfield will provide plenty of shade and give the chickens added protection from hawks, crows and other predators.

Summer range shelters are another source of shade and they are needed to give young poultry comfortable roosting space and a place to go during summer storms. One square foot is the minimum amount of space needed per bird in summer range shelters. Poultry houses that are too warm in summer may cause the producer to lose as much as one-third of the value of the feed used, Whitfield says.

He adds that it may be some trouble to shut birds up at night, but he thinks this is one chore that cannot be left out. Not only does locking the shelter door prevent loss from vermin and theft, but it keeps dogs and cats from entering the building and causing the birds to "stampede" and pile

ONE CHEMICAL NOT ENOUGH FOR FLIES

Takes Combination To Meet All Conditions

An effective fly control program will require the use of combination of chemicals this summer. The chemical to use at any time will depend on the daytime temperature, the kinds of flies you are fighting, and whether beef or dairy cattle are being treated, says Earle Raun. extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

For dairy cattle, he recommends using methoxychlor during cool weather on dairy cows that are in production and as a residual spray for the walls of barns and milk houses. When the daytime temperatures reach 90 degrees F., lindane should replace methoxychlor as the residual spray. This cannot be used on the cows because of a U. S. Food and Drug Administration ruling.

No DDT for Dairy

Repellent sprays should be used on the cows in place of emthoxychlor after horse flies start pestering them in July. Various formulations of activated pyrethrins will do a good job. If oil sprays are used be careful in applying them to cows. Too much oil in one spot will burn the skin, Raun points out.

DDT cannot be used on dairy cows or in dairy barns and milkhouses, as it has been outlawed by the food and drug administration. Neither can DDT be used on beef animals that will be slaughtered within 30 days.

Need Sanitation Too

However, it can be used on other beef animals or used as a residual spray in all shelters except dairy barns during cool weather. It will be as effective as methoxychlor, and either chemical can be used with good results. Lindane should be used as a residual spray for beef cattle shelters during hot weather.

Raun says a strict sanitation program must be followed along with the use of chemicals to control flies successfully. This means getting rid of all fly breeding places. All manure should be cleaned from the farm yard and buildings and hauled directly to the fields Weeds that are mowed should be burned or scattered out to dry, and the outdoor privy should be treated with borax every day.

SUDAN GRASS WILL MAKE GOOD SUMMER PASTURE

Sudan grass has a number of features that make it an excellent midsummer pasture crop, J. M. Scholl, Iowa State College agronomist, reminds farmers who will need supplemental pasture this year.

Sundan has one of the highest carrying capacities for pasture crops grown in Iowa, being able to carry 2 or 3 cows per acre in July, August and September when bluegrass is usually unproductive. Sundan withstands drouth, is easy to grow, is nutritious and palatable, and grows rapidly on fertile soil.

One of the few disadvantages of sudan grass—the danger of prussic acid poisoning from regrowth following poor growing conditions — will be reduced when the new Piper variety of sudan becomes available to Iowa growers. Developed in Wisconsin and already released to selected growers in that state, the new variety has a very low prussic acid content.

Scholl explains that there is danger of prussic acid poisoning in livestock pastured on young short growth in sudan after it has been heavily grazed or has been hit by frost or drouth. He recommends rotational grazing of sudan and advises against pasturing it until the plants are 18 inches high.

Varieties that perform well in Iowa and that are available for planting in 1951 include Commercial and Sweet Sundan. These varieties may be sown in Iowa for use as pasture as late as July 1st.

Sundan can be sown with a grain drill or broadcast at rates of from 20 to 30 pounds per acre on a well prepared seedbed and covered to a depth of 1 inch in heavier soils and 1½ inches in fertile, lighter soils.

Other temporary or emergency pasture crops that can be counted on to some degree in Iowa are sweetclover, second-growth meadows, and stubble pasture. In southern Iowa, lespedeza works well, Scholl adds.

HIGHER YIELDS IMPORTANT IN MEETING CORN NEEDS

Corn planting season is a good time to make a final check on plans to meet the need for more corn this year, observes county extension director, Paul Henderson.

He thinks the possibility of higher yield per acre offers Hancock County farmers one of the best opportunities to meet 1951 corn needs for increased livestock numbers.

Yield per acre average have been going up steadily in recent years and at present prices it is profitable to adopt measures that will boost it still higher. More fertilizer, thicker stands, planting on the contour in sloping fields, planting higher yielding strains, better seedbed preparation and spraying to control borers are possible practices Henderson thinks Hancock County growers may want to consider.

Where corn follows corn, or on otherwise heavily cropped fields, he reports that proper use of commercial fertilizer has often increased yields by 20 to 40 bushels per acre.

In addition, there is often large differences in yield between hybrids that are widely grown in Iowa. For example, in the State Corn Yield Tests, one to the 10 most widely grown hybrids in the south central Iowa yielded 19 bushels per acre more than another hybrid that was also widely grown in the same area. Henderson has pointed out that while growers don't always choose hybrids on the basis of yield along, the higher yielding hybrid in this case stands up well and is on all-around desirable hybrid.

A good seedbed is another actor in getting corn off to a good start. Corn plants that get a poor start in a lose, cloddy seedbed may remain weak the entire season. E. S. Dyas, Iowa State College extension agronomist says the first four weeks are the important ones in getting a good stand of vigorous plants that are capable of producing high yields. He says that with seedbed preparations, planting rates and cultivation practices that fit existing soil conditions, Iowa corn yield averages should be about 75 bushels per acre in normal seasons.

While some strains of hybrid corn withstand corn borer damage better than others, none are totally resistant to the borer. So, in order to get highest yield in 1951, Henderson advises keeping a close watch on borer egg-laying activity this summer and spraying fields when egg mass counts are high enough to warrant the expense.

BREED SOWS NOW FOR SEPTEMBER FARROWING

Most swine producers are uncertain whether or not to raise fall pigs because of the tight grain situation, late season, and the possibility of government price controls.

E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College, says farmers can be on the safe side by breeding their sows for fall pigs now. Then they can dispose of them later if the situation is unfavorable.

One big advantage of fall pigs is that they cost about half as much at farrowing time as spring pigs. This results from the sows being grazed on pasture rather than being fed in drylot during pregnancy.

Quaife has observed that fall pigs farrowed in September usually do the best in Iowa. This gives them a chance to get some size before cold weather sets in. Sows bred the last two weeks in May will farrow around the third week in September.

A good legume pasture such as alfalafa or clover will usually do a good job of carrying bred sows through the summer, according to Quaife. This should be supplemented with a couple of ears of corn daily for each sow, or the sows can be self-fed oats.

During the latter part of the pregnancy period, gilts will need about one-third pound of protein supplement each day.

CHEMICAL SPRAYS WILL KEEP VEGETATION DOWN

In the places around the farm where you don't want anything to grow, you can sterilize the ground with chemical sprays. E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College, recommends doing this immediately, while weeds and grass are still small.

Some common areas that the farmers often treat are cracks in sidewalks, flagstone walks, under fences, along driveways and around buildings.

Ammate and TCA are the two chemicals most widely used for this purpose. The ammate should be mixed at the rate of 1 pound in 1 gallon of water. This is usually enough to cover 1 square rod of surface. Sylwester says the vegetation should be sprayed only until it is wet. It is not necessary to soak it. It can even be put on before seedlings attain a height of 1-2 inches.

TCA is used in the same manner except that only ½ to three-quarters pound is needed per gallon of water and this applied per square rod. Both chemicals should be used with caution near valuable trees and shrubs.

Sodium chlorate or atlacide can also be used at the rate of 1 pound in 1 gallon of water applied on a square rod. However, these must be applied immediately if they are going to be used, as they tend to become inflammable on dry vegetation later in the summer. By using them at this time of the year on bare ground, all growth is prevented.

ELECTRICITY ON FARM REDUCES LABOR COSTS

The high cost of labor is seldom a problem for farmers who put electricity to work A ¼ horsepower electric motor will do the work of two men in a lot of jobs, and it costs only 1½ cents an hour to operate.

This motor can be used to a good advantage on a grindstone, drill press, fanning mill, cream separator and other small machines, says Erwin Johnson, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

Proof that farmers are saving labor with electricity is shown in a report from 461 eastern livestock area farms in Iowa. In 1938, about half of all electricity used on these farms went into lighting. But in 1947, only about one-fifth of the electricity was used for lighting. At the same time these farmers used 2½ times more electricity in 1947 than 10 years earlier.

Besides saving labor, farmers find that electricity makes the farming more convenient and efficient, Johnson says.

Ligthing the farmyard and buildings does away with the old kerosene lantern. Pressure systems put an end to the tiresome task of carrying water. In the house extra convenience is found through the use of home freezers, refrigerators, washing machines, irons, clothes dryers and other appliances.

Farmers say they can do their work better and easier by using water heaters, animal brooders, milk coolers, elevators and other equipment that increases production and saves labor.

Flat Tires

Clark DeShaw of Hopinton thinks he may be the new holder of the world's "flat tire" record. Recently, he experienced eight flat tires in a single day, divided among the tires on his tractor and two trailers.

SUMMER FUN FOR THE CHILDREN IN THER OWN BACK YARD PLAYGROUND

If the small child in your family picks his own yard as a choice spot to spend many summer hours of play, he has a mighty good reason. It means his own yard has play equipment in it that keeps him interested, occupied and happy, and he has a place to ask his friends to come to play.

Turning your yard into a good playground for your children can be inexpensive and fun. And it can be very rewarding to have the youngsters under your casual supervision, child development specialists at Iowa State College point out. You can learn quite a bit about different children by watching them at play. If you see that your own small fry has trouble getting along with some of his playmates, you may be able to help him out in his public relations.

Sand-box and Water Tub

For the younger children a sandbox, shovels, pails and sifters are wonderful fun—a sandbox is easy to make, inexpensive to buy. Rubber balls and rubber animals are good playthings for tots, too. And since every child from his diaper stage to his teens loves to play in water, why not provide a tub or miniature wading pool in the yard?

Does this play equipment serve any other purpose besides keeping the children busy and from under foot? Yes, say child development specialists. Through their playing, running, climbing, jumping, skipping and hopping, children learn how to use their bodies and they learn a great deal about one another and the world in which they live.

Play equipment can be very simple and still fill a child's need for exercise, learning and fun. Empty kegs or barrels, free of nails and loose splinters, are fun to roll or to crawl through. Empty boxes and crates are good for building and climbing. Even a plank of wood has its uses. Twelve or more inches wide and 8 or 10 feet long, it provides exciting walking for the toddler when it's slightly elevated from the ground. With one end elevated, it becames a hill for trucks and cars. Propped against a horse, with boxes to climb up on, it is a slide. And is there a strudy tree in your yard that will support a rope-and-plank swing?

Pup-Tent and Games

If your youngster and his friends like to play at camping out, a pup-tent is a good investment. A blanket over the clothes line is just as much fun for the 1 to 6-year-old. And don't forget games—a crouquet set, ring toss games, or an open ended box or net on the side of the garage or farm for basketball practice.

There are a great many playthings you can make at home. "About Toys: Make Them At Home," a booklet written by child development specialists at Iowa State College, gives complete directions on making a variety of toys and play equipment—from a ladder, push wagon, scottie rocker and wheel barrow to a teeter-totter, drum and double-deck doll bed.

Whether you send for this booklet and make the play equipment yourself, or buy it from the biggest store in town, the important thing is to provide your youngsters a place to play and interesting things to do this summer.

ORDINANCE NO. 40

AN ORDINANCE REGULATING THE USE OF STREETS, ALLEYS, AND PUBLIC PLACES FOR THE MOVING OF BUILDINGS, AND THE MAKING AND REPAIR OF EXCAVATIONS THEREIN, AND PROVIDNG A PENALTY FOR VIOLATIONS THEREOF

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE TOWN COUNCIL OF THE TOWN OF KLEMME, IOWA.

Section 1. No person shall move any building, or structure along, across, or over any street, alley, or public place, unless he shall first secure a permit therefor. Such permit shall be issued only upon application to the Mayor, stating the kind of building and structure, the height, and size thereof, the location from which and to which same is to be moved, and the streets, alleys, and public places along and across which the same is intended to be moved. A bond, with good and sufficient surety to be approved by the Mayor shall be posted with said application for such permit conditioned to idemnify the town and any other person, company, or corporation damaged thereby, against any and all liability to persons, property or other damages arising out of the moving of such building or structure, and also providing that the District Court of Hancock County, Iowa, shall have jurisdiction of any suit for recovery on said bond.

Section 2. Upon receipt of any such application, the Mayor shall unless otherwise agreed, give any person, company or corporation, having telegraph, telephone, electric or power wires or poles, along the streets, alleys, of public places of the town, written notice of such application, and fix thereon a time and place of hearing, not less than two days from the date of service of such notice, and upon said hearing, the person desiring the permit, and such person, company or corporation shall be entitled to present evidenece and be heard upon the question of the proposed route, and the Mayor, after hearing such evidenece may grant a permit in writing for the moving of such building or structure, by such route, as he shall find from such hearing most convenient for the public, and shall designate said route in the permit Upon issuance of any such permit, the Mayor shall give written notice to any person, company or corporation having telegraph, telephone, electric, or opwer wires or poles along the route designated in such permit to move any wires or poles which interfere with the moving of such building or structure, for not to exceed five hours and not earlier than eight o'clock in the forenoon, nor later than three o'clock in the afternoon, the route and time for moving said building or structure to be fully designated in said written notice from the Mayor to such person, company or corporation, served twenty-four hours before the time of such removal of any such wires or poles. The cost of such romoval and the replacement thereof shall be fixed by the Mayor and paid by the owner of the building or structure to the Mayor for the benefit of the owner of such wires or poles before the giving of the notice for the removal of the wires or poles Any person, company or corporation shall not be required to move any part of its high potential electric transmission lines provided, that in the judgement of the Mayor, any other suitable route exists for the moving of said building or structure, and shall be entitled to forty-eight hours notice from the Mayor of the necessity of the removal of any such high potential electric transmission lines.

Section 3. No person shall excavate in, on, under or remove or disturb any sidewalk or paving, or excavate in any location in any street, alley, sidewalk, or public place, under which are located any telegraph, telephone or electric lines, including cables and or conduits, drainage systems or water systems, including any and all appurtenances thereto unless he shall first obtain a permit therefor from the Mayor. Whenever such excavation or removal is completed such person shall then restore any such sidewalk, paving, street, alley, or public place, to the same condition in which it was prior thereto, all at such person's cost and expense. A bond with good and sufficient surety to be approved by the Mayor shall be posted with said application for such permit conditioned to indemnify the town and any other person, company or corporation damaged thereby, against any and all liability to persons, property or other damages arising out of such excavation, and also providing that the District Court of Hancock County, Iowa, shall have jurisdiction of any suit for recovery on said bond No person shall leave any such excavation without properly barricading the same and maintaining at night warning lights thereon, or upon any pile of earth, plank, stone, or other material placed nearby

Section 4. Anyone violating any of the provisions of the ordinance shall, upon conviction, be subject to imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. Whenever the fine and costs imposed for violation of this ordinance are not paid, the person convicted may be committed to jail until the fine and costs are paid, not exceeding thirty days.

Section 5. All ordinances or parts or ordinances in conflict with the provisions of this ordinance are hereby repealed

Section 6. This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication as provided by law

Passed and adopted this 16th day of May A D., 1951.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lawhorn are doing some extensive remodeling in their home on East Main.

When they installed a new florescent type light fixture in the bathroom they removed an old drop cord and bulb. The bulb which they removed has been in continuous service for 31 years- The old bulb is still serviceable, but the glass is slightly darkened from the heat generated over the long period of years, but it still gives a good light.

Mrs. Lawhorn also has another light bulb of the same age, but it has not been used continuously like the bulb from the bathroom. The smaller bulb still gives off a bright light.

JET INJECTIONS

Future Draftees May Get Shots By High-Pressure Jet Apparatus

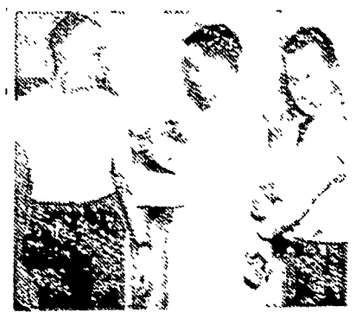
The plight of auto mechanics and others who work near hydraulic oil lines may have led to an invention that will be hailed by a great many United States army soldiers who face enemy gunfire unflinchingly but who quail at the sight of a hypodermic needle.

This new device now in the advanced experimental stages in the U S army medical service graduate school in Washington D C is a multiple dose high-pressure injection apparatus which is shaped much like a pistol and may be used in the future to rapidly inoculating groups o people will shots of vaccines antibiotics insulin and others.

Research has not yet revealed who first thought of using a high pressure jet to force medicaments through the skin, but Dr Joe Warren, of Washington, D C, chief of virus research at the army school, believes that automotive lubricants accidentally forced by pressure in to mechanics subcutaneous tissues probably first prompted the inspiration.

It was noted that fine jets of oil at high velocity, as from a leaking hydraulic line, could penetrate human skin and leave little or no mark. If this phenomena could be applied to inoculations, it was reasoned that besides doing away with the pain and psychological hazard of the unpopular hypodermic needle, jet injection would have several other important advantages

1. With a multiple dose apparatus, large numbers of people could be given protective vaccines or medication in a short time. This consideration is particularly applicable to civilian defense efforts



This is how future army men may receive their shots. Above an army doctor is testing the experimental multiple dose jet injection apparatus that the army may adopt.

in the event of atomic bombings or other disasters affecting entire communities

2 In using hypodermic needles to inoculate large cross-sections of any community, there would be some danger of transmitting infections. Because the jet nozzle does not penetrate the tissues as the needle does this danger is eliminated.

3. No special training is required for giving inoculations by the jet method

4 When produced in quantity, jet injection apparatus will be relatively inexpensive

It was some of these considerations, Doctor Warren believes, that prompted a diesel engineer named Lockhart to patent in 1946 the first instrument especially designed for parenteral jet injection

The R B Scherer Corporation of Detroit, Michigan, developed Lockhart's device and arranged for anatomical and other studies with his "gun," the Hypo-Spray, a hand-cocking, single-shot instrument.

This first excursion into the field of jet inoculations was field tested for the United States army by Dr. Herbert Batson and Captain Robert Wall.

They found that the principle of jet injection was feasible for administering bacterial vaccines. The Hypo-Spray, they found, would do all that the hypodermic needle could do in this line, and do it without the possibility of cross-infection and virtually without pain.

While the automatic-loading jet "gun" is not yet ready for general Army use because of several minor engineering details which still remain to be worked out, it is already clear, according to Doctor Warren, that administration of vaccines, such as those for typhoid, typhus, tetanus, and diphtheria, antibiotics, such as penicillin and insulin, and other biologicals, is both feasible and highly desirable.

Those who volunteered for demonstration shots were dubious at first, but as the tests proceeded, eagerly began to ask:

"When can we get all our shots this way?"

There are some disadvantages to the jet method. One of these is the occasional failure of the jet to penetrate the skin when it is particularly thick, or is subsurfaced with layers of intradermal fat. A control that will enable the operator to vary the pressure within limits according to the individual being inoculated is being worked out.

The jet injection method applies only to subcutaneous and intradermal medication; intravenous injections cannot be given in this way. Nor is the "gun" designed to handle highly viscous material such as oil suspensions.

JAN STERLING (Mrs. Paul Douglas) stacked up an impressive list of successes on the stage before Hollywood grabbed her; right now she is sprinkled with Hollywood star dust. Paramount initially teamed her with Alan Ladd in "Appointment with Danger", had her play the blind girl in "Union Station".

JAN STERLING

gave her major roles in "The Mating Season", "Rhubarb" and "Ace in the Hole". In the latter she gives a superb performance. Jan is blonde, pretty, delightful, and so enthusiastic about her husband, to whom she has been married just a year, that our talk at luncheon was mostly about Paul. She'd give anything to make a picture with him.

THE FICTION CORNER

AGGIE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

QUENTIN, north woods guide, told me this story.

"It happened shortly after gold was discovered up near Hayden," he began. "It wasn't much of a strike.

A settlement, however, sprung up and they named it Leland, after Jim.

3-Minute Fiction

"A year after the first log buildings were erected the settlers decided they ought to have a school teacher, and they sent down to Ottawa for one. Miss Agnes Sheldon volunteered and I was delegated to meet her at the station in Twin Forks. It was a six-day canoe trip, the only practical means of summer transportation.

"One look at Miss Agnes Sheldon when she stepped from that train and I smelled trouble. She wasn't old, but her features bore a mature look.

She wore a severe black suit, bone-rimmed glasses, cotton stockings, laced boots.

"When I introduced myself she looked at me as though I were some new kind of insect. That made me mad at the start. I scouted around the town and borrowed some apparel for her to wear that was suitable for the trip.

"I offered them to her and she glared at me as though I'd called her a bad name. In no uncertain terms she assured me she was capable of choosing her own costumes. Well, I was sort of glad. My conscience was clear and I felt that the trip would teach her a much needed lesson. I did, however, endeavor to prevail upon her to rub some mosquito lotion on her skin before we started. She wasn't, she said, going to smear herself up like a savage.

"The mosquitoes were pretty bad that year. Before noon of the first day Miss Sheldon was bitten so badly it hurt me to look at her. I offered her the lotion again and she refused it. I could see then that she was stubborn.

"The morning after the first night I crawled out of my tent at dawn and found that Miss Sheldon was up ahead of me. She was down at the river, bathing her face. By the looks of her clothes, she'd slept in them.

"The remainder of that trip was something to write home about. With each passing mile Miss Sheldon got more uncomfortable and more obstinate. And I, though I pitied her, got pretty stubborn myself. I decided not to offer her the lotion again until she asked for it. I was sure that sooner or later she'd break down and admit defeat. But she didn't.

"We had a pretty tough time in the Little Falls rapids because the river was high that year. We shipped a lot of water and Miss Sheldon got drenched through to the skin. That night it rained and she slept in wet clothes. The next day she broke her glasses, and because of near sightedness was always tripping over things.

"When reached Leland shortly after noon of the sixth day and there was quite a delegation down to meet us. Jim was there, beaming a welcome and ready to make a speech. But at sight of Miss Sheldon the beam died on his lips.

"'Gentlemen,' I says, 'this here's Miss Agnes Sheldon, our new school teacher. She aims to bring a bit of civilization into our settlement, and I reckon she's done it."

"Well, sir, if Miss Sheldon hated me before, she despised me after that speech. But I'm danged if I could help it. This was my first experience with a female and I tell you I was mad. Any dumbhead who'd let mosquitoes bite the tar out of her like that, deserved to be told what was thought of her.

"Jim Leland's wife fetched her up to their cabin and put her to bed. She stayed there for almost two weeks. Mosquitoes, sunburn and wet clothes had danged near ruined her.

"Me, after I'd cooled off some, I felt kind of apologetic and decided the best thing I could do was to get out of town for a spell. But I didn't. No, sir I stuck there and faced my medicine. There's nothing like being married to a wife who's got a mind of her own—they say.

How Will the Future Decide MacArthur Question?

By Wright A. Patterson

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have thoroughly demonstrated their appreciation of and belief in the abilities of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. By their tremendous demonstrations they have expressed their love and gratitude for the services he has rendered their nation. Unofficially, that includes the senators and representatives in congress. They, too, rendered their unqualified homage to a great man and their belief in his announced policies, when the general addressed their joint session.

Now there remains the official congressional verdict. Will that verdict, if and when it is rendered, support the President and his unpopular secretaries of state and defense, or will it support the judgement of the man in whom the people have so enthusiastically expressed their confidence and appreciation? At the time this is written, I need only one guess as to what the result will be.

There will be no definite verdict. Congress will constitute a hung jury, regardless of the wishes of the people. Congress, as such, is a partisan political organization. A bare majority in both houses, senate and house, represents the party of the President, and the decidedly unpopular secretaries of state and defense whom the President appointed, and whom he refused to fire.

That bare majority of the President's party, controlling both senate and house, cannot afford to repudiate the leader of their party, nor will they censure or vote a lack of confidence in the members of his cabinet whom the people have so definitely denounced.

When it is all over, and Congress has had its official say, we will be right where it all started. Except Douglas MacArthur will know as definitely as wild enthusiasm across the nation can express the attitude of the people of the nation, just where he stands in the hearts of the American people No action, or lack of action, on the part of congress can take that away from him. The President may, if he wishes, accept such a stalemate as a victory for his policies and those of his secretaries of state, and defense, rather than as a vote of partisan political expediency.

Such is the way of partisan politics in our United States. Such is the way of our republic of the people who are in control of the government at all times. The only way we can express our displeasure with a President, once he is elected, is to impeach him if he does something that goes beyond his constitutional authority.

The people did not question the authority of the President to fire Gen. MacArthur, but they questioned his method of doing it. The extent of such disapproval was evidenced in a radio poll, conducted by Fulton Lewis, Jr., in which he asked 16 questions, with the answers to be mailed to senators and representatives from the states and districts representing those answering in congress.

The second question in that list was: "Would you today vote for Harry S. Truman for president?" More than three million replies were received, only six out of each hundred, six per cent, voted yes. If that condition should continue until 1952, which it will not, it would mean the elimination of the Democratic party as a factor in American politics.

As of now President Truman is unpopular, but his party in congress cannot afford to repudiate him or his policies or his appointees, so there will be no verdict in the case of General of the Army Douglas Macarthur and his far eastern policies.

Only the voters, if they wish, can render a verdict, and only at election time. Many of those who voted "no" in the Fulton Lewis straw poll, will vote "yes" at that election, should the President decide to run again and his party nominates him. Was the hurrahing for Gen. MacArthur expressing but a momentary emotion, or will it keep until November 1952?

That appeasement authority, Dean Acheson, votes General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, wrong on military subjects.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Reply to MacArthur

THE FLAT monotones of President Truman, speaking recently to a nation-wide audience over television and radio, and the equally flat, but concise and clipped statements of Gen. George Marshall, secretary of defense, most certainly do not have the fulsome, sonorous tones as do the dramatic pontifical pronouncements of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to which the ear of the nation has become attuned.

But the President and the joint chiefs of staff have given their answer to General MacArthur and the American people—an answer of flat denial and rebuttal of the policies proposed by him to extend the war in Asia. Also, MacArthur's superiors on the joint staff declared firmly that the former Korean commander did violate directives not once, but several times.

And to listen to these men—Marshall, who as chief of staff blueprinted World War II not only in Europe but in the Pacific; Gen. Omar Bradley, present chief of staff, dubbed the GI general and a brilliant tactician; Adm. Forest Sherman, former commander of the Atlantic fleet; Gen. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff for air—one could not help but feel impressed with their sincerity and integrity, their obvious knowledge and experience concerning whereof they spoke, and feel that with these men heading our military defense the nation is in safe hands, come what may.

In the President's answer to MacArthur, he made one point, the most important point of all probably, when he said:

"A lot of people are looking at this debate on foreign policy as if it were just a political fight. But the stakes are a lot more important than the outcome of an election. The thing at stake in this debate may be atomic war. Our foreign policy is not a political issue. It is a matter of life and death. It is a matter of the future of mankind."

Refuses to Extend War

The President made two other important points: "I have refused to extend the area of the conflict in the far east, under the circumstances which now prevail. And I am going to tell you exactly why. I have refused, first on military grounds. The best military advise I have been able to obtain—the best collective military advise in this country—is that this course of action would not lead to a quick and easy solution of the Korean conflict. On the contrary, it could very well lead to a much bigger and longer war which would not reduce our casualties in the far east. It would increase them enormously."

Need Our Allies

The other very important point he made was that to follow the MacArthur advice would force this nation to go it alone in Asia. "We cannot go it alone in Asia and go it in company in Europe . . . We do not intend to fall into that trap. I do not propose to strip this country of its allies in the face of the Soviet danger."

The President then pointed out that if we abandon our allies and fight an Asian war alone, it would wreck the United Nations, the North Atlantic treaty and the whole system of collective security which is now being set up under the command of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower in Europe.

Coalition Is Dead

One thing this great debate in the congress has done, it has killed off coalition government, at least for the time being. For on the various votes in the senate, Democrats and Republicans have been divided right down the line as never before in this congress. Only one Democrat jumped the fence—McCarran of Nevada.

Plays No Favorites

One thing which can be said for General MacArthur—he played no favorites. He and only he has the solution to the global battle against Russian Communism. He declared the ideas advocated by Senator Taft were "silly." He said the proposal of former President Herbert Hoover was "ridiculous." And as for the joint chiefs of staff, they had a right to their opinions and he had a right to his. But every one was out of step but General MacArthur.

Secret Documents Viewed

There is another thing this debate has done. For the first time in our history, and probably in the history of any other nation, we have trotted out to public view the most secret documents, so secret and so important to the life of this nation that they were taken from the Pentagon vaults to the senate committee rooms by a company of armed soldiers. The Kremlin and other world capitols are hearing as soon as you our plans.

Not to Be Served

Lesson for June 10, 1951

THERE are at least three ideas of what religion is, and two of them are wrong if Jesus was right.

To put this more correctly: All three ideas have some truth in them, but if either the first or the second is taken as the main and only truth, then religion goes wrong; while Christ's truth carries in itself all the truth the others have.

Religion Is Not Retreat

FIRST of these wrong ideas about religion is that it is a retreat from the world, a private conference between God and the soul—and nothing more.

People holding this idea have literally fled from the world, they have lived as hermits, they have taken vows of silence and not spoken to a living soul for years on end, they have lived in little shut-in communities devoted to contemplation and prayer.

Now the relation between God and the soul is extremely important. Prayer and contemplation are the very atmosphere of religion, and the Christian ought always to be truly separate from the world. But retreating to a cell won't answer. Nobody is any better for taking a vow of silence.

Jesus was not that kind of person. His apartness from the world was not marked by a brick wall, but by his being a different kind of person, in the world.

Religion Is Not a Guarantee

ANOTHER wrong idea about religion is that it is a means of gain. Being religious is supposed to be a sure way of getting what you want, it means getting God on your side, it means having all your prayers answered, it means prosperity and success.

Surely no one could study the story of Jesus and come away with that notion in his head! Jesus got neither health, wealth, popularity nor success out of being what he was and doing what he did.

The most respectable citizens regarded him as a wicked man; his property was only the clothes he wore; he is known to us as a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief"; as for success, it is written that "he came to his own, and his own received him not."

Well, some one will ask, do you mean to say there is nothing in being a Christian? Don't you get anything at all out of it? That is a fair question.

Yes, there is everything to be gained; but not in that money-making, happiness-guaranteeing fashion. The person who "goes in for religion" hoping to advance his own interests, is still only a selfish man; and selfishness and Christianity are just crosswise.

Not To Be Served

THE third idea is in Jesus' words: "The son of man came not to be served but to serve, and to give his life a ransom for many." And as one of his great followers said: "As he is, so are we in this world." (I John 4:17.)

This is the ideal of service, in its deepest, widest sense; and it takes in both those other ideals of religion. One of the best ways of serving others is to pray for them, as Jesus did. One of the best things we can do for others is to live as close to God as we can. But as Jesus himself said: "For their sakes I dedicate myself."

It is true, also, that something is to be gained from religion; but nothing that a selfish, greedy, money-loving person can understand. As one of the great creeds expresses it, the "benefits of redemption" are assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, increase of grace, and perseverance therein to the end.

These are priceless, but no one can understand such things or even wish for them so long as he is a self-loving person. Jesus served men's bodies and minds, he taught and healed; but deeper than this, he came to save men—save them from their worst selves, bringing them out from slavery of sin, into the freedom of God.

So the Christian who wants to know the full meaning of his religion will, like his Master, so far as he can find opportunity, serve others' needs in every way he can. And the best service one person can do for another, after all, is to introduce him to Christ.

Committee's Proposed Tax Increase Hits Lower Income Groups Hardest

TAXES ON THE LOCAL LEVEL—By July 1, or shortly thereafter, the man on Main Street is going to find himself subject to increased individual income taxes if the house ways and means committee's proposals are carried out.

The committee voted to increase income taxes $2,950,000,000 a year. The increase would raise taxes in every bracket by 3 percentage points.

For instance, a single man with a net income of $2,000 a year would pay $322 in taxes instead of $280. This would be an increase from 20 per cent to 23 per cent.

In the second bracket ($2,000 to $4,000), the tax would go up from 22 to 25 per cent, and in the third bracket ($4,000 to $6,000), from 26 to 29 per cent.

In general, the increase in each person's tax would be about the same as the jump which took place under the first war-tax bill passed last year. This proposed taxation is tentative, however, and subject to possible changes by the house, the senate finance committee, and the full senate. But it is an indication of approximately what the small-towner can expect before the summer is over.

In The News

Defense Secretary Marshall (top picture) continued to be of top interest in the nation's press as he told senators the hometowners don't want to expand the war in Korea . . . Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston (center) was in the news again with demands for extension of economic controls . . . Donald Dawson (lower picture) made front pages by swearing he never used pressure on RFC directors.

WHAT DOES AMERICA THINK?—From the time this nation was founded politicians have tried to keep in close contact with the home towns in an effort to know and understand what the average man is thinking. Very few of them, however, have succeeded.

With this in mind, Secretary of Defense Marshall made a bold statement during his testimony on the MacArthur-Truman controversy when he asserted the American people will stand with the administration on military policy in Korea.

Marshall believes the average hometowner has no desire to expand the war in Asia. He believes the American people "are on the side that the defense department, the joint chiefs of staff, and the civilian authority of the government favor."

This side, Marshall asserted, involved a settled conviction that the present policy of limited commitment of force in Korea must go on.

TEAM WORK—The first thing the American youngster learns, whether he is a city boy or a small town one, is that he has to be a member of the team. To play with the other kids he must cooperate. Americans carry this lesson with them through life.

It was with some relief, therefore, that home-towners heard the news that those free nations who have been trading with Communist China had finally agreed it was time to start playing with the home team and to cut off that trade completely. Britain, trade and dollar hungry, was possibly the worst offender. It could be that the senate vote to cut off economic aid to any nation which permits its citizens to trade with Communist areas had much to do with the sudden splurge of cooperation.

FOR HUNGRY BEEF EATERS—In an action entirely independent of the recent projected general rollback on beef prices scheduled by October 1, the government unexpectedly slashed approximately 12 cents a pound off ceiling prices of some chuck steaks and pot roasts.

For the hungry beef eaters of the nation it was a welcome surprise. It is not likely to make relations between the administration and the nation's beef producers, packers and distributors any cosier, however.

In The News

Dr. Mary T. Martin Sloop (top picture), 77-year-old of Crossmore, N.C., became big news when she was named American Mother of 1951. Dr. Sloop, wife of a country doctor, became nationally known for her work among the underprivileged in the mountains of her state . . . . Always sensational news, glamor princess Rita Hayworth, arrived in Reno to divorce Prince Aly Kahn.

A SECOND ATTEMPT—While General Marshall and the joint chiefs of staff testified before congressional committees in rebuttal to earlier testimony of Gen. Douglas MacArthur on the conduct of the Korean war, North Korean and Chinese Communists were ready for a second attempt in their spring offensive.

The first attempt launched April 22, bogged down in little over a week with an estimated 75,000 casualties. For the second try, the Communists rushed thousands of troops into three buildup areas armed with an unusually large number of machine guns and Russian-type submachine guns.

United Nations forces were ready and waiting for the new offensive, firmly entrenched and, for the first time in the war, ready with an air raid warning system. UN commanders remained firm in the belief they could beat back anything the Communists could throw against them.

THE PRICE IS STEEP—The weeks of futile talks in Paris by deputies of the big four foreign ministers has reaffirmed in the minds of the average home-towner the fact you can't reason with the Communists. For weeks the deputies have tried to work out an agenda for a meeting of the big four foreign ministers without success.

It is apparent that the end of the rope has been reached. The price demanded by the Reds is too high for a God fearing and freedom loving nation. The Russians insist upon an arms-reduction item in the agenda that would mean the suspension of our defense program. The Russians want their own kind of arms-reduction formula. It doesn't include international inspection and control.

Here again the free world has been blocked in its attempt to eas world tensions and try to make some progress toward real peace.

THE TALKING CONGRESS—At the moment it appears that the 82nd congress will go down in history as the talking congress, with a record of fewer laws enacted than the 80th congress which was termed the "do-nothing congress" by President Truman.

After four full months, the 82nd congress has enacted only 28 public laws, a recent check revealed. None of the major platform planks on which Truman won election for a second term have been approved. Of 37 specific legislative recommendations by the President, only three have become effective as a result of congressional action since January. And two of them affect only soldiers or veterans of the war in Korea.

FROM COW TO CAN

New Milk Canning Process Is Reported

A new cow-to-can process that produces milk that tastes like bottled milk, but which can be shipped long distances without spoiling is being used by a dairy in East Stanwood, Wash., and being sent to Alaska, Japan and the armed forces.

The process was invented by Dr. Roy B. Graves, 64-year-old research scientist. Since March 30, 2,000 gallons of milk have been canned daily.

The milk is never exposed to air. The canning is done in a bacteria-free atmosphere of steam. It differs from the standard pasteurization process in the amount of heat used.

In the new process the milk is exposed to 278-degree heat for only eight seconds, the 64-year-old scientist reported.

Good Ball Clubs Slump, But Why?

By GRANTLAND RICE

The Answer

Moves on, nor any error or a hit,
Nor any prayer can change a single score,
Nor any tears wash out a game from it.

The Costly Slump

New York, May—No one can explain a slump. One can only take a flying guess. One can only guess what actually happened to the Giants through the windy, chilly April days of 1951. A good many writers saw this squad train at St. Petersburg and the majority opinion rated Leo Durocher's outfit either on top or close to the Dodgers. The Dodgers, Giants and Phillies were rated in the plateau country, practically neck and neck.

Grantland Rice

I know Durocher worked his bunch into first-class physical shape. Condition has always been a big word in the Durocher dictionary. He rates mental attitude just as high.

"This club had no pennant faith itself last summer," he said one morning, "until June had passed into July. Then it began to believe it could win, a very big factor. From that point on through July, August and September we played the best ball in the league. Now we are starting this season with a stronger faith in ourselves than we had at any time last summer. The team has been strengthened by the additions of Noble, Bowman and Wilson. I feel sure we have a fine chance to win, although I know also how good the Dodgers are. A good start will be a big help."

Whereupon this hustling, well-conditioned ball club took a fast running start and dived for the bottom of the pit. Here was a better team than the squad that outplayed the league for three months. It was a match for any team it faced all spring, including the Indians. But after picking up two games in Boston, the following moody events started taking place—

No. 1—The pitching became extremely erratic. When the pitching improved, bad outfield and infield play wrecked game after game. I saw one outfielder turn a simple putout into a game-winning home run by misjudging the same ball twice.

No. 2—The consistent power at bat became extremely inconsistent. The Giants could hit only on days when the other team was getting more hits and runs. They couldn't support the few well-pitched games they got.

No. 3—The team lost its hustle. It soon began to look whipped. There was a dazed look on practically every Giant face.

No. 4—The squad was overtensioned. It was drawn tighter than a dozen drums. Apparently all its early faith and belief had been wrecked.

The Rest of the Way

No one can say just how far the Giants ragged start will crowd them close to 1951 oblivion. It certainly won't be any big help. They are still only a few games back of the leaders and now that the losing skein has been broken it may be a different story. A few winning games could get them going again.

I ran across several managers and veteran ballplayers who didn't believe Hearn and Maglie would do nearly as well with a pennant chance as they did when far out of the race. There is a big psychological difference. It was important to win this spring. It wasn't too important last summer when the team was far behind. Jansen, Hearn and Maglie are still three good pitchers. Jansen has pitched two fine games and another good one. Hearn and Maglie so far haven't been nearly as effective as they were last summer on a team practically out of the running.

No one can lay any blame so far on Durocher. He has picked the pitchers he was figured to pitch. He hasn't the relief hurlers which he expected to have back in St. Petersburg.

The poor outfielding on the club wasn't expected. After all Durocher can't do the hitting and the fielding from the bench of the coach's box.

In the middle of a slump you become jittery and jumpy. You expect something morbid or melancholy to happen at any given moment. You are looking for trouble in every inning. You wear your collar cut low so as to be prepared for the worst. Finally the situation becomes so desperate you become numb—and then start winning again with most of the tension removed.

BUILD AND PROTECT HEALTH WITH Milk

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

THE KLEMME TIMES

Volume 56. KLEMME, IOWA, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1951 Number 30.

More Milk, Fewer Cows; 1950 Output Near Record

INCREASE IN PRODUCTION DUE TO BETTER HERDS

Record-breaking production cow put U. S. Milk production near its all-time high in 1950. This production record was made in the ace of an unfavorable feed-milk ratio, and a sharp cut in the number of dairy cows on farm.

In 1950, milk production totaled 56,093 billion quarts . . within 1% of the record of 56,513 billion quarts produced in 1945. The number of cows on the farm on January 1, 1950 was 12% less than on January 1, 1945.

Since 1934, production of milk per cow has increased steadily except for 1943 and 1944. Average milk output per cow per year, only 4,033 pounds in 1934, exceeded 5,000 pounds for the first time in 1948, and was 5,290 pounds in 1950.

The increase in output of milk per cow is attributed to heavy culling of dairy herds, improved pastures, better breeding and management practices, and an increase in amount of concentrates fed.

Milk production is likely to maintain its 1950 level in 1951, but an increase is not expected.

Mr. And Mrs. Waterman Return Home From Washington

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman returned home Wednesday evening from Tacoma, Washington, where Mrs. Waterman had been receiving treatments for about two months. Their daughter, Mrs. Lyle Wilcox had spent several weeks with her mother and they took her to Camp Leonard Wood, Mo., where her husband is stationed.

The Watermans encountered quite a bit of snow through the mountains, but otherwise their trip home was enjoyed. On Denver they called on Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mueller. Mr. Mueller is employed at a creamery and Mrs. Mueller works as a practical nurse in a hospital at night. Their son, Herb is in California.

In Kirksville, Mo. they chanced to meet Mrs. Edith Liewen, formerly of Belmond, who taught a class of piano students in Klemme. The Liewens are operating an ice cream plant at Kirksville.

VACATIONERS URGED TO USE CAUTION IN WATER RECREATION

Iowa lakes and streams furnish recreation for thousands of fisherman, boatmen, and swimmers, but they are also the scene of almost daily drownings, mostly caused by carelessness.

The American Red Cross suggests the following hints on water safety: Wait an hour or two after eating before going swimming. Don't stay in the water after becoming tired. Swim only in supervised swimming places. Don't overestimate the distance you are able to swim. River currents are dangerous; don't try to buck them. Use the safest method possible to rescue a person in trouble in the water; use a boat or throw some floating object if possible.

There are more than 10,000 pleasure boats on Iowa's inland waters, a few simple rules governing their use will prevent many tragedies. Iowa laws require that all boats for hire must pass an annual inspection. All inspected boats have a small metal tag attached stating the passenger capacity of the boat. Under no condition exceed the passenger capacity of the craft. Do not use an unseaworthy boat. Do not go on the water when a storm is approaching or when the water is rough. Do not wear boots or other hampering clothing when in a boat. Do not purposely rock a boat or permit horseplay by other boat occupants.

If you are unfortunate enough to capsize stay with the boat. Secure a firm hand-hold and wait for help or drift ashore with the craft. If there art 2 persons when the boat capsizes, hold hands across the bottom of the boat. If you lose an oar do not jump overboard to retrieve it without first dropping the anchor. The boat may drift away faster than you can swim. Never stand up in the boat to hoist anchor. Do not put a large motor on a small boat.

There are no finer sports than swimming, boating, and fishing, and everyone can enjoy these pleasures safely if good judgement is exercised.

Entertained At Dinner

Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Dulmes entertained to dinner Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fuss, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lawhorn and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson. Canasta was played after dinner.

Honored On Birthday

Myrna Barz was ten years old Monday, June 11th and her mother planned a nice birthday party for her. They had a wennie roast at the fire place, and the thirteen little girls enjoyed the birthday cake and ice cream. Games were played. The grandmother, Mrs. Fred Barz, and Mrs. Walter Rosendahl and Iris, who is a nurse from Des Moines were also guests. Myrna received many nice gifts to help her remember the day.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Almost 500,000 casualties in America's 1950 automobile accidents were the direct result of speeding. One out of every three Americans who lost their lives in last year's traffic accidents died because someone was driving too fast.

That's why your Iowa Safety Congress says: "Speed Kills! Slow down . . . watch for slow moving vehicles!"

With summer well on its way, highways are crowded with vacation and holiday drivers eager to get to their destinations. At the same time, many more slow moving farm vehicles must use the roads to get from field to field.

Allow plenty of time for your trip so you don't have to hurry. Slow down for these slower tractors and wagons, and above all, don't try to pass them on hills or curves.

Remember: At 30 miles per hour it normally takes 77 feet to come to a full stop—after you have seen danger. At 60 miles per hour it takes 263 feet . . . almost four times the distance.

So, take your time and you'll have plenty of it left to enjoy!

KLEMME TIMES PUBLISHING PAPER FOR STANHOPE

F. E. Beshey, of Garner, last week started a new newspaper at Stanhope, Iowa, The Stanhope News.

As there is no newspaper plant at Stanhope, Mr. Beshey is having his new paper printed in Klemme at the Times plant

The first issue of the Stanhope News was an 8 page, 7-column paper well filled with advertising and lots of news.

Gene Kluckhohn, former boy of Klemme, is in the grocery business at Stanhope and is also Mayor of the town. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kluckhohn, a fact which makes the new paper of more than passing interest in Klemme.

The new paper goes on all the routes around Stanhope on Friday morning. In order to publish the two papers, it is quite necessary that all news and advertising should be sent or brought to The Times not later than Tuesday, please, as it taxes the capacity of The Times plant to publish two complete newspapers each week along with the vast amount of commercial printing which goes through the plant each week.

DAIRY MONTH PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, this state is profoundly interested in the health and strength of its citizens, in its economic welfare, and in its mobiliziation program; and

WHEREAS, milk is recognized of vital and increasing importance to universal well-being; and as nature's most nearly perfect food; and

WHEREAS, the preservation and improvement of the vast American dairy industry, with 10 million Americans wholly dependent upon it and its allied industries for livelihood, are of interest to all Americans as a matter of practical living, and indirectly are of priceless interest to the peoples of the whole world; and

WHEREAS, the dairy industry annually observes the month of June as a period in which the health and life-giving values of milk and dairy products may be emphasized, because June is the month when Nature's bounty is most abundant and our dairy herds achieve their greatest and best production;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Wm. S. Beardsley, Governor of the State of Iowa, in full appreciation of the opportunities herein presented for constructive public service, even in the name of humanity, do hereby proclaim the period of June, 1951, as and do urge civic business associations to cooperate in its observance, both in public and in private, in order to increase our appreciation of milk and dairy products, to the end that our health may be improved, our financial well-being increased, and our Great Giver expressed.

(SEAL)

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the State of Iowa. Done at Des Moines this twenty-second day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-one; of the State of Iowa the One Hundred Fourth, and of the Independence of the United States the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Herman Shelby had a remarkable talent. He could make a railroad track disappear.

He's been doing it or years; those years when, through hard work and a sound business sense, he came to own a number of farms up in his part of the country.

When Herman half-way retired and moved to town, he still made weekly trip out to see his tenants. And he never lost his knack for making that railroad track disappear.

Of course, he couldn't make the whole track vanish - just that part where the gravel road crossed it. He didn't consciously try to make the crossing disappear, and he couldn't do it for anyone but himself.

For the secret of Herman's trick was habit. He had crossed the track in the same place so many times that he simply didn't see it anymore. It had become just another part of the landscape, a part that didn't seem to need any special consideration.

One afternoon, Herman visited a tenant. Leaning over the gate, they talked business. When Herman left, the farmer watched him drive toward the crossing. He also saw and heard a train approaching, for at that crossing there is clear visibility for 2000 yards on either side.

He had to stand there and watch as his old friend drove, without reducing speed, directly into the path of the train. Later investigation showed that Shelby had not even applied his brakes.

That afternoon, long habit and a mind on business let Herman Shelby make the crossing and even the train disappear.

The train, of course, did as much for Herman Shelby.

FIRST BAND CONCERT DREW LARGE CROWD OF LISTENERS

The Klemme School Band directed by the new band master, Charles Whitford, made their first appearance in a series of summer concerts here Saturday night. The band played a good program of variety music that was well received by the large crowd of listeners.

Director Whitford made a favorable appearance and is to be congratulated on his first concert. The band will play concerts each Saturday night during the summer.

The Klemme band was among some 80 other bands at the North Iowa Band Festival at Mason City Tuesday and compared very favorably with the best bands in the long parade.

PAYS TRACTOR DRIVER TO HEED SAFETY RULES

The person most likely to be injured in an accident involving a tractor on the highway is the driver of the tractor, according to Norval Wardle, extension safety specialist at Iowa State College.

He points out that of the 19 fatalities in tractor accidents on Iowa roads in 1949, 18 were the tractor drivers. The other fatality was a pedestrian. This indicates that tractor drivers are mostly looking after their own necks when they observe safety rules on the highways.

There were a total of 296 accidents involving tractors on highways in Iowa in 1949, according to a study made that year. Wardle figures that there were about the same number last year. Nineteen involved fatalities, 98 non-fatal injuries, and 179 property damage alone.

The most dangerous type of accident with a tractor on the highway is overturning or running off the roadway, according to Wardle. However, the most common kind of tractor accident is collision with another motor vehicle. More than 90 percent of the accidents were collisions with another vehicle. More than 70 percent of these collisions were accounted for by collisions at intersections, sideswiping, or hitting the slow-moving tractor in the rear.

Wardle lists four rules for safely operating tractors on highways (1) Observe all rules of the road, including signals. This includes driving on the right side of the road, and having two white headlights on the front and at least one red tail light on the rear of the tractor and other equipment. (2) Be courteous— if traffic piles up behind, move onto the shoulder if possible. Never just move the right wheel onto the shoulder and leave the left wheel on the roadway or pavement. (3) Put a 12-inch-square red flag on a pole which extends 8 to 10 feet above road surfaces. Fasten this to the tractor to attract attention of motorists to a slow-moving vehicle. (4) Allow only persons with regular drivers' licenses to drive on public roads.

Cooperative Oil Station Dressed Up In New Paint

A crew of painters were at work the past week painting the trim at the Hancock County Cooperative Oil Co. station in Klemme. The gasoline pumps and other equipment were also repainted.

The new paint job adds to the attractive appearance of the station.

Celebrated Birthday With Picnic Dinner Sunday

Sunday, June 10th, was William Dean Arnold's 4th birthday. The Elmer and Roy Arnold families enjoyed a picnic dinner in the Arnold Park.

Bill was very thrilled with his birthday cake and gifts. Bruce Arnold of Rock Island, Illinois was present for the occasion.

Honor Edward Barz At Súpper

All of the Barz and Hartbeck relation that live in this community and Dr. and Mrs. Voetberg and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Barz of Garner, and Rev. Jaberg and family and his sister Ruth gathered at the Klemme Public school basement Friday evening for a family get together in honor of Edward Barz, who reports back to camp this week Thursday.

All enjoyed the supper together, and the evening was spent in visiting.

KLEMME CHURCH IS SETTING OF HUMMEL-GOLL MARRIAGE JUNE 3

Miss Beulah Goll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Goll of Klemme, and Leland Hummel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hummel of Garner, Route 4, were married in the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church June 3rd, where the Rev. Vernon Jaberg read the double ring ceremony.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. William Rhinehart, organist, who also accompanied Miss JoAnn Hummel, cousin of the bridegroom, who sang. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Elizabeth Goll was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Marie Perkins and Miss Esther Mae Hartbeck. Mary Jaberg served as ring bearer and Judy Rasmus was flower girl.

The bridegroom's attendants were Caroll Albers as bestman, Darwin Wille and Luverne Schmidt. Ushers were Marvin Schmidt and Wilbert Neuhring. Lyle Goll and Ronald Hummel acted as candlelighters.

Following the ceremony, a reception for approximately 200 guests was held in the church parlor.

Monday evening a large number of young folks drove to the Paul Goll farm where they gave the newlyweds a big charivari which produced the wanted treats for the crowd.

Mrs. And Mrs. Raymond Wille Entertained At Picnic Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wille and daughters of near Meservey entertained at a picnic dinner Sunday in honor of Pvt. and Mrs. Glenn Wille who will be leaving Monday for Georgia, where he will be stationed.

Those present beside Pvt. and Mrs. Wille were Mrs. Marie Wille and Darwin, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Blanchet and family, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blumer, Glenn and Marlene all of Klemme, Mrs. Russel Bailey of Britt, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Blumer of Ames. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rockow and family of Garner were afternoon visitors.

The Pig Won The Argument!

Melvin Schlei is on crutches as the result of an argument with a pig! It seems Melvin came out only second best with a badly bruised leg and some cuts when he tried to body block a pig that wanted to go the other way.

Ever try to stop a pig when he really wants to go in a certain direction? Well don't. The pig will win every time as Mel discovered.

Hartbeck Re-Union

The big Hartbeck re-union was held Tuesday, June 12th, at Waverly, Iowa. All gathered in the park for a big picnic dinner. Those from Klemme who attended were the Fred Barz families, the Les Hartbeck families and Esther Barz families.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kaduce of Klemme are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl, born Wednesday, June 6th at Forest City hospital. She weighed 8½ pounds.

A DREAM COMES TRUE

Unique Village Is Constructed On Plains South of Chicago

A dream is coming true for two men of vision on what, a little more than three years ago, was nothing but 2,400 acres of corn fields and grasslands 27 miles south of Chicago. Their dream is taking shape in the form of one of America's most unusual communities which already has a population of 13,000.

The community—now an incorporated village—is the first ever built in America (and, perhaps, in all the world) from a master plan which describes, situates and integrates not only houses and apartments, but also schools, hospital, churches, shopping center, recreation areas and industrial site.

It is called Park Forest, Illinois It is expected to have about 30,000 population, the majority of them children—for it is a place where children are wanted—in two to three more years when the building program is completed.

One of the most remarkable advances in the building industry and in community planning, Park Forest was basically the idea of Philip M. Klutzick, an Omaha attorney who was commissioner of public housing during World War II, and Nathan Manilow, the biggest private builder of homes in the Chicago area.

These two, with other associates who joined them in the idea later, formed American Community Builders, Inc., for the purpose of putting up a super-modern American city which would serve the needs of young families in the middle-income range and which would fill not only their housing requirements, but also their intellectual, spiritual and recreational wants

Backed by money put up by three insurance companies, Klutznick and Manilow have gone far beyond the usual "subdivision" conception of building which normally provides only for housing and lets the other necessities of living and community integration take care of themselves.

Park Forest today contains 3,010 rental apartments in groups of two, four, six and eight residences per unit. Each apartment has its own private entrances, lawn and community "tot-yard" in the rear. These are now fully occupied by most of the 13,000 village residents.

OVER AND ABOVE the rental units are the first of what will be 5,000 to 5,500 houses-for-sale—largely two- and three-bedroom ranch houses, each on a lot of at least 60 feet of frontage. These houses are selling for from $500 to $2,500 less than comparable houses anywhere in the Chicago metropolitan area because of cost reductions made possible by mass purchase and construction of materials.

There are now 25 stores and shops in the shopping center of the village, and there is room for 75 more. The center, situated around a grassy "mall," has wide sidewalks shielded by permanent, all-weather canopies to protect the shopper from the elements.

The first of eight schools and eight churches are now nearing completion, and a hospital and a segregated industrial area are next to be developed.

Heated exclusively by natural gas, the village is smoke-free. Even the industrial area will use gas.

Curvilinear streets, a $1,000,000 water-softening system, complete sewerage and drainage facilities, and huge public recreational areas are among the other attributes of the new village.

Most of the heads-of-family are employed in Chicago, from which Park Forest is situated 45 minutes by commuter train. Average age of the adult population is strikingly low—a mere 29. Family income averages $5,800 a year.

Perhaps the progressive spirit of the community can best be typified in two of its buildings—the motion picture theater and the supermarket. The theater seats 1,100 and not only shows movies, but also features art shows, afternoon teas, free coffee and snacks and a soundproof "cry room" for discontented small fry.

The supermarket is one of the world's largest. It has a unique, high speed telephonic check-out system and conveyor belts which whisk the patron's groceries from check-out counter to the point where they are assembled for sacking or boxing. The customer is out of the store in an average of about 50 seconds from the time she wheels her grocery-laden cart to the check-out counter.

As might be expected, Klutznick, who is president, and Manilow, treasurer, of ACB, have already been asked to undertake the building of similar communities in several other areas in the country. To do so would require a gargantuan outlay of energy and capital—but they're thinking about it.

THE ANNUAL POLL of Woman's Home Companion readers has given movie producers something to think about—Clark Gable was voted the most popular male star. Last year he was fourth, he never has been higher than third. Bing Crosby, first for the last five years, came in second. Why the Gable popularity all of a sudden? It's not surprising that Bette Davis, June Allyson and Irene Dunne were rated in that order; they've all been seen in good pictures since a year ago, Bette and Irene in especially good roles. James Stewart came in third, Spencer Tracy fourth; John Wayne, the box offices' darling, was fifth in the poll.

Lucille Wall, who receives so many nominations for her "Woman of the Week" spot on "Portia Faces Life", got one from a youngster suggesting her mother—"the best Mommie in the whole world". Lucille's accepted the suggestion.

THE FICTION CORNER

HARD BOILED CHUCK

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

CHUCK WALLACE was hard boiled Women didn't bother him much. Flying did He owned his own plane and specialized in doing free-lance jobs for private interests, and performing rescues for reward money. He had quite a reputation When, at the annual pilots' ball, he was presented to red-headed Alma Mallory he wasn't impressed at all.

Alma was. She had heard of Chuck. Alma was very modern, very sure of herself, used to getting what she wanted. She wanted Chuck.

Chuck wasn't quick to catch on. When finally he realized what she was up to he had almost fallen into her trap. He was glad when news came in that a young flyer had been lost in the north woods. It gave him a chance to get away. The fact that the young lost flyer was Don Mallory, Alma's brother, didn't bother him at all. This was business. Old Man Mallory, through his lawyers, had offered a fat reward.

Chuck Wallace loaded up and took off the next morning in his seaplane. That night he set down on a little wooded lake, 150 miles from the nearest habitation, and established a base. The next day he began systematically to comb the country.

In the afternoon he returned to his base, and received a shock. There was another plane riding on the surface of the lake. He saw a figure standing on the shore. It was Alma Mallory.

"What's the idea?" he asked.

Alma was very modern, very sure of herself, used to getting what she wanted. And she wanted Chuck.

"What do you think? Don's my brother."

She had brought along a lot of the things Chuck hadn't thought necessary. There was nothing he could do about her being there, so he set up one of the tents and ate the supper she cooked for him.

The next day he flew west and covered a strip 25 miles wide. But he didn't sight anything, and was genuinely worried when he returned to the base that night.

THE next morning, just before noon, he sighted a plane on a lake 50 miles east of his base and set down, taxing up beside it. A man stood on one of the wings and called to him. Chuck scowled. He didn't like this. Not a bit of it. . .

At 2 o'clock he returned to his base and found it deserted. Alma and her plane had gone. He swore and packed up his equipment. The next morning he reached his home landing. He went home and shaved and bathed and got into bed. He was dead tired, but he couldn't sleep.

The next morning he took a taxi to the Mallory home and asked for Alma. A butler told him that she had gone down to Briarsfield to visit friends. The friends' name was Hanscom. Chuck caught a train for Briarsfield that afternoon. He arrived at 5 o'clock and located the Hanscom home. Alma, they told him, was out horseback riding with a chap named Rodney Nuys

Chuck rented a horse and went looking for her. Two miles from the Hanscom home he came to a spot where the bridle trail widened There were two horses in the clearing, standing close together. Rodney Nuys was trying to kiss the rider of the other, a red-headed girl

Chuck rode up close and clipped the gent so hard he fell out of the saddle. Then he grabbed hold of the girl and shook her roughly.

"What's the idea?" he barked. "I found your brother in a little lake 50 miles east of the base. He was looking for us. He said he didn't think it was so smart for his sister to give out that he was lost, when he really wasn't—just so she could send Chuck Wallace up into the country and then follow. What's the idea?"

Alma looked at him defiantly "What do you think?" she said. "You big indifferent lummox! And why do you think I gave up and came home?"

Chuck blinked, but maintained his hold on her arm. For the first time when looking at this girl, he grinned. "Do you want me to tell you what I think?" he asked.

"Yes," said Alma.

Re-Armament Costs Average Family Budget $2,000

By Wright A. Patterson

SIXTY BILLION DOLLARS does not seem a great sum, if you say it quickly, as Truman says it when he asks congress to provide that amount for rearmament.

But those who must dig it up start to figure what it means to them and their families. They find it amounts to $2,000 each family must pay just to meet the President's rearmament figure. That is a lot of money for each family budget to supply.

The President is never sure of the figures he sends to congress He is inclined to take the word of those in the armed services. They guess at the cost, take all they can get and make it do the job

We, the families who actually must do the paying, live in hope that those we have sent to Washington will look after our interests and cut the costs to the lowest possible amount.

Our senators and representatives should not be allowed to forget that we depend upon them for some careful figuring. They should not accept as accurate the guesses of some cabinet officer or department head with exaggerated ideas of costs.

We want a reduction, not a continued increase, in the bureaucratic army. We will pay for what is necessary, but we won't provide for many special home front projects we can do without while Joe Stalin is staring us in the face.

We will pay the $2,000 per family directly and indirectly—from the family wallet in taxes or in the form of increased taxes on commodities.

Our senators and representa tives will tell us they are charging most of the bill to corporations But the corporations will pass that added cost to the consumers

We pay We know we pay We shouldn't let Washington get away with the idea it is fooling us We will pay what is needed to defeat the Communists, but we do not want to pay an excess on guesses made by the heads of our government.

—*—

The President has given us economy talk, but no action. We now turn to congress to turn off the faucets of excessive spending Congress can do the job by stopping appropriations—if it will. Not appropriations for armament, but for home projects we can do without and for those thousands of bureaucrats, whose only value lies in their votes. If congress won't give us the relief we seek, there will be an "or else," and we will send to Washington those who say they will do what we ask.

In his testimoney before the senate investigating committee Gen. MacArthur indicated that one man, and one man only, was responsible for his dismissal. He did not say who, but indicated it was the President. If that be the case Harry S. Truman has but a few more months in which to exercise his not-brief-enough authority, or to exercise his known impetuosity. In the meantime he might use both on some less valuable members of those he has appointed to public office.

It is about time he took seriously the appointment of men to positions of public trust and not appoint them for political or personal reasons only. He should not let impetuosity and expediency rule his sense of service

—*—

Dean Acheson will be known to history as the world's greatest appeaser, second only to England's Chamberlain

—*—

The President says we "must pay as we go." To do so he draws on the bank accounts of the people, when taxes do not come in fast enough

—*—

If Stalin does not want to fight this year, we will again disarm and await his pleasure.

—*—

To let them forget, it will be well to keep the MacArthur evidence as far from the people as possible.

—*—

It will take much longer for Douglas MacArthur, an old soldier, to fade away into oblivion than will be true of the President who broke him.

Wonder whom the Republicans can name with which to lose in 1952?

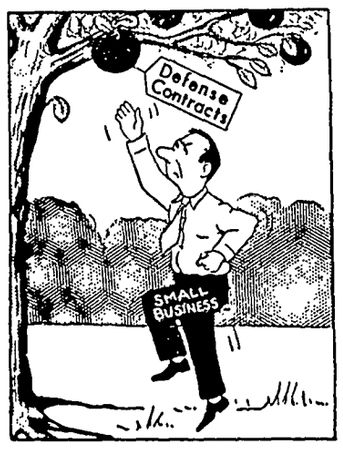
Small Business Casualty of Defense; Meat Price Rules Confuse Consumer

THE FOUNDATION THREATENED—According to several national economic surveys made public in the last week or so, small business is becoming a casualty of defense. This is a serious and frightening fact for thousands of small towns, because about 3,670,000 small businesses form the foundation of the American economic pyramid, many of them located in the home towns of the nation.

In the first two years of World War II, 16 per cent of the small businesses of the country were forced to close down. There are reports that many observers believe the fatality rate in the present defense mobilization program may be even higher than in those years.



A Washington report revealed that congressional small business committees are receiving an average of 500 letters a day appealing for information and help from small businessmen.

Several reasons are given for the present difficulties. The most important are shortages of materials—allocation of steel, aluminum, etc., from civilian consumption to defense projects; the inability of small business to qualify for defense contracts; and the expansion of big business to avoid subcontracting, formally a profitable source for small business.

UP A TREE—Mild mannered, popular Gen. Omar Bradley, remembered by thousands of World War II veterans in the home towns of America as the "GI's general," put the combined senate armed services and foreign relations committees up a tree during his testimony on the removal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his Pacific commands.

To begin with, General Bradley caused a stir among the Republican members of the committees by upholding the administration's actions with the sweeping statement that General MacArthur's Korean plans "would involve us in the wrong war, at the wrong place, at the wrong time, and with the wrong enemy."

But when he flatly refused to tell the senators about his private talks with the President on the recall of MacArthur, he chased the committees up a tree.

For a day committee members argued among themselves whether they should take some kind of contempt action against the general. They voted 18 to 8, however, against such action expressing the view that it might set a dangerous precedent.

To the home town veteran, however, it seemed more likely the senators remembered Gen. Bradley's popularity with the men that make up a big part of today's Main Street population.

NEW DRAFT LAW—Senate and house conferees, attempting to reach a compromise on the two bills previously passed by the groups, finally reached a settlement calling for extension of the draft until July 1, 1955, with men of 18½ eligible for induction for 24 months of service.

The old draft bill expires July 1 The new one will require all men to register on becoming 18. They would be examined and classified before they were 18½ and would be eligible for induction thereafter, providing the pool of men from 19 to 26 in their individual draft districts had been exhausted by the local boards.

The bill will put a five million person ceiling on the combined army, navy, air forces and marines. It also requires that all draftees, volunteers, and reserves have at least four months' basic training before being assigned outside the United States.

UP TO OLD TRICKS—After rejecting American plans for a peace treaty with Japan, the Russians reverted to their old tricks in proposing their version of a treaty. The Soviet plan, which was rejected by the United States, would bar foreign forces from Japan after the occupation ends and thereby block an arrangement for American troops to help provide Japanese security.

It was the same type of thing the Russians so successfully carried out in Korea and which led to the present situation in Asia. No one can believe the Russians thought the United States would accept their plan, but one has to give them credit for having the nerve to suggest it.

There is little possibility now of Russia joining in the American peace treaty which is nearing conclusion.

BEWILDERED HOUSEWIVES—Home town housewives entered their Main Street stores and meat markets on Monday, May 14, without their usual dread of visiting a meat counter. The government had just ordered a cut in meat prices

After one quick look she became a startled and confused housewife. For the next 10 days she became more bewildered. Meat prices were not down according to her figures—but up!

What the home town housewife saw was porterhouse steak up 7 cents a pound and sirloin up 9 cents. Round steak was down 2 cents—not enough to mention, and short ribs of beef down 8 cents—as she had expected of other cuts.

According to the government, however, the up and down price juggling of beef actually produced an over-all savings to the housewife of one-half of 1 per cent.

This she couldn't understand. One-half of 1 per cent didn't do a thing for her meat budget.

FAIR TRADE RULING—By a vote of 6-to-3, the supreme court ruled that merchants who did not sign fair-trade agreements are free to charge cut-rate prices if they wish.

Under the laws of 45 states, distributors of trade-mark or brand goods may enter into agreements with retail dealers to sell their products at filed minimum prices. Under the new court ruling, however, the home town merchant who did not sign such a contract or agreement can sell the product at whatever price he desires.

The only states not having fair-trade laws are Vermont, Texas, and Missouri

The ruling will have little effect on most classes of merchandise as long as business is good, most Main Street businessmen believe. This would not hold true, however, if business went into a slump.

LAND BOOM OF 1950

Farm Mortgage Debt Up 8 Per Cent

The agriculture department reported recently the land boom of 1950 boosted the farm real-estate debt 8 per cent, totaling $5,800,000,000 at the end of the year. Likewise, the rising demand and increased prices for farm commodities led farmers to add to their non-real-estate debt. They borrowed heavily to buy additional equipment and machinery.

The department said the real-estate-mortgage debt, however, was only 54 per cent of the record reached in 1923. Twelve states have a higher mortgage debt than in the peak year of 1923. These are New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana and New Mexico.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

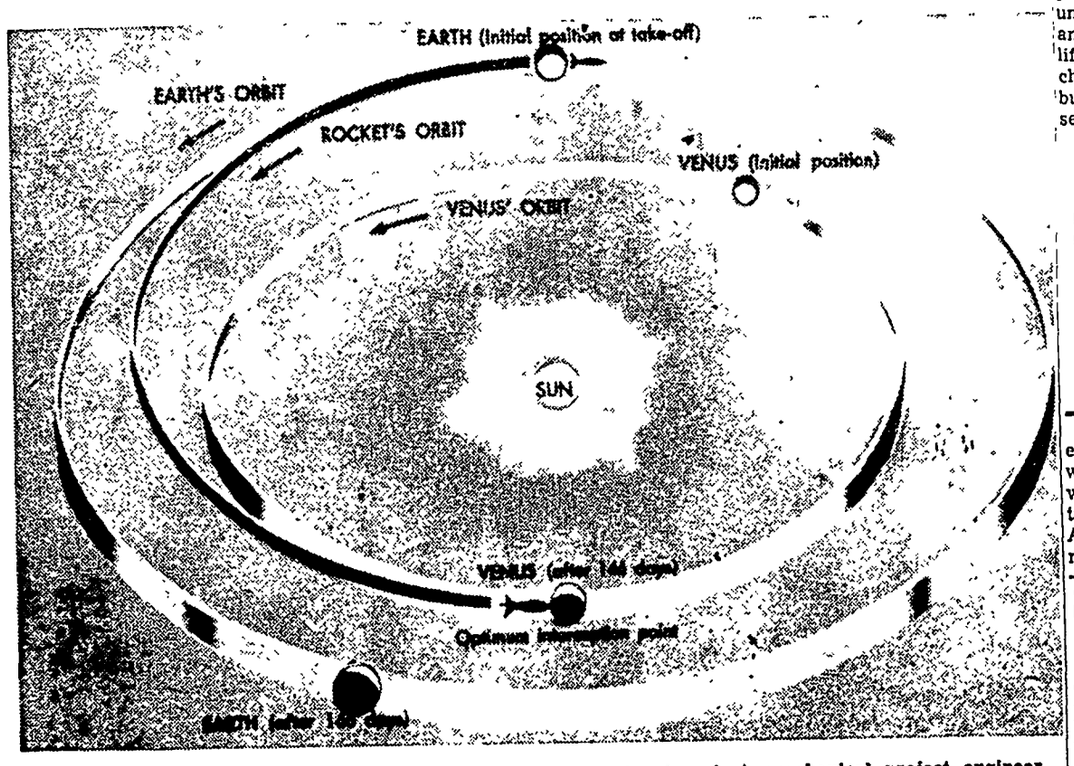
TRAIN TAKES NOSEDIVE . . . A supply train of the Communists plunges into a river through a bridge in North Korea. The bridge was just destroyed by B-26 light bombers of the fifth air force. The Communist train emerged from the tunnel (background) just after the huge span had been destroyed by the bombs. There was not enough time for it to stop to avoid plunging into the water. Photo of the mishap of the Red's train was taken by Staff Sergeant Gerald W. Raymond, Los Angeles, Calif. He is an aerial gunner whose hobby is snapping pictures instead of triggers.



PLOTTED ROUTE TO VENUS . . . John Wuerth, young Los Angeles electromechanical project engineer, has come up with a proposed space ship flight to Venus. His calculations are graphically portrayed. He would leave earth at the equator at a speed two times as great as gravity until reaching speed of 25,600 miles per hour in 13 minutes. This speed would enable space ship to escape into outer space, where it would become like a planet itself with a speed of 5,400 miles per hour. After 146 days of following its orbit, it would intercept Venus, Wuerth calculates.

STIFF SENTENCES . . . Iluminade Calonge (with glasses) gives Communist salute as she leaves Manila, P.I., courthouse after being sentenced to death. Handcuffed to her is Josefina Adelan, co-defendant, who received sentence of 10 years imprisonment. Both young women were among 29 Filipinos on trail for Communist activities. Six received death sentences. Miss Calonge was go-between for the Huks to Moscow and the Soviet.

QUEEN OF SPORTS . . . Penn University's Caroline Labrum proves queens of sports can be queens of beauty. She is daughter of secretary to Bert Bell, pro grid czar. She excells in basketball, hockey and studies.

DECOLLETE PRINCESS . . . Quite a furore was reported in the British royal family over a Parisian gown made for Princess Margaret. It was reported that the dowager queen and Queen Elizabeth had put down the royal foot on the gown as too revealing. But here, the princess (center) wears the strapless creation as she attends a benefit ball. She chats with her sister, Princess Elizabeth (second from right), and Lord Louis Mountbatten.

BEACH NOVELTY . . . Giuliana Gazdini, Rome beauty, is the first to use a cute Italian back scratcher. It is fashioned like a hand, made of plastic, and does away with "Please scratch my back" requests.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Suicide Often Expresses Anger

By Lawrence Gould

Is suicide a form of murder?

Answer: Certainly. In at least one language, German, it is called "self-murder" (Selbst-mord). A person does not kill himself because he is sad and discouraged, but because his sadness and discouragement have made him murderously angry and there is no one but himself on whom his fears or moral scruples will allow him to vent his rage Suicide is most frequent in people who have been brought up under tyrannically strict discipline and in whom frustration in adult life re-awakens the rage which in childhood they felt at their parents, but later "displaced" onto themselves.

May benzedrine create a "craving"?

Answer: As is true of other drugs, even including the narcotics, this will depend on how fundamentally well-balanced you are. In the Detroit State Medical Journal. Dr F. A. Freyhan says that people whose moods do not interfere with their capacity for work feel no marked psychological effects from taking benzedrine. But people who suffer from moods of sluggishness and fatigue in which they "can't seem to get going" find that benzedrine makes them cheerful, energetic and productive, and may develop an unhealthy craving for it.

Are "spastics" feeble-minded?

Answer: Not always, by any means, says a joint bulletin of the U. S. Children's Bureau and Office of Education, Washington, D. C. "Some of them are very bright," and "those who look and act worst sometimes are the brightest." What is now known as "cerebral palsy" is due to brain injury before, during or soon after birth and affects the victim's power to control some functions of his mind or body—most frequently certain types of muscular movements. It is not contagious or inheritable and in many cases can show marked improvement under proper medical and parental care.

Lopat Sets New Earned-Run Record

By GRANTLAND RICE

The Futile Assignment

It is all very well to have stood with the greats,
To have gathered your garlands
of fame.
It is all very well to have outbucked the fates,
To have reached for a headliner's name.

But when you are slipping—as everyone does—
And the dirge has supplanted
the sonnet;
Remember how quickly a name
gathers fuzz—
Don't try to get anything on it.

New York—The next essay should be turned in the general direction of one Edmund Lopat, a left-handed pitcher with the Yankees. Ed Lopat won his first six games, but actually his record is better than that. In an era where any pitcher who permits less than 3 earned runs each season is a hero, Lopat permitted an earned-run average of .60 in his first five games, an all-time record as far as we can excavate into the past.

Grantland Rice

Lopat is another rare character in a new form. He is one of the few living citizens who was born in New York City. This happy event, for the Yankees, took place in June, 1918, just 33 years ago.

In spite of his brilliant start, life this year was not all milk and honey for left-hander Lopat. Eddie started as a first baseman with Greensburg in the Pennsylvania State League, then moved to Jeanerette, deep in the bush, in 1937. That was some 14 years ago. He worked with Jeanerette, Kilgore, Shreveport, Longview, Marshall, Salina, Oklahoma City, and Little Rock before he finally reached the White Sox in 1944. He won 11 and dropped 10 for the White Sox that year, a rare achievement any season while pitching for the White Sox.

Starting the 1951 campaign Lopat has won 100 and lost 78 games for a winning average of .562. It is a much better average now with his 1951 start.

Lefty Lopat is now thinking of writing a book called "Life Begins at 33." In this three years with the Yankees, up to 1951, Lopat has won 50 games up through 1950 and lost only 29. He waited 13 pro seasons before getting the best start he has ever known. Last season Lopat won 18 and lost 8 for his best record to date. Unless someone starts throwing hand grenades, 1951 should be by all odds his best year.

Two Records to Match

In checking Eddie Lopat's amazing 1951 record, plus the record of other stars, we pause at the marks set by one Grover Cleveland Alexander, plus another set of marks established by Walter Johnson.

In 1915 Alexander's earned-run mark was 1 22. It was 1.55 in 1916 and 1.83 in 1917. After the war Alex gave the game 1 72 in 1919 and 1.91 in 1920. Here were five years where Alexander allowed less than two earned runs a game, working over 400 innings each year.

He had been yanked away from his game for a year, joining the army in 1917, or he might easily have set a league-leadership mark for six consecutive years.

In 1912 the American League had no earned run average or Johnson might have set a new mark. That was one of his greatest seasons. But in 1913 he had an average of 1.14 per game, 1.71 in 1914, 1.55 in 1915, 1.89 in 1916, 1.28 in 1918 and 1 55 in 1919.

Here were eleven years of great pitching by two of the games best—Alexander and Johnson, Old Pete and Big Barney. No one can expect Lopat to match marks of this type in the modern era when pitchers who allows less than three earned runs are regarded as having a touch of magic.

Early Wynn of Cleveland led all A.L. pitchers last season with the chubby mark of 3.20, a long hop from Johnson's 1.14. The big slump in pitching skill or the arrival of the rubber ball took place in 1921. Since then only Hal Newhouser, Carl Hubbell, Howie Pollet and Mort Cooper have operated under the two-earned run count.

Where the People Go

NEW YORK, May—It may, or it may not, interest you to know where your fellow human beings go in searching for a favorite sport. Also just how the trend is today—whether up or whether down. We might as well start with baseball, the most harassed of sports by television's savage invasion.

In 1949 major league baseball drew 20,215,365 people. The minors were healthy with television just warming up.

In 1950 major league baseball drew 17,462,977 fans, with the minors skidding badly. Baseball, or rather major league baseball, lost over 2,000,000 patrons in a year.

New Drug Slows Blood Clotting

By Dr. James W. Barton

NONE OF US is surprised any more when we read of someone who has suffered a heart stroke (coronary thrombosis) at middle age, or even younger. Figures show that about one-half of all deaths are due to diseases of the heart and blood vessels. It is only natural, therefore, that research workers, physicians in active practice and others working in laboratories have been searching for methods of preventing these deaths

Why do apparently healthy men and women have attacks of coronary thrombosis?

In most cases, it is because the blood clots too rapidly and this clot of blood obstructs the tissues of necessary organs, especially in heart, brain and lungs. If the blood did not clot, the individual would bleed to death. This disease is known as hemophilia. However the blood clotting in organs where it should not clot is just as serious.

At the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Pathologists, Dr. Shepard Shapiro, of the New York University school of medicine, forecast large-scale extension of a life-saving treatment using the anitcoagulant drugs in the treatment of coronary thrombosis through the discovery of a new testing material called simplastin which is used in making tests of blood clotting time. Anticoagulant drugs prevent blood from clotting. These drugs are highly effective in the prevention and control of thrombosis (clotting within blood vessels) and the formation of an embolus (piece of clot entering the blood circulation - coronary thrombosis, pulmonary embolism and thrombophlebitis).

The anticoagulant drugs interfere with clotting by reducing the amount of prothrombin in the blood. Prothrombin is necessary for clotting.

To follow the effect of the anticoagulant drug and to administer it with safety to the patient, daily tests of the activity of prothrombin must be made.

NONFAT DRY MILK ADDS NOURISHMENT TO BAKING

Budget-conscious home-makers are taking a tip from commercial food processors, according to reports of the American Dry Milk Institute. By using dry milk solids in increasing volume, they are adding substantially to the nutritional value of cooking and baking.

More than 500 million pounds of non-fat dry milk solids were sold in the United States in 1950, the Institute reports—a gain of 10 7%. The bulk of dry milk solids goes into commercial channels, for use in dairy, meat, bakery, and confectionery products.

Gain of 283%

Consumer purchases of nonfat dry milk solids, in convenient retail packages, almost tripled in 1950, showing a 283% gain Dairy experts predict that home use of dry milk products will increase even more rapidly as retail outlets are expanded

Dry milk is packed with food value It has all the protein, milk-sugar, and minerals found in fluid skim milk, and a high amount of riboflavin—one of the essential B vitamins And it's concentrated In each cup of dry milk there's enough calcium to supply the daily needs and enough protein and riboflavin for over half the daily requirements.

Convenient To Use

Convenience of using dry milk is one of its very important advantages It keeps well at normal kitchen temperatures when stored in a tightly sealed jar It takes little shelf space. In very hot weather it may be refrigerated. It can be restored to fluid state simply by adding water, and one pound makes a gallon of fluid skim milk.

Dry milk can be used in most recipes that call for fluid milk, by mixing the milk powder and water to make the required amount of fluid milk . . . so you need no "special" recipes for using dry milk in cooking, but here are a few hints for adding nutrition to your own favorite recipes:

Breads, cakes, cookies, biscuits, pancakes and waffles—Mix 2 tablespoonfuls of dry milk into each cup of flour before adding liquid.

Meat balls, hamburgers and sausage—Mix 4 tablespoonfuls of dry milk with each pound of ground meat.

Cooked cereals—Mix 4 tablespoonfuls of dry milk with each cup of cereal before cooking.

Gravy, white sauce and cream soups—Use 3 tablespoonfuls of dry milk with each cup of milk or other liquid.

Custard, rice pudding, junket and cocoa—Add 3 tablespoonfuls of dry milk to each cup of milk used.

LIST MEASURES TO PREVENT BLOATING

Cattle Too Hungry Are Ones Usually Bothered

Bloat in cattle always becomes a problem when cattle are turned onto lush pastures from drylots. It is caused by an excess accumulation of gasses in the rumen, according to Dr. John Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College. Some of these gases are toxic and an animal may die from their effect.

Bloat is usually brought about by rapid changes in diet and the ingestion of large amounts of feed. Changing cattle from dry feed to pasture, turning hungry cattle onto pasture, or pasturing after a heavy dew may cause bloat. Cattle suffering from diseases often bloat.

Feed Hay, Grain

There are several ways to prevent bloat when cows are turned on pasture. Herrick suggests giving the cows a full feed of hay and grain before they are turned out. Then they'll be less likely to gorge themselves with the green feed.

Another way is to put the cattle out on the pasture for a short time at first and then gradually increase the period. This will allow the cattle to become accustomed to the feed gradually.

It is also a good idea to feed the cattle hay while they are on pasture.

Keep water and salt before the cattle all the time. Don't let cows drink a lot of water after they have come in from pasture.

If They Bloat

If animals do bloat, Herrick recommends keeping them moving. A bit or stick placed crosswise in their mouths will stimulate belching and allow the toxic gases to escape. Keeping the front feet of the animal elevated will also help.

Use the trocar or knife only as a last resort to open the paunch, Herrick says. Home remedies such as excessive amounts of kerosene and turpentine should be avoided. They are apt to injure the animal's stomach permanently.

It is better to call a veterinarian who will use a stomach tube on bloated animals. This allows gases to escape while antiferments are administered through the tube. This is better than sticking the animal.

COWS DON'T WORRY! JUST KEEP EATING!

A cow can't produce milk on a reducing diet . . she needs plenty of good food! And she keeps her four stomachs busy most of the time. Here are some of the things she eats in a year:

2 tons of hay.
1½ tons of concentrates, filled with vitamins.
2½ tons of silage.
150 days of grass in the pasture. And it keeps a million men busy—full time—doing the chores to keep America's 25 million dairy cows producing. actually 5 million men work part time.

DRINK MORE MILK FOR BETTER HEALTH

"The land of milk and honey" could describe Iowa. In this state about three billion quarts of milk are produced each year. During June, the national dairy month, the Iowa State Department of Health emphasizes the importance of drinking milk.

Even though Iowa has an abundance of milk, figures show that some groups of people are not getting enough for best health. A survey in 1949 of 3,288 rural and town children showed that fifteen percent were dring no milk at all, and only 32 percent were getting enough milk.

The Iowa State Department of Health recommends that each adult drink at least two glasses of milk a day, and each child needs from four to six glasses of milk a day.

Another group of citizens suspected of not drinking enough milk are the elderly folks. Unless the personal physician indicates otherwise, each person in the 50-plus age group needs one pint of milk a day.

Milk is an excellent source of protein needed for building and repairing tissue. A quart of milk supplies about as much protein as seven ounces of steak or four large eggs.

Milk is rich in calcium, the important mineral needed all through life. Another dividend is riboflavin, one of the B vitamins. Milk products provide nearly 50 percent of our supply of riboflavin.

The Iowa State Department of Health recommends that the best milk in view of cost, food value and freedom from disease-producing germs is Grade A pasteurized milk.

Gophers

Doing a little gopher hunting as he planted corn proved unprofitable for Franklin county farmer Lee Hansen. His 410 gauge shot-gun fell from his tractor and discharged after striking the drawbar, the load striking him in the knee. He will be hospitalized several months.

Proud Dad

J. C. Buntin, of Brandon, may have been the "oldest" dad in the state to attend high school graduation exercises. When his son Keith, 16, received his diploma last week, his proud father was in the audience, at the age of 79—a spread of 63 years in age between father and son.

Cornerstone Of Good Living . . . and Good Agriculure

More than 1,777,000 dairy cattle graze on—and enrich—Iowa's farm land. In 1950, milk from Iowa cows produced over $180,000,000 of agricultural income for Iowa. Of this amount, $115,000,000 came from Butter, alone—so naturally, Iowa Butter is a Cornerstone of Good Living.

Dairying in Iowa is a Cornerstone of Good Agriculture, too. Modern dairy farmers recognize the importance of land-use conservation—to preserve and protect our soil heritage. Through dairying, animal by-products from the soil are returned to the soil, increasing the fertility of our land.

We business men in Klemme are vitally interested in Iowa's future farm production, and dairying. We are living in a farming community and we welcome the opportunity to support YOUR June Dairy Month Program.

AROUND IOWA

Descendants

When Mrs. Mike Svoboda of Protivin died recently, she left 57 descendants. She was a native of Bohemia, coming to this country as a child.

52 Years

Knoxville lost its senior business man May 13, in the death of Tone Vanderwilt. He founded a hardware store there in 1889 and had been in business there for 52 years at the time of his death.

Fish

Iowa had lots of rain last week but at Mount Vernon drivers on the highway saw an unusual sight—fish on the highway. Not the damp weather, but the upset of a truck, caused it, however.

Sweet Job

Near Postville, members of the Green family have a sweet business; making maple syrup. The fifth generation of Greens is now making syrup on the E. W. Green farm, a project started by Gibeon Green in 1850.

Pined

Edwin Drake of Walnut had a narrow escape recently, when his tractor overturned, pinning him beneath it in mud and water. He remained conscious and dug his way out.

Held For Burglary

Following the burglary of the bank at Yale, Iowa, Guthrie county officers have arrested an 18-year old Guthrie Center high school sophomore. He has admitted the bank burglary.

Tore It Down

Some students at LeMars were able to do what many a youngster has often wanted to do—tear down the schoolhouse. The LeMars youngsters were part of a wrecking crew which tore down the old vocational school there, to make room for a new one.

Dies In Accident

A. H. Neller, 77, of Fairfield, was killed in an auto accident recently. At the time of the collision, Mr. Neller was on his way to attend his wife's funeral.

Candy In Fish

Bob Myers, Humboldt, reports that catfish like candy bars. In cleaning a fish recently, he found a foil-wrapped candy bar, still intact in the stomach.

Auto Hits Cow

James Overmire, of Emmetsburg, thinks he might be better off at sea. Home on furlough from the navy, he steered his automobile into a cow, near Ayrshire. Damage to the vehicle was around $400.

Lightning Struck Church

A lightning bolt hit St. John's Church in Clarence recently, resulting in considerable damage to the church tower.

Helps Amputees

A former resident of Avoca, Lt. Col. Maurice Fletcher, has developed several gadgets to help amputees lead a more normal life. Fletcher is now director of the army prosthetics laboratory in Washington.

Found Body

The body of Everett Faith, Humboldt, who with his wife was drowned in Lake Mille Lac last November, was found May 6th. Search is still under way for the body of his wife.

Fire

Rock Rapids firemen battled a half-mile of fire there recently. The blaze was set originally to burn flax stubble from a field near the high school but high winds took it out of control.

Wrong Man

Folks at Osceola received word that "Jack Dempsey" was to pass through town on the Burlington and several were on hand to see him. They found Jack Dempsey, all right but not the former champ. The Dempsey on the train said several newspaper folks had boarded the train to see him, the result of a prank of a Denver Post sports writer who sent out the word that "Dempsey" was coming.

GOOD ROTATION IS BIG HELP TO LAND

It Can Also Add More Feed, Increase Income

A well planned crop rotation can help Iowa farmers keep their good land good; it will help build slipping soils back into good ones; it will increase the amount of feed produced per acre.

These are some of the advantages of the right kind of crop rotation named by M. A. Anderson, Iowa State College agronomist. He thinks June 4-11, Soil Conservation Week, is a good time to consider rotations.

A good crop rotation will increase yields. Corn yields on the corn-oats-meadow rotation plots at the Soil Conservation Experimental Farm in Page County have been four times those in continuous corn. Total production on a feed unit basis has been doubled in rotation plots.

Will Cut Erosion

The higher yields brought about by efficient crop rotation usually show up in the form of higher income, too, Anderson says. The same experiments that pointed up the boosts in yields gave an annual gross income of $24.73 per acre for continuous corn as compared with $42.19 per acre per year for the corn-oats-meadow rotation.

A good crop rotation also reduces soil erosion losses. Continuous corn lost soil four times faster than the corn-oats-meadow rotation, averaging about 1 inch of top soil every three years. Soil loss on land under continuous corn was 40 tons per acre each year, whereas the loss during corn years in the corn-oats-meadow rotation was 20 tons per acre. Soil losses during the oats year of the rotation averaged about 10 tons per acre while there were practically no soil losses from the meadow.

Holds Organic Matter

Organic matter and soil fertility can be held at higher levels by rotating crops and using legumes in the rotation. Organic matter losses on the continuous corn plots were 780 pounds annually during a 19-year period, while losses on the corn-oats-meadow rotation plots average 123 pounds a year. In this experiment no manure was returned to the soil. If this had been done, Anderson thinks organic matter could have been maintained at an even level in the corn-oats-meadow rotation.

He explains that while legumes will aid soil fertility, they aren't necessarily a cure-all for soil problems. If land needs fertilizer or lime, legumes alone won't correct the need. In short, the most adequate rotation, without fertilizer, lime or manure may not maintain a profitable cropping system.

Better physical structure of the soil is another benefit that farmers can expect from sitting down and planning a crop rotation program. Legumes and grasses in the rotation provide for better soil aeration and help maintain a loose mellow soil, while cultivation tends to break down soil structure. In other words, meadows will "renew" the desirable kind of soil structure that makes for better aeration, water infiltration, erosion control and drainage.

HATS OFF TO THE DAIRY FARMERS OF THIS COMMUNITY - - -

We just want to join with the spirit of the occasion to extend our best wishes to the dairy farmers of this community, and to congratulate them on a job well done.

When you are planning conveniences for your dairy barn and milk house, also give some thought to the lady of the farm who would like more conveniences in her "work shop," the kitchen.

Perhaps she needs a new electric gas range, an automatic hot water heater, a new washing machine.

So, along with June Dairy Month, let's also remember that June is a good time to get modern conveniences for your home.

CHECK-UP URGED ON PRESSURE CANNERS

Your pressure canner must be accurate and reliable if it is to handle the important job ahead of it this summer, says Jewel Graham, foods and nutrition specialist at Iowa State College

If that pressure guage registers 10 pounds of pressure, for example, when there's really only 8 pounds of pressure in the canner, sporeforming bacteria in the food may not be destroyed. As a result you're apt to have food spoilage, says Miss Graham. Or if there is more pressure than the guage indicates, you may over-process the food, changing its color and flavor.

When you have had the pressure guage checked by your county home economist or at a special clinic, you know if the guage is off, and by how much. Then you can regulate the pressure accordingly so that the food is properly processed.

The pressure gauge is not the only part that needs checking, Miss Graham adds Make certain the petcock and safety valve are clean, and examine the gasket If the gasket is hard and brittle and steam escapes around the lid when the cooker is in operation, then you probably need a new gasket.

Be sure the exhaust valve is kept clean and in good working order Otherwise it's possible to have a canning accident due to pressure building up and being unable to escape through a clogged-up valve

AN ORDINANCE REGULATING THE USE OF STREETS, ALLEYS, AND PUBLIC PLACES FOR THE MOVING OF BUILDINGS, AND THE MAKING AND REPAIR OF EXCAVATIONS THEREIN, AND PROVIDNG A PENALTY FOR VIOLATIONS THEREOF

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE TOWN COUNCIL OF THE TOWN OF KLEMME, IOWA

Section 1. No person shall move any building, or structure along, across, or over any street, alley, or public place, unless he shall first secure a permit therefor. Such permit shall be issued only upon application to the Mayor, stating the kind of building and structure, the height, and size thereof, the location from which and to which same is to be moved, and the streets, alleys, and public places along and across which the same is intended to be moved. A bond, with good and sufficient surety to be approved by the Mayor shall be posted with said application for such permit conditioned to idemnify the town and any other person, company, or corporation damaged thereby, against any and all liability to persons, property or other damages arising out of the moving of such building or structure, and also providing that the District Court of Hancock County, Iowa, shall have jurisdiction of any suit for recovery on said bond.

Section 2. Upon receipt of any such application, the Mayor shall unless otherwise agreed, give any person, company or corporation, having telegraph, telephone, electric or power wires or poles, along the streets, alleys, of public places of the town, written notice of such application, and fix thereon a time and place of hearing, not less than two days from the date of service of such notice, and upon said hearing, the person desiring the permit, and such person, company or corporation shall be entitled to present evidenece and be heard upon the question of the proposed route, and the Mayor, after hearing such evidenece may grant a permit in writing for the moving of such building or structure, by such route, as he shall find from such hearing most convenient for the public, and shall designate said route in the permit. Upon issuance of any such permit, the Mayor shall give written notice to any person, company or corporation having telegraph, telephone, electric, or opwer wires or poles along the route designated in such permit to move any wires or poles which interfere with the moving of such building or structure, for not to exceed five hours and not earlier than eight o'clock in the forenoon, nor later than three o'clock in the afternoon, the route and time for moving said building or structure to be fully designated in said written notice from the Mayor to such person, company or corporation, served twenty-four hours before the time of such removal of any such wires or poles. The cost of such romoval and the replacement thereof shall be fixed by the Mayor and paid by the owner of the building or structure to the Mayor for the benefit of the owner of such wires or poles before the giving of the notice for the removal of the wires or poles Any person, company or corporation shall not be required to move any part of its high potential electric transmission lines provided that in the judgement of the Mayor, any other suitable route exists for the moving of said building or structure, and shall be entitled to forty-eight hours notice from the Mayor of the necessity of the removal of any such high potential electric transmission lines.

Section 3. No person shall excavate in, on, under or remove or disturb any sidewalk or paving, or excavate in any location in any street, alley, sidewalk, or public place, under which are located any telegraph, telephone or electric lines, including cables and or conduits, drainage systems or water systems, including any and all appurtenances thereto unless he shall first obtain a permit therefor from the Mayor Whenever such excavation or removal is completed such person shall then restore any such sidewalk, paving, street, alley or public place, to the same condition in which it was prior thereto, all at such person's cost and expense. A bond with good and sufficient surety to be approved by the Mayor shall be posted with said application for such permit conditioned to indemnify the town and any other person, company or corporation damaged thereby, against any and all liability to persons, property or other damages arising out of such excavation, and also providing that the District Court of Hancock County, Iowa, shall have jurisdiction of any suit for recovery on said bond. No person shall leave any such excavation without properly barricading the same and maintaining at night warning lights thereon, or upon any pile of earth, plank, stone, or other material placed nearby

Section 4. Anyone violating any of the provisions of the ordinance shall, upon conviction, be subject to imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. Whenever the fine and costs imposed for violation of this ordinance are not paid the person convicted may be committed to jail until the fine and costs are paid, not exceeding thirty days

Section 5. All ordinances or parts or ordinances in conflict with the provisions of this ordinance are hereby repealed.

Section 6. This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication as provided by law.

Passed and adopted this 16th day of May A. D., 1951

NEW FARM FLY CONTROL PUBLICATION AVAILABLE AT EXTENSION OFFICE

Paul Henderson, county extension director, has in his office a supply of a new publication to help farmers with their fly control problems. The pamphlet, No. 167, contains the latest revised Iowa State College recommendations on controlling flies on farms.

Henderson points out that an effective fly control program on any farm will mean more meat and milk from livestock and more comfort to farm folks. However, to be effective fly control efforts must be coordinated and planned to include proper steps in sanitation and wise use of chemicals.

That is exactly what the pamphlet brings out. It contains suggestions on sanitation measures and how to follow up with chemicals. The Information covers fly control around the dairy enterprise, beef cattle operation, and around the farmsted in general.

One of the best features of the pamphlet, according to Henderson, is a handy-to-use temperature-wise fly control timetable. It presents brief recommendations on use of chemical fly killers, when to use them, and where to use them.

The temperature-wise timetable is in line with the changing picture in chemical fly control, Henderson points out. The day is past when one chemical used straight through the fly season will do the job. Now, choice of chemical must be made on the basis of cool or hot weather, whether you are using it on animals or as a residual spray in places where flies sit, and on what class of livestock you are protecting from flies.

Copies of the new publication, farm fly control pamphlet No. 167 are available either at the county extension office in Garner or by writing to the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College, Ames.

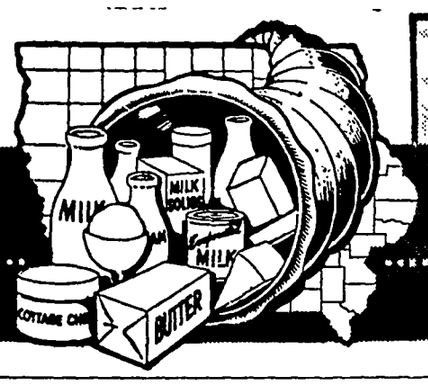
THIS IS JUNE DAIRY MONTH



Saluting the Nutritional Value of Dairy Foods... .....Builders of Health and Wealth for ALL Iowa

ACCENTUATE THE POSITIVE

As customary, Iowa observes June as Dairy Month. It's a fine custom—because the dairy industry and dairy products, especially Butter, mean a lot to all of us in Iowa.

To our families, Butter means Good Eating. For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness of flavor, there's nothing finer than good Iowa butter.

To Iowa land, Butter and Dairying mean increased productivity, for Iowa's 1,777,000 dairy cattle provide a constant replenishment of fertility to help offset the effect of heavy cropping.

To every county in the state, Butter means steady income, through the steady milk and cream checks that mean good living for Iowa farm families—and good business for Iowa towns and cities.

Not long ago, most of us were humming a tune with the very catchy title, "Accentuate the Positive."

That title expresses a sound principle—and we're glad to see that Iowa's dairy farmers are applying the principle, by increasing their fund used to promote dairy-product sales through the Iowa Dairy Industry Commission.

So let's all be positive about Butter. Let's show the world that here in Iowa we know a good thing when we see it—and taste it.

Let's set a good-eating example for the rest of the nation—and enjoy more of Iowa's No. 1 dairy product.

Let's keep Iowa on the gold standard—with butter.

What steps up the health value? ...MILK

Like so many other foods, soups are more nourishing—better tasting, too— when made with milk. To almost every recipe in cooking and baking, Milk adds essenial vitamins, minerals, proteins — so much extra nourishment at such low cost.

Use milk generously when preparing meals —and keep plenty of milk on hand for snack-time.

Your local cafes serve wholesome Klemme Pastuerized Milk every day. Get a glass with your lunch or meal. Your Klemme Grocer sells Klemme Pasteurized Milk and Cream.

Iowa Leads In Farm Income For First Quarter, 1951

Iowa leads the nation in cash farm income for the first three months of 1951, the Iowa Development Commission announced today. It cited U. S. department of agriculture figures.

Iowa farmers received $611,620,000 for farm products sold during the period: $535,579,000 from animals. A year ago, farm income for the first quarter totaled $514,423,000, of which $401,202,000 was from sale of livestock.

Illinois had the second largest farm income in the first quarter of 1951 ($444,597,000). Other top states, in order: California, $431,430,000; Texas, $331,643,000; Minnesota, $311,433,000.

LIST RULES FOR CONTROL OF MOSQUITOES ON FARM

Wet, warm weather and lots of temporary water in farm pastures mean lots of mosquitoes, and mosquitoes bother livestock just as much as they do humans, points out Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Dairy cows especially are sensitive and frequently stampede back to the barn when forced to graze in heavily infested pastures. That means reduced production and is reason enough for farmers to take steps to control the pests, according to the entomologist.

He lists these four steps for controlling mosquitoes on farms:

(1.) Drain all temporary pools or treat them with crankcase oil or DDT. Repeat after every rain.

(2) Spray dairy cows with 1 pound of 50 percent methoxychlor in 10 gallons of water, and beef cattle with methoxychlor or DDT. Repeat in 7 or 10 days.

(3) Treat brush, hedges, evergreen plantings, tall grass and weeds around the house with the same spray as applied to cattle. Drive the spray into the vegetation so twigs, leaves and branches are coated.

(4) Use repellents to keep the pests from annoying you and your family.

CENSUS SHOWS DROP IN SIZE OF HANCOCK COUNTY FARMS

The number of Hancock County farms has increased from 1964 in 1945 to 2032 in 1950, according to 1950 census results now being released.

The census also shows that the average size of farms in Hancock County has dropped from 181.1 acres in 1945 to 177.4 acres in 1950.

Hancock County has 364,800 acres of the state's 35,400 acres of land with 98.8 percent of the county's area in farm land, reports county extension director, Paul Henderson.

He adds that 175,186 acres of the farm land in Hancock County are owner-operated while 218,157 acres are being rented to farm operators.

Every state in the nation showed a decrease in number of farms from 1945 to 1950 Henderson reports. However, Iowa's drop from 208,934 farms in 1945 to 203,189 farms in 1950 represents a decrease of only 2.8 percent for the fourth smallest decline in farm number by states. Only North Carolina, Tennessee and California ad a smaller percentage drop in number of farms. Iowa farm numbers reached a total of 221,986 in 1935, the county extension director adds.

Hancock is one of the few counties to have a decrease in size of farms and an increase in the number of farms. This is probably due to the breaking up of some of the large units in the county since 1945.

At the big Midwest pony sale in Eldora recently, the top price tag of the day was $1760 for a spotted pony stallion.

DAIRYING IS A BILLION DOLLAR BASIC INDUSTRY IN IOWA TODAY

Butter Alone Brings More Than $100,000,000 Into The State

A billion dollars is a lot of money to farmers and business men of Iowa! And a billion dollars is a conservative estimate of the amount Iowa has invested in its dairy industry.

Alongside of hogs, cattle, and corn, the dairy industry is vitally important to Iowa's farm and urban prosperity, according to figures released by Frank Barker, manager of the Iowa Dairy Industry Commission.

Nearly 187,000 farmers, 90% of all farmers in Iowa, share a cash farm income from dairying that exceeds $180,000,000 annually. They consume a total of about $18,000,000 worth of dairy products on their own farms each year, for the table and for feeding livestock. They split up another $33,000,000 from sale of dairy cattle and calves slaughtered for beef

In all, the total farm income from dairying is close to $230,000,000 every twelve months. It averages more than $1,000 for every farm in the state. It amounts to more than one of every ten dollars of total cash farm income. In short, as Mr. Barker points out, it's important money.

Huge Investment in Dairy Plants

Dairy cows in Iowa total over 1,158,000. Currently they have a cash value of $276,762,000. Value of farm acreage and buildings used for dairy production is estimated at over $529,000,000.

Investment in modern creameries, and in processing and distributing plants, puts additional millions of dollars into Iowa's stake in her dairy business. Iowa has 390 creameries serving the industry—90 condenseries, 3 evaporated milk plants, 6 dried casein plants. Retail outlets for milk, butter, ice cream, cheese and other products are numbered in the thousands.

Iowa manufacturers serving producers, processors and distributors of dairy products have a very substantial investment in the industry, and depend upon dairy income to meet their payrolls.

Essential To Conservation

A sound land-use program, to protect and preserve the fertility of farm land, requires substantial acreage in grass or hay crops each year. Agricultural experts agree that dairying is most important to the profitable use of that forage.

The dairy cow is the most efficient machine yet discovered to convert grass into high-energy, palatable, high foods. For that reason alone Iowa will continue to be a leading dairy state.

FHA ACHIEVEMENT DAY TO BE AT ISC JUNE 29TH

The sixth annual Farmers Home Administration Achievement Day will be held at Iowa State College June 29th.

B. W. Lodwick, state director of the FHA, points out that families who paid off FHA loans this past year and those who have done an outstanding job in hog and dairy production, soil conservation and food production will be honored during the day. A new feature on the "honors day" program this year is presentation of Master Landlord awards. It is thought that this will be the first time such an award has been offered in the country.

In addition to the presentation of awards, the program includes outstanding speakers and tours of Iowa State's Division of Agriculture and Home Economics.

TOO EARLY CUTTING IS HARD ON ALFALFA

Alfalfa is more likely to maintain a thick stand necessary to continue producing high yields of hay if it's not cut too early. Early cutting not only thins the stand but it also lowers the amount of protein produced per acre.

Although alfalafa cut in the bud stage has a higher percentage of protein than when cut early in bloom, experiments have shown that early cutting will soon thin the stand. Then the drop in production causes a serious decrease in the protein produced per acre, R. E. Krenzin, Iowa State College extension agronomist, points out.

As evidence, he cites experiments conducted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to test the results of early cutting. Buffalo alfalfa cut in the pre-bloom stage in these experiments had only 2.6 plants per square foot at the end of two years, while plots cut at later stages of growth had from 12.3 to 14 9 plants per square foot.

Alfalfa cut in the pre-bloom stage has a harder time recovering from the cutting, because at this stage of growth the roots are nearly depleted of plant food, Krenzin says.

By waiting until the field is in from 10 to 20 percent bloom, farmers will give alfalfa roots time to store enough plant food for recovery after cutting.

Starved plant roots and decreased vigor resulting from early cutting are the cause of weakening and thinning stands.

Cost of the two Beckwith murder trials in Grundy Center is expected to run about $15,000.

Is Ill

Buena Vista residents are worried about the health of Mrs. Sophie Klein, now in the hospital. Now 101, Mrs. Klein is the county's oldest resident.

First Cow In America

Columbus brought cows to the West Indies on his second voyage in 1495. The cows coming to American soil were brought to the Jamestown Colony in 1611. Thirteen years later, in 1624, cows came to the Plymouth Colony.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Fun For Awhile

"I AM in a very serious dilemma," writes Ethel Wilsey, from Roanoke. "Time, which you so often say heals all wounds, may solve this for me, but meanwhile I would be glad of your opinion.

"Would you ever advise a woman to divorce her husband for no particular reason, and marry another man? I don't think you would. But let me explain the rather unusual circumstances. My social and club circle is large, but I can't consult anyone here.

"I am 29. Ten years ago I married a man 12 years my senior. I liked Hart, I loved my new name and my house, and we really had some good times. Then my two children were born, and things quieted down. Hart had a small salary; my father died and that source of hospitality ended, and I began to feel that life was a pretty steady drudge. Hart began to travel a good deal three years ago, and then my days were duller than ever, even though there was more money.

World Upside Down

"Then I met Roger. Just a quiet fine man at a card party, at first. Then—fireworks. Neither one of us had ever really been in love before and it turned the whole world upside down. During Hart's absences, when my mother was with the children, I was free to come and go, and in the first radiant happiness of our finding each other we were both deeply, truly heart-satisfied. Roger and his wife had meant nothing to each other for years! his only daughter was away at school. No one was hurt, and everyone at home happier for the change in me, for I seemed suddenly alive after so many years of slipping deeper and deeper into a rut.

". . . affair with Roger . . ."

"But six weeks ago Roger's wife died. It was only two days after her funeral that in a talk with him I realized that he expects me to divorce Hart and marry him. He takes the situation for granted and wants to talk to Hart about it.

"Now the absolute truth is that I never stopped loving my husband, and I adore my children. My affair with Roger may have been foolish, but I cannot see that it was wrong. Nobody was hurt by it, for no hint of it ever reached Hart, his mother, my mother, or the children. It would be simply impossible, no matter how much I wanted to do so, to tear my life apart now, and go with Roger to another town, for he has just changed his job. Hart and I have been doing over my father's old home, arranging rooms for the children and changing things about, and all our friends are looking forward to a housewarming there. It would completely disrupt five lives, not counting my own, to have me agree to Roger's proposals.

He Is Insistent

"At the same time, he is insistent, he takes it all as settled, he feels, as he says, that it will 'justify' our love affair. I am worried, almost distracted, by it. In fact, I can't eat or sleep for nervousness. Roger wants my immediate consent, and talks as if our love were still in the stage it was two years ago. I don't mean it isn't, exactly, but these things do grow less, and one does not see them in the beginning as one does later on. I have argued that my love for my children, my home responsibilities, and my position in the community are all against my making any such change, but Roger regards all this as only one more evidence of my unselfishness and perfection, and sweeps it away as nonsense.

"I am quite confident that there will be no real trouble about this," Ethel's letter concludes, "but I would be glad of your opinion."

If Ethel is really confident that there is no real trouble here I can only marvel at her obtuseness. If ever there was real trouble in store for a woman who quite obviously wants to hold on to home and husband and children, this is it. Between the lines I can read a certain uneasiness; Ethel may begin dimly to suspect that home, husband, children, position, and very likely material comfort have all been jeopardized by her sin.

Sin. Yes, that's what it was, the sin of adultery. Ethel will probably read that word with incredulous horror. In our San Francisco jails today there is a woman who is reading the word "murder," in connection with herself, with the same horrified unbelief

"My children—" she stammers. "And Joe—why, I never hated Joe It can't be that I did it It's a bad dream."

Ethel may find herself in a divorce court one of these days, stammering the same words She didn't mean to hurt anybody.

Berries are Ripe Now for Jellies
(See Recipes Below)

Jam 'N Jelly Time

THIS IS THE TIME when fruit trees are plump with their produce, and bushes are colorful with berries. If you plan to have some delightful jam and jelly spreads on the table for fall and winter, it's time to get busy!

Breads, sandwiches and rolls which are daily fare take on new interest when they're served with different spreads Many of them can be used to enhance meat, fruits and desserts, too! Have a variety on hand, and meals will always sparkle with interest.

Take a choice of one or two of six berries and combine with rhubarb to make a delightful and colorful jelly as your starting project. It might even be wise to use one which you've not tried before if you want a flavor surprise:

Berry-Rhubarb Jelly
(Makes 7 6-ounce glasses)

Use one of following combinations:

Blackberry-Rhubarb
Boysenberry-Rhubarb
Dewberry-Rhubarb
Loganberry-Rhubarb
Raspberry-Rhubarb
Youngberry-Rhubarb

* * *

3 cups juice
4 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

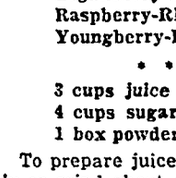
To prepare juice, crush thoroughly or grind about one quart of fully ripe berries. Cut in 1-inch pieces (do not peel) about one pound rhubarb and put through food chopper. Place fruits in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar into a dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into 3 or 4 quart saucepan and place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full, rolling boil and boil hard for 30 seconds. Remove from fire, skim and pour quickly into sterilized glasses. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Currant-Gooseberry Jam
(Makes 12 6-ounce glasses)

5 cups prepared fruit
7 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

Stem about one quart of currants and crush thoroughly. Grind one quart fully ripe gooseberries. Combine fruits and measure 5 cups into a very large saucepan. Measure sugar and set aside. Place saucepan holding fruit over high heat. Add fruit pectin and stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. Stir in sugar at once. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for one minute. Remove from heat, skim and ladle quickly into glasses. Paraffin at once.



Cherry Jam

1 quart cherries
4 cups sugar
½ cup lemon juice

Wash, drain and pit cherries; then measure. Place in layers in a large kettle with the sugar. Let stand 4 hours. Cook, bringing to a full rolling boil and boil for 20 minutes. Add lemon juice and bring to a boil again; boil 5 minutes longer. Let stand until cool. Turn into hot sterile glasses or jars and cover with paraffin and lid.

Currant Jelly

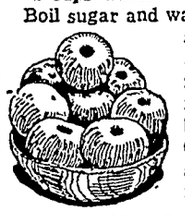
1 quart currants
½ cup water
Sugar

Wash and pick over currants, but do not remove stems. Mash a few of the currants in a preserving kettle, using a potato masher and continue until all berries are mashed. Add water, cover and heat slowly. When fruit juice is thoroughly heated, put into jelly bag and let juice drain. Measure 4 cups of juice, add 3 cups of sugar and boil 3 minutes or until jelly sheets off spoon. Pour into sterile glasses and cover with paraffin when cold.

Apple-Raspberry Jam
(Makes 4 pints)

6 cups chopped, sour apples, pared and cored
3 cups raspberries
9 cups sugar
2 cups water

Boil sugar and water until it spins a thread. Add apples. Boil 2 minutes. Add raspberries and boil 10 minutes. Cool, fill glasses, seal with paraffin and label.



Sunshine Strawberries

Wash and hull perfect strawberries. Arrange in layers in preserving kettle with an equal amount of sugar. Let stand for ½ hour, then bring to the boiling point and cook 20 minutes. Arrange in shallow enameled pans or platters, cover with glass and set in the sun for several days or until the syrup is thick Stir several times every day. Pour into glasses and paraffin at once.

* * *

SUNSHINE CHERRIES: Use the above method with sour red cherries. Cook until they are just tender but still firm. These cherries are especially delicious when served with ice cream.

Three Fruit Preserves

1 pineapple, cut in thin wedges
2 oranges with rind of one
3 quarts strawberries
4 pounds sugar

Peel pineapple, then slice and cut in thin wedges. Grind the oranges, peeling one and discarding the rind, and using the rind of the other Wash, hull and pick over the strawberries. Place all fruits and sugar in preserving kettle and stir until sugar is dissolved. Cook for one hour. Pour into sterilized jars and seal with paraffin.

Yellow Pear Tomato-Orange Jam

4 quarts yellow pear tomatoes
5 oranges
5 pounds sugar

Grind tomato and whole oranges Mix with sugar and boil, stirring often to prevent scorching until thick and clear. Fill sterile glasses. let cool, then seal with paraffin.

For Easy Meals

Ham pancakes make a delightful supper when served with raisin sauce. Fold 1 cup chopped, leftover ham into your pancake batter just before baking. Serve warm.

Plan to roll-up pancakes when you're serving them with a cottage cheese mixture made by heating 2 cups of cottage cheese in the top part of the double boiler with ¼ cup each of green pepper and celery, chopped.

For a lovely meat accompaniment, place slices of pineapple on the griddle and then pour ¼ cup of pancake batter around each pineapple slice, being careful not to fill center or top of pineapple. Bake to a golden brown, turning only once

Instead of serving broiled bacon strips with pancakes, crumble bacon to measure ½ cup and fold into the batter. Serve with butter and spiced honey made by heating together 1 cup of honey with 1 teaspoon cinnamon and ½ teaspoon nutmeg

Tell the Story!

Lesson for June 17, 1951

"TELL me the old, old story" is a favorite hymn in many places. But the first Christians would have been considerably puzzled by that hymn if you had tried it on them. It was no old, old story for them, it was hot news.

Dr Foreman

Whatever objections people may have had to Christianity in those days, they never said it was "old stuff." More than that, Christians did not go around telling one another the story of Jesus. When Jesus said, "Be my witnesses," his first hearers did not think he meant "—only to those for whom it is an old story."

The early church was by no means an organization devoted to repeating something they knew by heart, like the ritual of a lodge It was devoted to telling the good news about God to people who did not know that God had any good news.

The Gospel Is a Story

THE saying has been quoted in this column before· Christianity first came to the world not on the editorial but on the news pages Christianity is not God's new advice to the world It is first of all the something God has done for the world

"Gospel" in Greek means simply good news. It is the story of Jesus, the kind of person he was, the kind of truths he taught, the kind of work he did, the death he died. But the story of Jesus is more than the story of a man, uniquely great though he was.

It is, after all, the story of God, God who became man so that in the life of Christ Jesus we can read the unreadable God, see the Invisible, know the Great Unknown. The early Christians were not theologians, and they did not use the language or the formulas that centuries of thought were to hammer out. They never used the word "Incarnation" and seldom used the word "Atonement." But that was what they were driving at.

The Story Is a Challenge

LOOK through the book of Acts for the story of Jesus as the early Christians told it, and you will see that the Incarnation and the Atonement are there. The Incarnation—that God has lived among us as a man among men, that the glory of God is in the face of Christ. The Atonement—that for Christ's sake God offers forgiveness to all men, that the door to God's love is a wide-open portal.

The early church taught and told this; but not just as a story to entertain or inform, not as a puzzle to be solved, not as something to be believed or not, as we please; but as THE story, not only the "greatest story ever told" but beyond any comparison the most important.

If you cannot see God in Christ, where can you see him? If you will not take God's forgiveness for Christ's sake, then what right have you to look for forgiveness at all?

Christianity Is a Life

THE readers of the book of Acts will discover that the early Christians were not simply preachers. They lived a new sort of life. The essential thing was that they lived as a family—the family of God. They so lived that few have fully imitated them since

The way in which Christians treated one another was so different from what the world was used to, that an almost new word had to be used for it.

When Paul went about preaching, a good deal of what he said was about himself Was this because he had taken the place of Jesus? No, it was the other way around—Jesus had taken his place. That is, what Paul had to tell was not simply the story of Jesus "from Bethlehem to Calvary," it was not even the story of the Resurrection

What always aroused Paul's finest eloquence was his story of what Christ had done to him, for him, through him, in him. The Gospel is the power of God, he said to the Romans And if this were not true, do you suppose the Christian religion could have lasted as long as it has?

But the telling of this story, and the living of it, is not something the church can leave to the women, or to the preachers, or to "missionary societies." Letting the world know the news, the good news, is the business of the whole family of God.

Children's Day Gains Popularity As Gift, Remembrance Time

This year marks the third national observance of Children's Day. Civic authorities, parent-teacher groups, and Main Street merchants throughout the country are planning special festivities for the children on Saturday, June 9.

The Children's Day National Council plan is to make Children's Day second only to Christmas as a gift and remembrance occasion; a day devoted to the happiness of children in the same way as Mother's Day and Father's Day is devoted to the happiness of parents.

The special Children's Day poster, (below) painted by Dorothea Warren Fox especially for the event, will be reproduced in full color in window blow-up, counter cards and window streamers

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

Thirty thousand department stores, toy stores, infant's and children's shops and gift shops will be serviced with special promotional material on Children's Day. You will see this material in your Main Street store before June 9.

Last year 6,000 leading key merchants successfully devoted 25,000 lines of newspaper advertising to merchandise featured as Children's Day gifts.

Parents will be badly mistaken if they think their children don't know about Children's Day. For instance, Elizabeth Ann Harper, daughter of the publisher of the Minden Press, Minden, Louisiana, writes a column in her father's weekly newspaper The fourth grade student wrote in a recent issue:

"I have been asking Daddy and Mother for a long time, When is Children's Day, because I always hear so much talk about Father's Day and Mother's Day. They never did give me a satisfactory answer. Well, Friday night I was listening to the radio and I heard a man say, Sunday is Daughter's Day; that was all I wanted to know I told Mother and Daddy I would be expecting a present. I thought at the time I wanted a bracelet that stretches when you slip it over your hand. I changed my mind late Saturday when Daddy and I went out to shop for my present. A green cowgirl hat, all trimmed in gold, caught my eyes and that is what we bought. Now I need some new blue jeans and a new shirt to go with my new hat."

No doubt, Elizabeth Ann will get her jeans and new shirt for a Children's Day gift.

Children's Day, which is sponsored jointly by the American Parents Committee and Parents' Magazine in conjunction with the Children's Day National Council has two objectives.

1. It will be a fitting occasion for civic and community gatherings to call attention to the basic educational, health, recreational and welfare needs of children to discuss better ways of meeting these needs.

2. It will be an appropriate opportunity for parents and those others who love children to evidence their love in tangible ways.

"Star Spangled Banner"; and the correlative duties and obligations resulting from their enjoyment.

For the thousands of home towns in the nation the following suggestions have been made for the observance of the week:

(1) Ask your motion picture theatres to use appropriate "short subjects" and feature pictures dealing with the flag and other patriotic subjects.

(2) Have stores, hotels, banks, etc., make special displays of the colors throughout Flag Week. Urge everyone in the community to display the flag every day during the week, from sunrise to sunset

(3) Arrange for special flag talks at meetings of civic and other organizations during the week and appoint a speaker's committee for the purpose.

(4) Add a beautiful, inspiring and dramatic touch at all public functions by having trained, uniformed organizations unite in massing the colors.

(5) Invite civic leaders to make brief addresses for your official program Sunday, June 10.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, honorary chairman of the National Flag Week Committee, wrote the following when accepting the chairmanship of the committee:

"Never before has our country been faced with greater responsibilities in world affairs, and never before has our danger been greater. The free nations of the world look to us for leadership in the great struggle against communism. To millions of oppressed, weak, and hungry peoples our flag is a symbol of hope for a better life. Perhaps it is their only hope.

. . . "Let us then rally—united—under those broad stripes and bright stars to meet our dangers, our duties, and our responsibilities".

International Food Exposition Week

The week of June 9-15 has been designated International Food Exposition Week throughout the state of Illinois by Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson and in the city of Chicago by Mayor Martin Kennelly, who have invited all groups in the free world to participate in the giant food fair.

The International Food Exposition is sponsored by the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States, the world's largest trade association, in connection with its 52nd annual convention.

To be held in the twin exhibit halls of navy pier, the exposition will provide the greatest concentrated food market in the world to all exhibitors. Last year's exposition comprised a mile of food industry exhibits.

More than 14,000 food field representatives will "shop" this Main Street of the food world where every food store product, fixture, machine and method on the market will be presented along two glittering miles of exhibits—double the number of last year's exhibits.

Expectant Father's Day Scheduled for June 16

A day for rememberance of America's forgotten man—the expectant father—is scheduled for observance June 16. The observance is sponsored by the Expectant Fathers Club of which there are 100 chapters in this country The club, open to all expectant fathers, is strictly fraternal.

Max Hess, Jr., Allentown, Pa., director of the club, reports: "Everybody is concerned with the expectant mother, but the expectant father who caters to the little woman's every whim, who pays the bills and worries about the coming baby, is entirely neglected. There is no way to identify him. No one gives him the respect, admiration and consideration he deserves. Just as Fathers' Day to honor Dad was inaugurated long after Mothers' Day, so the Expectant Fathers Club is giving the papas-to-be of the nation a break."

Last year produced a crop of 3,548,000 babies. These more than three million expectant Dads were the forgotten men of the nation.

Flag Week Will Be Observed June 10-16

The thirteenth annual National Flag Week will be observed in the United States June 10-16.

The observance of National Flag Week has for its purposes the inculcation of the meaning of true Americanism into the minds and hearts of our citizens; the definite marking of the anniversary of the adoption of the first flag of the nation (June 14, 1777); the directing of attention to the history and evolution of "Old Glory"; and emphasizing the rights and privileges enjoyed under the

Club Objective Is Child Welfare

The objectives of the Expectant Fathers Club is to encourage the study of helpful techniques and methods by which expectant fathers may be enabled to assist their wives in the proper care and upbringing of their children; to disseminate information regarding such techniques and methods; to cooperate with public welfare agencies, boards of health, Red Cross and other similar organizations in making available courses of instruction for said purposes; to cooperate with public agencies in the dissemination of information which will reduce infant mortality; to participate with other agencies in elimination of the causes of juvenile delinquency, and the improvement of recreational and educational facilities for children.

PAYS TO ADD FEEDERS AS YOUNG CHICKS GROW

Adding more chick feeders as the young flock grows is one practice that will pay dividends this spring as well as next fall, says W. R. Whitfield, Iowa State College extension poultryman.

Extra feeders will make it unnecessary to go to the brooder house several times a day to keep feeders full and will give the chicks plenty of feed for fast early gains.

Chickens 4 to 8 weeks old need at least 2 inches of feeder space per bird. After 8 weeks of age, they need 3 inches or more. Changing to feeders that are 5 or 6 inches high and 4 feet long when the chicks are 4 weeks old will give chicks an early introduction to full-sized feeders that waste less feed and provide ample supplies of feed at all hours It's also a good idea to put the feeders on blocks or legs so they won't be scratched full of trash and litter by growing chicks.

When the flock is 8 weeks old, Whitfield advises adding hoppers of whole oats and shelled corn He says the corn doesn't need to be cracked, but the chickens will need hard grit in separate feeders at the same time Light oats should be removed because the chicks will cut down their grain consumption if this is not done.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Iowa Geography

Edna's a great one for figures. "Iowa's highest point is Osceola County," she quoted out of some book last night. "It's 1,675 feet above sea level. Lowest point is Keokuk . . . 477 feet."

"Not much difference," I remarked.

"Why should there be?" said Edna. "You don't find extremes in Iowa" . . . or in Iowa people, for that matter.

She's right, of course. Especially about Iowa people.

I'd say we have fewer extremists in Iowa than most any other place in the country. We Iowans believe that every man has a right to his own tastes and opinions.

But that's rather discouraging to fanatics, because they'd rather have you get mad at them.

Iowans don't get mad until such extremists try to impose their opinions on us. Once they try to tell us what we must do or must not do, we generally make short work of them. Because, as the motto says: "Our liberties we prize, and our rights we will maintain." That's the Iowa way. A mighty good way!

"PETE" LARSEN GRADUATES FROM I.S.C. AND IS COMMISSIONED

Clarence "Pete" Larsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larsen of Klemme, was one of the large class of graduates at Iowa State College, Ames, when commencement exercises were held on Friday.

"Pete" majored in Industrial Economics and also had four years of military training. At his graduation he also received a commission of Second Lieutenant in the Organized Corps of the U.S. Army. Larsen expects to enter the army for active military service in Aug.

Fraternity house honors were also bestowed on "Pete," who had been president of his fraternity. He was awarded for being the most outstanding man for his unselfishness, helpfulness, kindness and in general, "a real fine fellow."

Attending the commencement exercises were Mr and Mrs C A. Larsen of Klemme and Mr and Mrs. Marvin Isvik and children of Omaha.

KLEMME FIRE DEPT. MADE RUN TO CAR FIRE MON. AFTERNOON

The Klemme Fire Department made a run two miles north of Klemme where the Jennings Anderson car was on fire Mr. Anderson had extinguished some of the blaze and the rest was extinguished by the firemen with a dry powder chemical and a small amount of water. A great deal of damage was done to the dash of the car and paint above the dash where the heat from the fire blistered and burnt the paint.

Mr. Anderson believed the flames started from leaking gas line.

As in the past the fire truck was hampered by motorists not yielding the right of way. The Iowa law reads that you must pull to the side of the road and stop.

KLEMME BAND WILL PLAY AT CLEAR LAKE ON JULY FOURTH

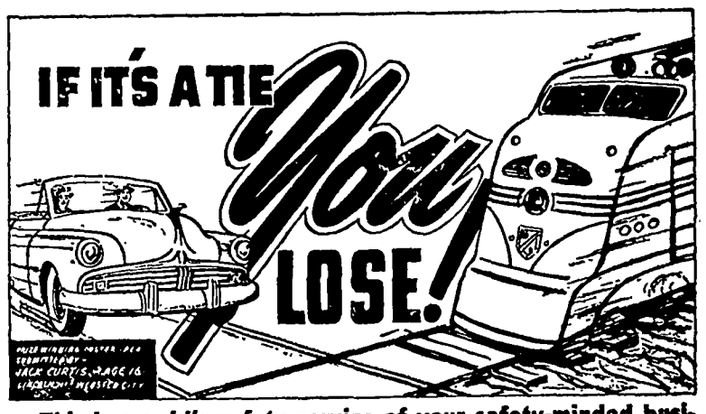
The Klemme school band was one of several of the best bands in North Iowa to be invited to play at Clear Lake on July Fourth.

Arrangements are now being made by the Klemme Music Mothers to take the band to Clear Lake. The Klemme school band has also been invited to play at the Iowa State Fair this year. No doubt the invitation will be accepted and the band will appear at the Fair one day.

YAHNKE REUNION HELD

The Yahnke family reunion was held Sunday at Blue Earth, Minnesota, with a good attendance.

Those from here who attended were Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Elder and grandchildren, Tom and Bill Waddingham, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Palmby of Tallulah, Louisiana.



This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Iowa is crisscrossed with highways and railroads. Both are vital to our transportation system, and both are heavily used.

Traffic accident statistics prove that wherever these busy roadways intersect, there's danger—an increasing danger!

In the first five months of this year, 28 Iowans were killed in car - train accidents. Almost 15 percent of the total 209 traffic fatalities in that period involved trains.

Out of the 183 Iowans killed in traffic accidents during the same period last year, 20 met death in car-train collisions

That's why your Iowa safety Congress warns motorists: Be especially alert for the danger at railroad crossings Follow these safe driving rules:

Slow down, look and listen — everytime you approach a railroad crossing.

Stop when the signal light is blinking.

Stop when the gate is down

Stop if a train is approaching.

Watch for a train on the second track.

Don't try to beat a train to a crossing. If it's a tie—you lose!

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Experts on love will say that aman is easily caught on the rebound. Experts on highway safety will say that a man is easily killed on the rebound from one mistake.

An accident illustrating this began one night recently on an Iowa highway when a slow-driving drunk nosed his car into a ditch, got out and passed out.

A few minutes later another driver approached from the opposite direction and saw the ditched vehicle. He stopped his car squarely on the highway and ran to give help.

In his excitement, the "helpful" driver mistook the dozing drunk for an accident victim suffering internal injuries. He climbed a fence and ran across a field to the lights of a farm where he told the farmer his story and asked him to call an ambulance.

Then, halfway back across the dark field, the driver must have remembered his car sitting there on the highway. In any case, study of his footprints next day showed that he began to run.

He was going to be just in time

For out of that night was coming another car at terrific speed; speed well beyond the safety range of headlights. Its driver saw the ditched car so abruptly, so suddenly, that he swerved to the left instinctivly.

He side-swiped the standing car, rebounded across the highway and smashed down the fence and the "helpful" driver who had just arrived back on the scene.

When the ambulance arrived, it took back one sobering drunk and one dazed driver and one dead driver - the "helpful" one, killed on the rebound of three deadly mistakes on the highway.

Will Attend Wedding

"Pete" Larsen will drive to Norfolk, New Jersey, where this week he will be best man for his good friend, Al Palmer, a fraternity brother who is being married. On the way home "Pete" will stop in Chicago for a visit with his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Denmark.

"Pete" seems to be getting a lot of experience in helping his friends get spliced. This is "Pete's" fourth time to appear as best man at a wedding. Better watch your step, fellow, you are getting pretty close!

CONSTRUCTION ON LAU'S NEW BUILDING NOW UNDER WAY

Lau's new building on Main Street is beginning to take shape as Orville Bridges began laying up the wall blocks Saturday.

The new building will be used mostly for storage and takes the place of an old wooden building which was torn down.

The new building will be a nice improvement to the Klemme Main Street.

New Display Case

The Gerardi Cafe has a new ice cream display case which was installed Friday. It is a nice piece of equipment and will be a great convenience in serving the public with frozen delicacies.

Grand Opening Of New Mill Set For June 29th

KNEE HIGH CORN IS HERE NOW, USUALLY THAT HIGH JULY 4TH

Farmers generally agree that "knee high corn by the Fourth" is an indication that corn is well along.

However, Lester Neuberger has a 17 acre field of corn that was all knee high Friday, June 15th. This particular field was planted May 12th and has made a good growth. Some of the stalks Lester brought to town measured 24 to 26½ inches. That field is going to be just plenty tall by the Fourth.

This particular field was sod plowed under and Neuberger also used a commercial fertilizer, so it was good rich ground.

Klemme Water Tanks Went Dry Last Wednesday, All Air, No Water

The Klemme water tanks both went dry last Wednesday and all that came out of water faucets was a stream of air.

Mechanics from the Thorpe Well Co. of Des Moines were called and soon had the trouble remedied. The automatic switches had not been working properly causing the pump to be thrown in too often and filling the tanks with more air than water, until the balance was all air in the tanks, which condition airlocked the pump.

Everything was working fine again in a few hours.

Soldier Home On Furlough

Cpl Bill Back of Shephard Field, Wichita Falls, Texas, came home the first of the week to enjoy a 15 day furlough visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs Herman Back and other relatives.

Cpl Back is an aircraft engine instructor He expects to be transferred soon to Amarillo, Texas, where he will instruct in the school on jet engines. Bill says he likes the army real well and enjoys his work, which is very interesting.

ALL CROPS IN HANCOCK LOOKING GOOD

Although spring was very late this year, it seems that most crops are about up to normal this year.

Oats has made wonderful progress even if it was late in being seeded. Corn is more than doing good with plenty of moisture and warm days and nights. Hay is extra heavy this year. Some hay is now being put up, most of which will be baled in the field.

There are quite a few fields of soy beans that are also looking good. If good weather continues North Iowa farmers may again have a bumper crop in all departments.

Dads Day Celebrated

All the Back children were at the Herman Back home Sunday to help him celebrate Dad's Day. Bill Back was home from the air corps in Texas, and Mr. and Mrs. Graydon Back and Rebecca, Mr. and Mrs. Lynford Back and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Buseman and daughter, Anette.

Found Indian War Club

While working with the telephone construction crew west of Klemme last week, Leslie DeMerritt noticed a peculiar looking rock laying in the dirt. He picked it up and was astonished to note that it was an Indian tomahawk or war club.

A number of Indian arrow heads have been found quite frequently west of Klemme.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Does It Pay?

ELIZA HARRIS, of Plainfield, N.J., sends me the following letter, which I consider remarkable.

"Does my name sound firm and New Englandy and business-like?" she begins. "If it does, it fits me. I'm 38, good-looking, tall, married to a nice fellow for 10 years, mother of four children. Girls of 8 and 4. Boys of 9 and 6. Income, about $5,000. Health, at the moment, good all 'round Home, 10 rooms and two porches. One car, four radios, one video. No domestic help.

"My story is one of responsibility, responsibility, and more responsibility. I've always loved my life, but it never has been easy. At 14, with a delicate mother, three brothers, and not enough money, I was cooking, making beds, marketing, trimming Christmas trees, stretching money, sewing, mending, planning. And I'm doing just that now, 24 years later.

Prolific Family

"Two younger brothers were still at home when I married, and Mother still frail, so my dinner on my wedding night was cooked for five persons, by me. A year later John was born, and my sister joined us to have her baby at home, 'where Liz could take care of her.' When my child was three months old and hers three weeks, our home burned down. We moved into the barn, Mother going to an aunt's house for awhile. Both brothers married girls who had no home connections nearby, and my sister, Rose and I gave them their weddings. We are a prolific lot; there are now 12 children in the three families.

". . . moved into the barn . . ."

"We bought two houses, next door to each other, and the deadly serious years began. Mother came home accompanied by a crippled brother; he was with us 10 years. Rose's husband died. We adopted a half-grown girl who helped with the children until she married.

"Oh, there was plenty of fun. Win and I have had a trip or two; the families have some cabins up in the mountains where we all go for summers. We're great picnickers, we love games, we all pitch in and help when a bride is to be fitted out or a baby is coming.

"But what about the measles, the money scares, the poor marks in grammar school, the shabbiness of chairs and curtains, the winters when everyone has colds, the lost car keys, the rising prices of everything, the adolescent problems and expenses and expectations ahead, the endless line of muddy shoes, lost rubbers, noise all over the house, tearful little girls, rebellious little boys, plans that don't mature; and what of all the trips and fur coats and beautiful rooms and ease and dignity of living that I know I'll never have? I'm 38.

Tired and Doubtful

"This morning I'm somehow tired and doubtful. Everything I've ever done seems half-finished and not worthwhile. I think of the agonies of fear I've gone through over the children's accidents, or this one's possible polio or that one's threatened eye trouble, and the trays carried upstairs and the toys mended—and oh, well!" Eliza finishes her letter, "that's enough of this, and tear up my letter and don't answer my commonplace, everyday problems!"

But I do answer, Eliza, and I repeat that I think your letter, and you, remarkable. And I hope, for the sake of this mighty nation, that what you are doing is really everyday and commonplace.

Yours is a magnificent story of service, sacrifice, and—I know, joy. I know there are hours of deep satisfaction and pride along the road of such a life as yours, pride and satisfaction such as no trips and furs and ease and dignity ever could give you. Yours is life as I truly believe God meant women to live it, undoing the wrongs and injustices to which we all are heir, binding up wounds, putting happiness and health into children's lives, holding not one but several families together.

You see only the roughness and the loose ends and the failures and the fatigues now. But when you are old, you'll see differently.

Why They Quit

A recent study to find out why good employees left their jobs disclosed the following reasons: Lack of prestige; insecurity; wasted talent; indefinite promotions; poor pay; poor leadership; poor working conditions; unpleasant associates.

Household Hints

When talcum powder is spilled on a rug, don't try to sweep it up. That spreads it. Hold you vacuum cleaner over it to draw off the loose powder. What's left can be removed by rubbing the spot very gently with a damp cloth. Rinse the cloth frequently so the powder that sticks will not go back on the rug.

* * *

Mud on non-washables should be allowed to dry completely—and then some—before it's scraped off with a dull knife or brushed off. Soak washables first in cold water, then finish the job by ordinary laundering.

* * *

If an overdose of laundry bluing results in a stain, wet the spot with alcohol and launder the article again. Should sterner measures be in order, use oxalic acid, but rinse it out immediately.

* * *

The table for a buffet supper should be arranged in logical fashion so that guests can pick up food in sequence, the drink last.

Salad Dressings, Fresh Greens Add Salad Variety To Summertime Servings

SUMMERTIME puts a real drain on salad inspiration since you may be serving at least two a day. Keep them interesting and different, and you'll have no trouble keeping the family happy at mealtime.

Use greens abundantly while they are available, and at the peak of their goodness. Served raw, they can easily substitute for a vegetable. Large fruit salads may be served so they're a good substitute for dessert, as well as doubling for the salad course.

Try a few new salad dressings to pep up old favorite salads, and see what a difference it makes in keeping the salads varied. Here are two that are especially suited for vegetable salads.

Smooth Salad Dressing
(Makes about 2 cups)

- 1 cup cider vinegar
- 3 eggs, well beaten
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon celery salt
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Dash cayenne pepper
- ½ cup sour cream

In a saucepan, heat cider vinegar to boiling point; remove from heat. In a bowl, combine eggs, lemon juice, sugar, dry mustard, celery salt, salt and pepper. Slowly add egg mixture to cider vinegar. Return to low heat and stir constantly until mixture is thick and smooth. Remove from heat and fold in sour cream. Cool. Pour into a clean bottle or jar; cover. Store in refrigerator. Serve with vegetable salads.

Perfection Salad Dressing
(Makes 1⅔ cups)

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- ½ cup cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- 1½ teaspoons salt

In a saucepan, melt butter over low heat; add flour and blend. Add milk; cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Slowly add eggs and cider vinegar, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and beat with rotary egg beater. Cool. Pour into a bottle or jar; cover. Store in refrigerator. Serve with crisp vegetable salads.

Fruit French Dressing
(Makes 1¼ cups)

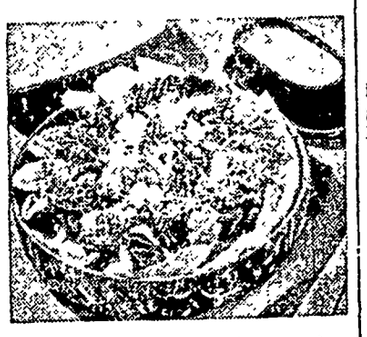
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- Juice of 1 orange
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 cup salad oil
- 1 teaspoon grated onion

Combine ingredients in bottle or jar; cover and shake thoroughly.

Clear Fruit Dressing
(Makes 1¼ cups)

- ½ cup sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 1 cup salad oil

Combine sugar, salt, mustard, and vinegar; bring to boiling; cool and add oil slowly, beating constantly with rotary beater.

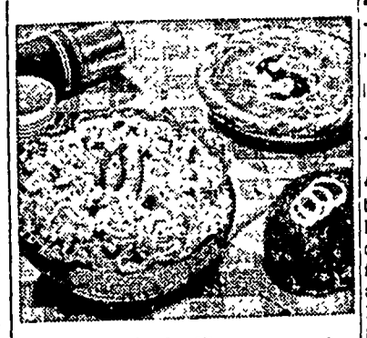


A budget salad for budget meals is this nutritious vegetable salad served with Perfection Salad Dressing. Crisp endive, spinach leaves and chicory compose the greenery while decoratively cut carrot slices are added for color.

LYNN SAYS:
Select Quality Vegetables By these Characteristics

Asparagus when at its best has straight stalks that are from 6 to 10 inches long, with a fresh, green color. Stalks which are thin, wilted, tough or woody or stalks with loose tips are to be avoided.

When green beans begin to bulge they are usually too old to be used. They should be crisp and full with clean colored green or yellow pods. The pods are best when they're as straight as possible.



Favorite foods like macaroni, cheese and deviled ham are served in an unusual way in this hearty salad bowl which can be the main dish for luncheon or supper. Seasonings for this salad include a touch of onion, worcestershire sauce and vinegar.

Deviled Macaroni Salad
(Serves 6-8)

- 1 8-ounce package elbow macaroni
- ½ pound American cheese, cubed
- ½ cup chopped celery
- 1 pimiento, chopped
- ½ green pepper, chopped
- ⅔ cup real mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons grated onion
- 2 cans deviled ham
- 2 teaspoons vinegar
- 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- Lettuce

Cook macaroni according to directions on the box and allow to cool. Add cheese, celery, pimiento and green pepper. Combine real mayonnaise, deviled ham, grated onion, vinegar and worcestershire sauce. Add mayonnaise mixture to macaroni, tossing lightly with a fork. Chill thoroughly. Line salad bowl with lettuce leaves and fill with Macaroni Salad. Garnish with pimiento strips.

Golden Egg Salad
(Serves 6-8)

- 9 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 3-ounce package cream cheese
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon chili sauce or catsup
- Lettuce

Combine eggs, vegetables, and seasonings. Blend cream cheese with mayonnaise and chili sauce. Add to egg mixture; mix thoroughly. Pack lightly in individual molds or a ring mold. Chill about 4 hours. Unmold on bed of endive. Serve with lettuce hearts and extra mayonnaise.

Cold-Cut Toss
(Serves 6)

- 1 head lettuce
- ¾ pound liverwurst, cubed
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ½ cup green pepper, chopped
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ¼ cup sliced radishes
- ¼ cup chopped dill pickle
- 2 tomatoes, diced

Break lettuce, in bite-sized pieces, into salad bowl. Add remaining ingredients. Toss well with Quick Russian Dressing. Season to taste. Chill. Quick Russian Dressing: Combine ¼ cup mayonnaise, 2 tablespoons catsup, and 2 teaspoons prepared mustard. Blend.

For that extra special dessert, fold 1 cup of fresh blueberries into the pancake batter and make small pancakes. Serve a "circle" of several of these cakes with a mound of whipped cream, sprinkled with powdered sugar.

Broccoli must be tender, first of all, and it should also have a fresh green color. The heads should be compact. If the vegetable is wilted, flabby, sprouted or yellow, with tough, woody stalks, it's no longer in the peak of condition.

Green peppers to be at their best should have a crisp texture and bright color. When pale in color they are immature. If they are shriveled, limp or tough, they should be discarded. If the skin has any blemishes on it, the pepper is probably decayed.

Church Under Fire

Lesson for June 24, 1951

ABOUT two thousand Christian missionaries have been forced to leave China during 1950 and 1951. In more than one country "freedom of religion" has meant, in practice, freedom to ridicule and hinder religion. In Spain, Protestants are forbidden to use the name "church," to meet in any building on a main thoroughfare, or to worship in buildings that in any way resemble a church. In Colombia, churches have been burned by mobs without the slightest interference from the police. All this is bad, but it is nothing new.

Dr. Foreman

When Christian Meant Criminal

AT the time the Christian religion began, it came under fire from the authorities of Jerusalem. It was to be expected that the same men who had condemned, cast out and crucified Jesus would try to stamp out his followers as well.

But one of the leading men of Jerusalem said, in effect: "If this new cause is God's cause there is no use in our fighting it." It was God's cause, and so the opposition at Jerusalem not only did not stop or destroy the church but actually only succeeded in spreading it.

As the new Christian religion then moved out into all parts of the Roman Empire, at first the imperial and local authorities paid it no attention; and in fact for some years it enjoyed the protection of the government. So long as it was supposed that Christianity was simply a sect of Judaism, the Roman government let it go.

But when it came out that Christianity was a new religion, and especially when it became clear that the Christians acknowledged only one Lord, and would not worship the Emperor, the Roman government began a long series of persecutions, which lasted for close to three hundred years.

Inspiration Behind Bars

FIVE letters of Paul, including II Timothy, were written from Roman jails, and reliable tradition tells us that Paul was finally beheaded just because he was a Christian.

If you will look on a map of the Roman Empire for the places mentioned at the beginning of I Peter, you can see how widespread was the "fiery trial" which the readers of that letter were then suffering. As for the book of Revelation, its writer was, he says, "on the isle of Patmos for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ."

Patmos Island was no resthaven for tired missionaries; it was not a missionary field either. It was a barren island, a convict camp, where many Christian missionaries, on being arrested, were sent after their trial and sentence, to work at forced labor in the mines there.

If the scenes of that book often flow with blood and blaze with fire, it is not because the writer had a too vivid imagination. He might have seen with his own eyes Christians, men, women and even children, with their heads chopped off by the public executioner, or dying amid the flames at the stake. Those were terrible times, and it took courage to be a Christian at all.

The Victory

THE message of the New Testament is never optimism, but always hope. That is to say, no one in the New Testament, from Jesus in Galilee to John on Patmos, holds out any promise or picture of smooth and easy going for the Christian church.

It will have trouble, and the more faithful it is to Christ the more trouble it is likely to meet. But in the long run, Christ's true church (which means simply all those who are true to Christ) will conquer all her enemies, for the reason that it is Christ's church and not ours alone.

It has recently been reported that the Russian government has thought up a smart idea. They find that the more religion is persecuted, the more stubbornly vigorous it grows. So the government has given up persecuting religion, and proposes to let it "die on the vine."

That may work; if Christians have too easy a time, the church will attract only the lazy and the comfort-loving—which will kill off the church. But the vine will not die, if only every branch is closejoined to Christ, the ever-living Vine of God.

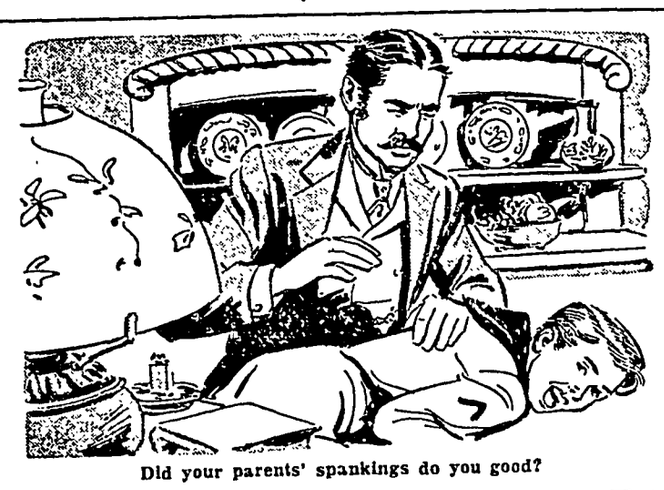
MIRROR Of Your MIND

Guilt Complex
Spanking Result

By Lawrence Gould



Did your parents' spankings do you good?

Answer: Probably not, though I do not doubt they were not "well meant." As one child psychiatrist expresses it, the man who "says that he was soundly beaten in his youth and is grateful for it" shows "lack of intelligence and human understanding." He will probably take his revenge on his own children. A child may be grateful for a spanking only if it takes the place of a "lecture," since the sense of guilt this may arouse may hurt worse than a beating. Parents usually beat a child because then "they do not need to think why the child has incurred their displeasure."

Do neurotics choose their symptoms?

Answer: Yes, in the sense that substantially the same neurotic conflict may be expressed in one set of symptoms by one person and in quite another by his next-door neighbor. One girl who feels she was cheated out of her due share of recognition by her mother may become a kleptomaniac and another a would-be home-breaker. What is more, a person who is cured of one set of symptoms without getting rid of his underlying conflict may simply develop a new one. But the "choice of symptoms" is not consciously made nor under the individual's control.

Does the English language ignore women?

Answer: In certain ways it appears to, and I have known women whose resentment at the supposed disadvantages of femininity has been intensified by this fact. Other languages like Greek and Latin have one word meaning a human being, regardless of sex, another for a male human, and a third for a female; while in English, the word "man" is of both common and masculine gender but has all too often been thought of as meaning exclusively a male. In such sayings as, "All men are created equal" the word "man" includes both males and females, but not everybody knows this.

By long established custom, the Korean bridegroom stays with his bride three days in his father-in-law's house before returning with her to his own parents' house. Official manhood begins for the Korean only after marriage. Even if he is 70, a bachelor's opinion has little influence.

* * *

The Koreans' traditional habit of wearing many and varied hats is said to have had its origin as a measure against plotting. An ancient ruler, the legend goes, once concluded that men could not conspire if they could not put their heads together. Hence he required his subjects to wear such huge hats that whispered conversations could not be carried on.

Cause of Liver Trouble Hard To Find

By Dr. James W. Barton

I OFTEN WRITE about the many jobs done by the liver: manufacturing bile needed in digestion of food, storing up of sugar for future needs; supplying coloring or other materials for the formation of blood, filtering poisons or harmful substances from the blood. With so many jobs to do, it would seem that when it fails to do one or more of these jobs properly, it should not be hard for the physician to locate the exact cause of any symptoms present, aside from yellow jaundice, which can be recognized by the layman.

In Canadian Medical Association Journal, several years ago, Dr. H. K. Detweiler, Toronto Western hospital, stated, "Most physicians will agree, I think, that of all the vital organs of the body, the liver is the one which provides the most difficult problems in diagnosis. It is not an active organ in the 'muscular' sense, like the heart whose contractions create sounds which we can hear to record their value. It is not like the lungs whose movements create conditions which are readily detected by stethoscope and fluoroscope (x-ray). It is not like the stomach whose symptoms in disease arise wholly from conditions which interfere with the normal muscular activity of the tract. The liver lies in its alloted space, impassive and immobile, yet it is charged with more varied responsibilities and more different functions than any other organ in the body."

Besides the functions listed above, Dr. Detweiler mentions regulation of blood sugar levels, production of fibrinogen and heparin in connection with necessary clotting of blood, the production of heat and regulation of blood volumes. It is because of this formidable array of different jobs "that the liver is vulnerable to attack from many quarters."

Despite various tests for estimating the liver's ability to do its work, "there is no substitute for a careful history and physical examination."

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

SOYBEAN OIL MEAL, UREA ARE BEST FED SEPARATE

Gains in beef cattle fed a combination of urea and soybean oil meal for protein supplement failed to measure up to those registered when soybean oil meal or urea were fed separately in the 1951 Iowa State College cattle feeding tests.

A lot of eight cattle fed soybean oil meal alone as a protein supplement gained an average of 2¼ pounds per day as did a similar lot of eight cattle fed urea to replace all of the protein supplement, reports C. C. Culbertson, Iowa State College animal husbandman in charge of the feeding trials.

On the other hand, a lot of 8 cattle gained only 2 pounds when fed urea to meet half of their protein requirements and soybean oil meal for the other half Another lot averaged only 1 and three-quarters pounds of gain per day when molasses was fed with the urea-soybean oil meal mixture.

Culbertson reports that these 1951 results using soybean oil meal as a protein supplement were in contrast to 1950 results when linseed oil meal was used. Cattle in 1950 feeding trials gained more on a 50-50 mixture of urea and linseed meal than did cattle fed either urea or linseed oil meal alone as a protein supplement.

Iowa State College cattle feeding tests in recent years have been aimed at producing high gains at low cast through the use of urea and other sources of protein. Feeding experiments are completed each year in June in time for a review of the results at the annual Cattle Feeders' Day.

VACCINATE PIGS AGAINST CHOLERA

It's Cheap Insurance To Avoid Costly Losses

The increased number of pigs on Iowa farms this year, their potential value and the great risk of hog cholera striking makes vaccination against the disease a sensible measure for farmers to take, according to Dr. John Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

He figures a farmer is making a mistake if he allows talk of variant virus and serum breaks to keep him from vaccinating. Vaccination is cheap insurance a farmer can't very well afford to pass up, Herrick says.

Hog chlorea can attack hogs of any age if they are not immunized. When a large number of pigs in a community are not vaccinated, hog cholera epidemics are more than ever apt to start causing tremendous financial losses.

Have Product Choices

Type of product to use to immunize pigs against hog chlorea depends on thes farm conditions. Serum and virus still are the choices to produce lifetime immunity, according to Herrick. Other products produce immunity only for a limited time, but they have an advantage in that they do not contain the live virus of hog cholera.

To determine which product to use, Herrick urges hog producers to have local veterinarians examine their herds and decide when pigs should be vaccinated and what to use. He also urges farmers to watch for sick pigs and sudden deaths. It may be chlora striking. A correct early diagnosis followed by prompt attention often saves a hog crop for a farmer.

List Four Steps

Herrick points out four steps farmers can take to head off trouble from cholera:

1. Vaccinate only healthy hogs.
2. If serum and virus are used, vaccinate the pigs when they are 7 to 8 weeks old. A permanent immunity is not apt to be established if pigs are vaccinated under 6 weeks.
3. If the issue vaccines are used, pigs should not be vaccinated until they are 10 to 12 weeks of age. Immunity is not established until about 21 days after pigs are treated. Pigs vaccinated with these products should be revaccinated if kept for breeding purposes.
4. If hogs are sick, have a diagnosis made immediately on your farm or in your community.

EGG PRICES WILL RISE FOR SEVERAL MONTHS

Iowa farmers can expect to see rising egg prices until late in the year, according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist. He points out that so far this year, farmers have averaged about 12 cents per dozen more eggs than in 1950. Although egg production has been slightly below last year, the main reason for the increase is a stronger demand for eggs.

Since feed prices have not gone up as much as egg prices, poultry profits have been higher than in 1950, Kutish explains.

He adds that this situation should continue for several months. Farmers raised fewer early chicks than they did a year ago, with young chickens on farms April 1 down 7 percent from last year. However, the hatchery business picked up during April, and May 1, farmers had 5 percent more chicks and young chickens than they did a year ago.

The smaller number of early pullets indicates that it will be late in 1950 before new pullets can add much to the available egg supply. Fewer eggs are in storage this year, and military egg-buying will probably be maintained. These factors add up to shrinking egg supplies for the next 5 or 6 months with demand remaining as strong or becoming stronger than it is as present, the economist concludes.

Bridges

In Buchanan county, seven bridges were washed out in a single night of heavy rain, on June first.

STERILITY IN COWS IS COSTLY TO DAIRYMEN

Sterility and other breeding troubles are one of the main causes of cows being removed from dairy herds, according to Dr. John B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

He estimates that between 8 and 10 percent of the cattle are removed from herds in the United States each year because of these problems. The sterility loss amounts to about 250 million dollars a year.

A dairyman can figure that every repeat breeding for a cow will cost him between $12 and $16 depending upon the price of butterfat. That is not the actual cost of breeding but his cut in returns from the lengthened calving interval.

Here's Program

There are several things the dairymen can do to eliminate sterility and breeding problems from their herds. The program should begin with the raising of the heifer calves. They need adequate rations and protection to get them off to a good start and to insure their being mature at breeding time.

Heifers can be bred when they are sexually mature. This means not before they are 15 months old in most cases. Cows in production should not be bred until they have gone through at least two heat periods after calfing. This will allow the reproductive tract to get back in conditions for producing another calf. The average cow usually comes in heat 25 to 50 days after calving.

Herrick emphasizes that timing is very important in breeding, especially if artificial breeding is used. It is best to breed at the end of the heat period. If the cow is bred too early, the sperm may die before it fertilizes the egg. If she is bred too late, the egg may be conditioned so it cannot be fertilized.

Bull One Cause

One cause of breeding trouble that is often overlooked is the bull when natural service is used. Herrick urges being on guard when community bulls are owned in partnership with neighbors. A bull can easily transmit diseases from one farm to the next.

Maintaining a Bang'sfree herd is another aid in eliminating sterility and breeding problems. This can be done through a calfhood vaccination and testing program.

Farmers will also find their veterinarian helpful in eliminating troubles. Herrick suggests having the herd examined frequently by a veterinarian. He can determine whether or not cows are pregnant and what may be causing troubles in some cows. He can also determine whether or not a cow is sterile and if she should be sold rather than kept around to eat costly feed.

Sisters

Two Iowa sisters were run over and hospitalized by the same automobile recently as they were visiting a third sister, who was also in the hospital there. The Iowa ladies were Miss Lillian Crone of Washington and Mrs. Lenora Hicks of Hampton.

Klemme High School Alumni Will Have Banquet And Program Friday Eve

The Klemme High School Alumni will hold their annual banquet and program at the high school gymnasium this week Friday evening.

A fine program has been arranged for the occasion and it is hoped that a large crowd of graduates will be in attendance.

Fast Work

Three Ames youths learned rather quickly last week that crime doesn't pay. Within 30 minutes from the time they had broken into a rural schoolhouse in Franklin county, they were picked up by Sheriff Paul Hodgson at Iowa Falls A farmer had seen the lads climb out of the schoolhouse window and phoned their license number to the sheriff.

WHAT'S BUTTER GOT, MOM, THAT MAKES IT SO MUCH BETTER?

Even a child quickly learns there's nothing like Butter. It adds the crowning touch of flavor to so many other foods.

Yes, Taste tells us there's nothing like Butter. And Science tells us why — because each pound contains the golden goodness from ten quarts of Milk. Rich in Vitamin A plus a wealth of energy-building elements, Butter is one basic food your family deserves . . . the very foundation of good American living.

Serve Butter at every meal! Use it generously in cooking. In flavor-value and health-value, it's your best buy.

BETTER VALUE, TOO—In real wages, Butter and other dairy foods are low in cost. Today, it takes the average person less than a half-hour's work to buy a pound of butter. In 1920, it took more than an hour.

OLD GARDEN PLANTS CAN BE USED AS MULCH

Old pea vines and early crops such as lettuce or radishes that have gone to seed can be put to good use as a mulch when they are through producing vegetables.

M W Reger, Iowa State College extension horticulturist, suggests using old garden plants, lawn clippings and even weeds that have not gone to seed, for mulching material in the vegetable garden.

Oats straw or any material that doesn't bring seed into the garden can be used to keep moisture in the soil when hot, dry summer weather sets in. By preventing evaporation of moisture from the soil surface, more water is available to growing plants over a longer period of time, Reger explains.

SCHEDULE TRAINING SCHOOL FOR PROSPECTIVE DHIA SUPERVISORS

Paul Henderson, county extension director, has announced a 3-week short course at Iowa State College for training men interested in becoming dairy herd improvement association supervisors. The course is tuition-free, the only expense involved being that spent for board and lodging.

Several DHIA supervisor positions are now open over the state, according to Henderson He thinks some Hancock County men would do well to investigate the possibilities of getting into the work

DHIA supervisory work offers an unusual opportunity to obtain broad and useful experience in the dairy business, Henderson points out. The supervisor works one day per month with each of about 26 of the leading dairymen in his community This puts him in a good position to evaluate the various practices he observes.

A good many men have found the experience valuable later on when they have used these ideas in operating their own farm businesses and in performing the duties of some other business connected with dairying.

Subject matter covered at the training school includes instruction in the testing of milk and correct methods of computing and recording DHIA records. In addition, students are taught the principls of good feeding and management

Application for a position as DHIA supervisor may be made at the county extension office or by contacting the Dairy Husbandry Extension Office, 202 Morrill Hall, Ames

SLEEPY-TIME WAYS

Going To Bed Can Be Fun—

A pleasant routine at bedtime can eliminate that tearful "I don't want to go to bed, Mommy!" Don't just snatch your youngster's favorate puzzle away from him and hurry him off to his crib. He wants his activities respected just as the grownups do.

Bedtime is a pleasant time. It need not present problems, especially when we understand just what it means to a little boy or girl.

To a small tot, bedtime means being taken away from his puzzles or red fire truck, says Alma Jones, Iowa State College child development specialist. It means being whisked out of the family circle before mom and dad and big sister need to go upstairs to bed. It means being left in a room alone and in a bed all by himself. All this may seem strange to a little child and can shake his sense of security Children can have that "all-alone" feeling, too.

Respect His Activities

"A child likes having his activities respected and wants time to finish things, even as you and I do," says Mrs. Jones. So give him an idea of how much he can get done before bedtime—one puzzle, one castle of blocks And give him a little warning, a little time to get used to the idea.

It's a good plan to get him into his pajamas ahead of time, and let him play awhile, so that the transition from living room to crib isn't so drastic. And one way to help him associate his crib with something more than being tucked in and left by himself for the night is to have a "story time" up in his room just before the lights go out. He's very folksy, that youngster of yours, so try to withdraw your companionship as gradually as possible.

If your small boy or girl is afraid of the dark, just reassuring him that there's nothing to fear isn't going to be enough, says Mrs. Jones. Some families have a pilot light burning in the hall—it takes almost no electricity and often gives enough light so that a child will be happy when the bedroom door is left open. The main thing is to give him a feeling of security. You might tuck him in with the familiar cuddle toy. An armful of soft, dearly beloved teddy bear can make a big difference in a little boy or girl s attitude towards the sandman.

Bedtime Attitude Starts Early

A child's whole attitude toward going to bed starts when he is very young and carries through into adolescence. So don't make the mistake of the parent who sometimes punishes his youngster by banishing him from the family circle and sending him to bed early. This gives him the idea that going to bed is hard luck, says Mrs. Jones.

If your small fry wanders into your room late in the evening, 'way after he should have been sound asleep, he isn't being naughty. He probably woke up in the night, or had trouble going to sleep, and wanted some companionship and reassurance from his mom and dad. It's very important to give him that reassurance and companionship, says Mrs. Jones, and then tuck him back into bed again.

All this doesn't mean you shouldn't have a definite schedule or routine in the evening, a definite time for the children to go to bed. A pleasant evening routine might be pajama time, a story, and then good night.

SPORTSMEN GAME BIRD REARING PROGRAM NOW UNDER WAY

During the next four months forty-three sportsmen's groups will be foster-mothering 21,000 baby quail and pheasant chicks whose only other mother has been the giant incubator at the state game farm near Boone

Twenty-six groups in south and eastern Iowa will rear 9,500 quail. The birds are being delivered at two weeks of age and will be held in rearing pens for seven weeks. At nine weeks they will be released on farms in which game cover improvements have been carried out.

Seventeen sportsmen's clubs are rearing 11,500 pheasant chicks. These birds are stocked on a state-wide basis, also on farms on which cover programs have been carried out. The last shipment of baby chicks will be delivered to conservation clubs prior to Aug. 1st.

Lightnig

A lighting bolt struck and killed Oran Sauter, young Rembrant farmer, on a pasture of his farm. He was bringing in livestock when hit by the bolt, which burned most of the clothes from his body.

USE EARLY CORN, BEANS OR SUDAN IN WET PLACES

Low, wet spots and fields that couldn't be worked earlier this spring will produce a profitable forage or cash crop, says E. S. Dyas, Iowa State college agronomist.

He thinks farmers who need extra forage can make good use of sudan grass. In 4-year tests at Iowa State College, average yields were 3 tons per acre when sudan was planted on June 21 and 2.6 tons when planted July 5. Sudan planted as late as July 26 had a 4-year average of 1.3 tons per acre.

Another provitable hay or pasture crop that Dyas says works well is a mixture of soybeans and sudan. He recommends drilling 1½ bushels of soybeans and 5 pounds of sudan per acre for late-seeded summer forage.

For Iowa growers who want to plant a cash crop on wet, low areas that haven't been seeded yet, the agronomist suggests soybeans or early corn hybrids.

Use care in selecting corn hybrids that are early, since these low, wet areas are often the first to be hit by early frosts. However, these same low areas usually have very fertile soils that are capable of producing high yields if weather conditions are normal for the remainder of the growing season.

A publication, "Emergency Crops for Late Planting," can be obtained by writing to the Department of Agronomy farm crops) at the college.

SECOND COVER SPRAY WILL PROTECT YOUR FRUIT PROSPECTS

Hancock County fruit growers are being urged by County Extension Director Paul Henderson to protect their excellent 1951 fruit prospects with a second cover spray.

He says the second cover spray should be applied 2 weeks after the first cover spray. While cool weather has kept down codling moth activity so far this year, warm weather is likely to bring heavy emergence.

For apples, pears, plums and cherries, Henderson suggests applying 2½ pounds of dry lime sulfur and 1 pound of 50 percent wettable DDT in 50 gallons of water. Three gallons of this mixture would require 8 tablespoons of dry lime sulfur and 4 tablespoons of 50 percent wettable DDT.

For peaches and apricots use 3 pounds of wettable sulfur, 1 pound of lead arsenate and 1½ pounds of hydrated lime in a 50 gallon spray mixture For 3 gallons of spray for peaches and apricots use 9 tablespoons of wettable sulfur, 4 tablespoons of lead arsenate and 6 tablespoons of wettable sulfur, 4 tablespoons of lead arsenate and 6 tablespoons of hydrated lime A. E. Cott, Iowa State College extension horticulturist warns against using lime sulfur compounds on peaches and apricots, the county extension director adds.

He says the rainy weather during the past 2 or 3 weeks has been favorable for apple scab infections on leaves, but he thinks Hancock County orchardists who have sprayed carefully shouldn't have any trouble

HAYING ACCIDENTS NEEDN'T INCREASE

But More Machinery Has Changed Their Nature

The mechanization of haying on Iowa farms hasn't necessarily increased the chances for accidents but has changed the nature of the hazards somewhat, according to Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College.

The big difference is working with power machinery and horses is that machines can't think while horses can. The man must do all of the thinking when operating power machinery For example, a horse wouldn't walk into a hole if he saw it while a tractor will go anywhere it is driven. On the other hand, a tractor is more controllable than a horse.

Speed Not To Blame

Accidents such as getting tangled up in a power take-off have come on the haying scene with machanization. At the same time, there are fewer accidents involving horses.

Mechanization has increased the speed of getting the job done, but Wardle doesn't think that speed in itself causes more accidents. However, failure on the part of farm workers to use speed correctly and lack of adjusting themselves to the increased speed of doing the job sometimes causes trouble. Too, speed increases the seriousness of injuries that occur.

Wardle Offers Tips

Wardle offers these suggestions for improving the safety of haymaking: Use equipment which is in good condition, always have the power take-off shield in place on the tractor, use a metal sediment bulb on the tractor fuel line, stop machines to lubricate, adjust, repair or clean; wear snug-fitting clothing, allow no extra riders, especially children, on tractors or loads of hay and stand on the ground rather than on the endge of the load when tipping or pulling the fork back out of the barn.

OUST CHIGGERS, ANTS BY USING CHLORDANE

Chlordane is the chemical "helping hand" that Iowans are looking for to keep ants from messing up lawns and to get rid of the annual chigger annoyance.

Both ants and chiggers can be controlled by chlordane mixed at the rate of 2 or 4 ounces (4 to 8 tablespoons) of concentrate per gallon of water, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. This amount of material should be enough to cover 100 square feet of lawn. Individual ant hills may be treated by applying such a solution very thoroughly over them.

QUALITY OF TILE MORE IMPORTANT THAN KIND

Quality means more than kind of tile when it comes to getting good drainage systems on farms.

In fact, it doesn't make any difference what kind of drain tile you buy as long as it is good-quality tile, meeting the specifications of the American Society of Testing Materials, according to Dale Hull, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

It costs as much to lay weak or poorly made tile as good tile. Hull advises buying well burned and properly made clay tile or well made and properly cured concrete tile.

An entire farm drainage system is no better than the poorest tile in a line, Hull points out. If one tile breaks and collapses under the load of the fill soil or detriorates, the system won't work effectively. All tile above a break can't function. If the failure is near the outlet, the entire system is useless.

Water enters tile at the underside of the joint. Therefore, Hull says that good drain tile should be uniformly round and srtaight. The ends must be clean-cut so that they may be laid to grade in a well shaped ditch. In general, tile which absorb large quantities of water are weaker than those which absorb small amounts.

High-quality clay tile will give a ring when stood on end and tapped lightly, if they are dry. The ring doesn't apply to cement tile. There is no simple test for cement tile. However, Hull will supply names of testing laboratories upon request to him.

Obvious checks and cracks extending into the body of any kind of tile so as to weaken them structurally indicate poor quality.

Escaped

When his trailer truck crashed through a bridge on the Boyer river at Woodbine recently, Joseph Peronne of Omaha has swam to shore and escaped with his life. The truck and trailer sank out of sight. The impact threw open the cab door and permitted Peronne to make his exit.

Mixup

A total of eight cars were involved in one accident near Osceola recently. When the lead machine slowed down, the following cars piled up like an accordion. Prime cause of the accident was attempt of one car to pass a truck going uphill. A machine coming from the opposite direction forced him back into the line, causing the next automobile to slow suddenly. The offending driver kept on going.

What Makes Bread So Good?
BUTTER

Bread and butter--one of the world's natural combinations for good eating. And mothers . . . spread on lots of butter . . . for that's what makes bread taste so good. Butter increases the appetite-appeal for so many foods. Adds nutrition too. Its natural golden color comes from rich golden cream—since four pints of cream go into the making of each pound of butter.

For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness, there's nothing finer than high-score Iowa butter for which our creamery has built such a reputation. Use butter generously in cooking, and at every meal.

BOOK OF FREEDOM

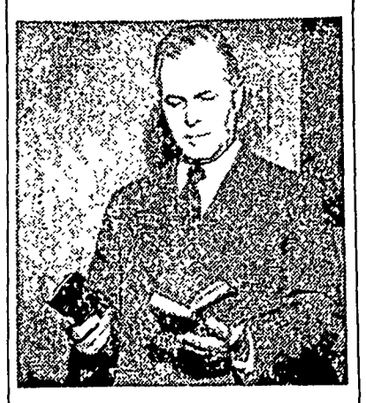
U.S. Society Has Distributed 406 Million Bibles in 135 Years

This year, the American Bible Society will celebrate 135 years of service in promoting wider circulation of the Bible. It was in May, 1816, that a group of Christian leaders gathered in New York and founded the national society for the distribution of the Bible .

America was embarking on a great period of expansion when the Bible Society was founded New York was a small city of some 100,000 people clustered around the Battery, but the country was spreading westward. Already settlements of hundreds, then thousands of homes were dotting the wilderness. It was the era of the American pioneer, and along with the need for roads and schools came another—the need for Bibles.

Although there were local societies for this purpose in their own communities, none was able to fulfill the needs to the west. It was Samuel J. Mills, "the father of the foreign missions," who was most instrumental in calling together the historic meeting which brought about the formation of a national Bible society. Many notables of the day were in attendance. Among them were Dr. Lyman Beecher, "the father of all the Beechers," James Fenimore Cooper and Elias Boudinot, who as president of the Continental Congress had signed the peace treaty with Great Britain in 1789.

Boudinot was elected the first president of the society His vice-president was John Jay, the first chief justice of the United States supreme court. In later years, still another great supreme court chief justice was to serve as vice-president of the society, Charles Evans Hughes. The first treasurer was Richard Varick, the second mayor of New York City.



Dr. Frederick W. Cropp, general secretary of the American Bible Society, holds in his right hand a copy of the Scriptures which the society distributed to soldiers during the Civil War. In his left hand is the edition being distributed to servicemen today.

AS AMERICA expanded, so did the society. From their first small headquarters in the offices of a printer, they moved into their own establishment. After repeated enlargements, the society moved to their own building on Astor Place, which was then so far uptown as to be considered almost a suburb of the city The Bible House, which was the only building of its day to occupy an entire block in New York, was the show place of the city. Today, although the Astor Place Bible House is still being used, main headquarters for the society is housed in a modern building on Park Avenue and 57th Street in New York.

The number of Bibles, whole and in portions, printed by the American Bible Society since their first edition of 10,000 Bibles in 1816 is staggering During the Civil War period alone it issued in the United States 5,297,832 Scriptures, most of which were New Testaments for soldiers fighting on both sides. In its first 50 years, the American Bible Society had distributed 21,409,996 volumes; in one hundred years, 123,292,359 copies of the Scriptures had been distributed. At the end of 135 years, 406,422,004 volumes of the Scriptures were distributed in 1,000 languages.

And yet the distribution increases each year. "Never before has the Bible been so wanted," said Dr. Robert T. Taylor, general secretary of the society, at the 135th annual meeting held in New York recently. "The 1950 reports show a record distribution in almost every part of the world. In my ten years in the Bible Society I have been nurtured on emergencies, but I have never seen anything like the present opportunities."

Today the American Bible Society is a prime factor in making the Bible the least expensive and most widely distributed book in the world In many languages, a Gospel may be had for as little as one cent and if the penny isn't available, it may be had for nothing.

It is America's most purchased book. It is the world's best seller. But it is more than that. Horace Greeley once said, "It is impossible in any wise to enslave a Bible-reading people." The Bible is a book of freedom.

THE FICTION CORNER

WRONG AND RIGHT

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

OF COURSE it was wrong for Johnny to kiss her and it was right for Jinny to slap his face. They stood there with the desk chair between them, staring at each other for a full moment. Jinny recovered first. She turned away and walked to the door with her head high and went out.

Johnny sighed and sat down at his desk He was amazed and disgusted with himself. Ten minutes ago he had been the practical executive He had rung for his secretary, Miss Alyne, and a girl with titian colored hair and blue eyes had appeared instead.

"I'm Jinny Alison," she explained matter-of-factly. "Miss Alyne is ill today and I'm taking her place."

She had stood looking at him from the other side of the chair, and without saying a word he had reached out and pulled her toward him and kissed her, and she had slapped his face.

Sitting at his desk Johnny wondered why he hadn't noticed Jinny Alison before. She must be new, he told himself. Te gestured angrily. What a fool he'd made of himself.

He didn't believe in mixing business with—well, with things like that. And, he told himself fiercely, he wasn't going to begin now. Miss Alison would have to be dismissed. He couldn't have a girl around whom he'd kissed and who might think of him as—well, in that way.

He stood up, grimly determined. The matter had better be attended to at once. Half way to the outer office he stopped short. Suppose Miss Alison had already quit? Probably she had. The possibility that this might be the case brought on a sense of panic. He rushed to the door and opened it, was vastly relieved to discover a titian-colored head bent over a desk close by the door.

"I'm Jinny Alison," she explained matter-of-factly. "Miss Alyne is ill today and I'm taking her place."

He went back to his own desk Well, she hadn't quit and he wouldn't fire her. No, he decided to let her stay and ignore her entirely

During the remainder of the morning he put Miss Alison from his mind. When he had letters to dictate he rang for a stenographer in exaggerated unconcern. And when prim Abby Nathan appeared he told himself he was relieved.

THAT night Johnny went to sleep putting Jinny out of his mind. The next morning he reached the office before nine. At 9:15 he opened the door of the outer office and breathed easy again when he saw that Jinny was at her post. At noon he looked toward her desk on his way out, caught her eye and felt strangely sick when she turned coldly away During lunch he became pretty grim, admitting to himself that he was making rather a mess of his resolve. Miss Alison would have to go. There was no use, he just couldn't concentrate with her on his conscience. It would solve the whole problem to have her out of his sight.

His first act on reaching the office was to call Miss Nathan and ask her to send in Miss Alison.

Jinny, notebook in hand, entered and stood looking at him from the other side of the interview chair just as she had the day he had kissed her.

"Miss Alison," he began, and stopped. He cleared his throat importantly, "Miss Alison, I've called you in to—to apologize for what happened the day before yesterday."

"Oh," said Jinny.

"I don't want you to think," Johnny went on, scarcely recognizing his own voice, "that I—er—kiss—er—act that way with all—with other stenographers."

"Oh, I don't," said Jinny, her eyes wide.

"In fact," said Johnny, "you're the first one, I mean, well—" He stopped, desperate, panicky, angry "Miss Alison, you're fired!"

"Oh!" said Jinny.

Johnny gulped. "No. I don't mean that! What I mean is, I can't concentrate unless—unless—we have an understanding. Oh, the devil! That wasn't what I intended to say at all. I mean, Miss Alison, would you like to go out to dinner with me?"

"It might be nice," Jinny agreed

Mac Could Have Left UN Command, Kept Japan Job

By Wright A. Patterson

NOW THAT we have heard both sides I am convinced that General MacArthur has the best of the argument, and it would seem that General Marshall, as spokesman for the administration, largely concedes that. What I still do not understand is why it was necessary to summarily relieve General MacArthur of all of his duties in the far east, where his opponents admit he had done an outstanding job.

If the United Nations took exception to his proposed methods, that organization could have asked President Truman to have made a change in their field commander, for he was employed by the United Nations as supreme commander of its forces in Korea.

That would have left MacArthur in Japan where he had done a remarkable job, and where he was needed, at least, until a Japanese peace treaty was completed. That would have saved for us a man who General Marshall says is better qualified to advise on military and diplomatic lines than any other man in the world to-day, and whom we need in directing and formulating a far eastern policy.

Through the senate investigation, the President may have molified many members of his party, to an extent that they will accept the verdict, whatever it may be, if any. But nationally, he has lost with the people much of the leadership he had previously enjoyed.

If he had to fire a general, why did he not exercise his authority on Gen. Harry Vaughn. His passing would not have been considered a serious loss, or regretted by any, other than the recipients of deep freeze units.

The whole MacArthur incident has resulted only in a loss to the nation of a valuable, and specially talented administrator and soldier at a time when we are in sad need of such talents.

Many of our ills are caused by feeling sorry for ourselves.

Defense mobilization director, Charles E. Wilson, a President Truman appointee, has made a new move in the way of socialistic centralization of the government. He has instructed the governors of all states, the mayors of all large cities, and the governments of all counties that they can not borrow money in excess of one million dollars with which to finance new, or uncompleted projects, without first getting a clearance from his office.

The first of such notices should have gone to the White House. The one individual most prone to start new, and unneeded projects is Mr. Wilson's big boss, President Truman. The next of such notices should have gone to congress.

The states, cities and counties are but small fry in the matter of unnecessary spending. How about the St. Lawrence waterway and the deepening of the Missouri river from Sioux City to Kansas City, just to mention a couple that call for many millions

The tax payers would enthusiastically applaud his efforts, if successful, when applied to the President, and to congress, and especially to the congressional "pork" bill. Wilson holds a federal job. His direction to the state, city and county governments is a violation of the Constitution, and abridgement of the rights of local governments, including those of the states.

I know of some counties where that edict, if it could be made to stick, would be valuable to the people of those counties, but the principle is wrong. The place where it is most needed, and the people with whom it is most needed, are right there in Washington.

How can we reconcile the World War III wolf cry of to-day that is followed tomorrow with the optimistic assurance of approaching global peace? We have had such statements at intervals since the fighting stopped in Germany. So many times has the wolf cry been sounded, that the American people no longer believe in either. We do not get excited about them. To-day Joe Stalin is a deep-dyed villian, tomorrow he is a fine old fellow, with only peace in his heart. We have lost our fear of the big, bad wolf.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

MacArthur Flouts Orders

THE senate's ruling that star witnesses in the MacArthur hearings will not have to testify regarding confidential conversations presumably will hold for confidential conversations between Gen. Omar Bradley and the other members of the joint chiefs of staff.

However, some of their private reactions during the MacArthur discussions are significant. Inside fact is that the joint chiefs were extremely nervous about the idea of ousting MacArthur and took care to avoid the word "recommend" in reporting to the White House that MacArthur be fired.

Instead, and after considerable private debate, they decided to use the words "militarily advisable." Therefore, a report that it was "militarily advisable" to relieve MacArthur was signed by all four of the joint chiefs.

Despite this compromise-wording there was no question among the joint chiefs that MacArthur should go. There were three general reasons for this view, and it is interesting that none of them really agreed with Truman's reasons—namely, MacArthur's flouting of orders by discussing foreign policy.

Reason No. 1 was the fact that the joint chiefs considered MacArthur too rash as a military commander and likely to let American forces in for more trouble.

Tying MacArthur's Hands

That was why they actually tied his hands with the military directive regarding the bombing of Chinese bases. They decided that he could bomb Chinese bases if—and there were two very big ifs—1. The Communists threw in enough air power to jeopardize our ground troops; or 2. If the Chinese attacked any U N. ships or installations outside Korea.

But MacArthur was given a further directive that before he could do any bombing in either of the above categories he must first consult the joint chiefs. In other words, what might provoke MacArthur into bombing Manchuria might not be enough to provoke the joint chiefs They didn't trust his judgment, were afraid he would interpret these conditions far more liberally than they.

Reason No 2 was the fact that MacArthur was not one to take suggestions or guidance from the joint chiefs. While it is J C.S policy not to dictate to the commander in the field, they do reserve the right to give general guidance and make suggestions.

And they were quite provoked during MacArthur's November advance into North Korea that he ignored their warning that there was no battle communication between General Walker's 8th army and General Almond's 10th corps. When the joint chiefs warned MacArthur about this, he replied, rather coldly, that there was sufficient liaison.

However, the joint chiefs, still not satisfied, asked MacArthur a second time why General Almond and his 10th corps were operating independently of the 8th army, leaving a big gap between the two forces MacArthur replied, unconvincingly, that General Almond and his 10th corps were drawing Chinese pressure away from the 8th army.

Later, when the Chinese struck, they picked the hole that had worried the joint chiefs, and smashed right into the vacuum between the 10th corps and the 8th army Reason No 3 however, what finally got the joint chiefs really sore at MacArthur was the way his statement about using Chiang Kai-Shek's troops in Korea killed the universal military training bill.

For months the joint chiefs had set their hearts on passing universal military training for the first time in the history of the nation. But two days after MacArthur's statement urging that we use Chiang's Formosan troops, the U.M.T. bill was dead. MacArthur had killed it. For congress was under immediate fire from the voters to use Chinese troops instead of expanding the draft.

U. N. Troops

A lot has been published about the failure of our United Nations friends to support us in Korea, but not much about certain unexpected support.

Italy, for instance, is not a member of the U.N., but has asked for permission to send units to Korea. So far, nothing definite has been worked out.

Unoriginality in Names

David Zaslavsky, chief editor of Pravda, let off steam at a recent meeting of the pro-Communist international organization of journalists meeting at Budapest.

Among other things, he branded "Drew Pearson" a "warmonger."

There's nothing like being versatile. I have now been called a "Communist" by Senator McCarthy, a warmonger by the editor of Pravda, and an S.O.B. by President Truman. It's about time somebody thought up some new names.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU—CO

Small Business Worries

THE DEFENSE agencies and the various control agencies set up under the national production act maintain they are giving every consideration to small business firms in the letting of both prime and sub-contracts, giving them full information and bid opportunities, even permitting a price differential so that small business may get a part of the government business although unable to compete price-wise with some of their larger competitors.

The defense production administration has just issued a 31-page booklet called a "Mobilization Guide for Small Business." It tells them how they can obtain defense contracts and procure materials, informs them on loan and tax privileges, gives them assistance on management and on conversion from civilian to military production. DPA is an over-all policy organization on the production front and it says that through June 30, 1950, small business provided $1,310,615,000 or 24 5 per cent of the dollar volume of all military purchases of supplies, services and construction. And since that time, with military purchases heavier, the contention is that small business is getting an even greater per cent.

But former Sen. Jerry Voohis of California, who is now the executive secretary of the Cooperative League of the USA, maintains this is not so, that small business is "faring even worse in this emergency than it did in World War II." The former senator is pushing for the establishment of a small defense plants corporation, similar to the smaller war plants corportation which was in existence during the last war. He says that most contracts for war materials are being awarded on a negotiated basis rather than by publicly advertised competitive bidding.

A few weeks ago DPA, through its small business executive committee placed into effect a four-point program for increasing participation of small business in defense production. They included: (1) To bring into the defense effort on a prime contract, sub-contract or purchase part basis every qualified producer who can be used so that orders can be spread across as wide a base as possible; (2) to find out and put to work the productive facilities of small firms, (3) to give small manufacturers all necessary information concerning government needs and the steps they should follow in obtaining sub-contracts as well as prime contracts, and (4) to develop and install procurement procedures which will encourage prime contractors to subcontract to small firms the maximum amount of business possible.

Favors Beef Controls

It may or may not be significant, but the National Farmers Union, as opposed to the Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange, strongly favors price controls on beef cattle. And the Farmers Union is strongest in the plains states of the Dakotas, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and Montana where a large percentage of beef cattle is raised.

An official of the Washington office of the National Farmers Union told this reporter he would like nothing better than to have enough money to buy cattle and have range to feed them on at OPS ceiling prices for live cattle. He thinks there is plenty of incentive in OPS prices for an ever-increased production of beef herds.

Common Courtesy

When politics takes a hand so does bias and prejudice. The manner and attitude with which some senators questioned Generals Omar Bradley and Marshall before the joint senate committee has almost become a Washington scandal. Whereas these same senators questioned General MacArthur with courtesy and deference, and never questioned his refusal to answer a question, the same senators fumed, and yelled and sought to browbeat Generals Bradley and Marshall and did not even treat them with common courtesy. When General Bradley, rightly, refused to answer a question he was even threatened with contempt. And yet, these two—Bradley and Marshall—are of equal military rank and the superiors of MacArthur. Both are national heroes with a long record of distinguished military service to our country.

Power Funds Slashed

The state department has just worked out tariff cuts with 17 other nations under the Reciprocal Trade Act which will result in greater exports for American producers. But the house has voted several crippling amendments to extension of the act and it appears the senate may concur. And almost while the country's back has been turned watching Kefauver, MacArthur and other interesting shows, the public power program has been slashed

FRIENDLY AND UNFRIENDLY WITNESSES . . . The military attaches of most foreign countries were among the thousands who watched U.S. armed forces parade in Washington recently. Some of these attaches represented friendly and others represented nations not so friendly. Saluting here are Sir Neil Ritchie (left), chief of staff of the British army, Major Theodore Birgeron, foreign liaison officer of the United States army, and Major General Alexsandr (right) of the Soviet army. Just what the Soviet officer thought of American military might was not reflected by his polite, but immobile, features.

PERON ATOM EXPERT REPORTED ARRESTED . . . A front page story in a Rio de Janeiro newspaper said recently that President Juan D. Peron, president of Argentina (right), has ordered the arrest of Dr. Ronald Richter (left), the scientist whom President Peron hailed two months ago as discoverer of a new process for releasing atomic energy. The newspaper story said military technicians of Argentina's army had analyzed Dr. Richter's atomic "discovery" and discovered that the whole thing was "a colossal bluff." Motive for the hoax carried out by the scientist is not known.

TIGHTROPE MARATHON . . . Helmut Horlants, 23, set out recently to break the record for tightrope walking of 52 hours, by stretching a rope across the city hall square in Stockerau, Austria. He held out until he had accomplished his goal and didn't come off the wire for 76 hours. He wasn't alone in his marathon. He had a band of well-wishers far below him on the street, while he sat there during a rain, walking along the rope for diversion, and taking his meals on one foot. What reward he received for his new record wasn't learned ADONIS ON TRIAL . Joe Adonis, named by senate crime group as co-leader with Frank Costello of the underworld in the east, arrives at Hackensack, N.J., courthouse to go on trial on charges of operating billion dollar gambling set-up.

FRIENDS ONCE ENEMIES . . . These two American soldiers fought against each other in World War II, one on the side of the allies and one on the side of the Germans. They are now members of a combat battalion in Korea and the best of friends. P.F.C. Saul Weinberger, New York (left), was an inmate in a German concentration camp 1942-45. P.F.C. Fred Strohecker, Philadelphia (right), was a pilot with the German Luftwaffe.

OLD SOLDIER DIES . . . "General" Jacob S. Coxey, leader of the famous Coxey's army in a march on Washington in 1894, was given funeral rites recently in Massillon, Ohio. He died of a cerebral hemorrhage at the age of 97.

Cost-of-Living Index Stabilized For First Time Since June, 1950

THAT RISING SPIRAL—The government's predictions that prices would level off as a result of its numerous and sometimes confusing price regulations, seemed to be borne out with the announcement that the cost-of-living index has come to a dead stop.

The bureau of labor statistics put out two sets of figures that indicated the upward spiral had stopped for the first time since the outbreak of the Korean War last June.

Price Chief DiSalle
He told irate farm bloc his beef rollback order was justified.

As for food prices, the average home town housewife couldn't notice any decline, but according to government figures it was there—all .2 of a per cent of it. At the present time food prices are approximately 11.1 per cent above last June.

The confusing beef picture remained about the same with word from the White House that President Truman was "going to stand firm" behind Price Director Michael V. DiSalle on his order for the rollback.

THE PRICE WE PAY—For the first time since the Korean conflict began on June 25 of last year, the price we are paying for victory was made startling clear to the home town mothers and fathers of the nation.

Testifying before house and senate committees, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, reported there have been 72,679 non-battle casualties in Korea, boosting the total of all U.S. casualties in the war to 141,955.

Bradley told the senators there have been 69,276 battle casualties, including 10,680 dead. Of the nonbattle casualties, 612 died of such causes as pneumonia, automobile accidents, etc. Eighty-five per cent of the rest have returned to duty.

Release of these figures confirms rumors long circulated in the nation that casualties have been more than double those officially announced.

TRUMAN AND THE HOME TOWN—It was evident that President Truman had the home towns of the nation on his mind during his recent news conference. At two points he indicated he had been giving them considerable thought.

For one thing, he told newsmen that a third world war would turn American soil into a battle front. He said he believes that the people have enough intelligence and energy to meet any situation. But he indicated he was unwilling to take a chance on seeing how they would react under the destruction another world struggle would bring to the home towns of the nation.

The President would not say whether he will be a candidate again in 1952, but he did indicate another of his famous cross-country tours to tell the home towners his policies was a possibility.

In the 1948 election campaign the President carried his message to the home towners and made hundreds of speeches to small but enthusiastic audiences His appeal on the local level is credited with his success in that campaign. It seems likely, therefore, that another cross-country swing is but a matter of time

APPEAL TO MAIN STREET—Governments may argue and pass regulations, but they are ineffective if Main Street doesn't support them. This outstanding trait of democracy was demonstrated again when the house agriculture committee appealed to housewives and consumer representatives to come forward and defend the beef rollback—aimed at cutting the price of beef 8 to 10 cents at butcher stores by October 1.

Under continued assault from cattlemen, packers and distributors, the committee decided the best counterattack would be from Main Street customers They wanted to hear from any consumers or consumer groups who think the beef order will benefit them.

Meanwhile the government ordered a cut in the number of cattle that may be slaughtered this month. The quota will be 87 per cent of the weight slaughtered in June, 1950. The purpose is to assure fair distribution of livestock among registered slaughterers and to prevent the rise of black markets.

WHAT CHANCES FOR PEACE?—Ever since the MacArthur incident impressed upon the man on Main Street the awful possibility of years of struggle in Korea, one question has been uppermost in the mind of every American—what are the chances for peace?

At present there are being circulated rumors of peace proposals These rumors have grown since United Nations troops broke the back of the second Chinese offensive and then plunged northward to kill and capture thousands of Red troops

But it would be well for the home towner to remember that talk of peace as circulated now are but rumors—nothing more. It would be futile to pin the hope of peace on a rumor and then have it deflated by another Communist attack. Military leaders in Korea report the killing and capture of thousands of Red soldiers, but still warn they are capable of another offensive It is well to remember that peace can not be made by one party—there must be two

RED CROSS IN KOREA—The American Red Cross, to which millions of people in the home towns of the nation have contributed their dollars, this month is launching the operations of 28 clubmobiles for the troops in Korea The clubmobiles, to be staffed by 60 Red Cross girls, were requested by the military because of their adaptability to the quick-shifting Korean war front.

A popular feature of the Red Cross services to the armed forces in World War II, the clubmobiles will provide airmen and ground troops with free coffee and doughnuts, recorded music and stationery.

They will supplement the one large Red Cross club operating at the port of Pusan At present approximately 360 Red Cross workers and more than 3,000 volunteers are now serving American troops in Asia.

The Senator and the General
Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, told house and senate committees investigating the MacArthur affair that U.S. casualties in Korea were 141,955. (See story above.)

FARM MANPOWER PROBLEM

Better Living Standard May Ease Problem

Reports from many sections of the country continue to show no improvement in the farm manpower problem. Draft boards are still handing out few deferments for agriculture.

Industry is also draining off a great part of the remaining farm manpower, reports indicate.

As a result, the nation is entering a period of mobilization—almost a state of war—with the fewest farm workers in its history.

The labor problem is further complicated by the fact that many workers now available are capable of handling nothing more complicated than a hoe. They are a poor substitute for a hired hand or son who has a life-time of training in agronomy, animal husbandry, and power machinery.

Baseball, 1951, Hard on Pitchers

By GRANTLAND RICE

A VETERAN pitcher was talking about the troubles, trials, tribulations and woes that attack modern pitchers.

"In the old days," he said, "up to 1920, pitchers were throwing a comparatively dead ball. Frank Baker earned his nickname of Home-run Baker with nine home runs one season. Gil Hodges of the Dodgers already had nine this season before the first month was over.

"Today, a flock of ballplayers hit from 20 to 50 home runs a year. So the pitcher can't afford to give good hitters a good-looking ball. They must work for the corners, high and low. Also, there are too many short fences or walls where a pop fly is good for a home run.

Grantland Rice

"There's another matter that works against modern pitching. In the old days most of the good pitchers completed most of their games. They were allowed to give up a few hits, bases on balls and runs But today it's different. After a hit and a base on balls the bull pen gets busy. At least two relief pitchers are hard at work. Somebody comes from the bench to talk it over with the pitcher. The pitcher knows that one more hit or one more pass means his day's work is over

"I know what that feeling is. You begin tightening up. You start steering the ball, or trying to steer it. Anyway, all your confidence is gone. How many times this season have you seen one team use from four to six pitchers? It happens a lot. You're in a rough spot when you know you can't afford to make one more mistake. Alexander, Mathewson, Johnson, Young, etc., never had to face situations like that."

It might be whispered, however, that Alexander, Matty, etc, had a much clearer idea of where the plate is located than most of the modern bunch.

Alexander rarely gave anybody a good ball to hit. The same was true of Mathewson, until Matty got well ahead. Knowing he had to work in 40 or more games he always saved his arm when he had a good lead. "Now the outfielders can get in the game," he'd tell you.

For example, in 1908, Ed Walsh worked in 66 games, winning 40 and saving 10 others. Matty worked in well over 50 games, winning 37 and saving eight or ten others. When he pitched that play-off game in 1908 against the Cubs, he could just about lift his arm.

Taking Out the Gamble

Everything connected with racing is supposed to be a gamble. It doesn't quite work out that way.

With the big purses thrown onto the scene, the art or science or luck of breeding has brought an investment angle to the turf that is sound enough for many breeders to follow with a smile.

For example, you can take the breeding farms of George Widener's Elmendorf Farm and Dale Shaffer's Coldstream Stud at Lexington, Ky.

An excited statistician has figured it out that in recent years these two breeding centers have sold 374 yearlings. These horses won a total of $5,788,066, an average of $15,476 each. Their aggregate selling price, we are informed, was $3,582,860, an average of $9,579 each. This is an average of some $5,000 per horse profit for the buyer, which in bulk is a handsome dividend and encourages future sales.

For many years Calumet, through purses and sales, passed a $1,000,000 or more rate each year.

We have an idea that no one stable will reach, or come close to reaching, the million dollar mark in 1951.

Owner Jack Amiel has already lifted nearly $100,000 from the Derby. Great Rush won close to $150,000 in the Maturity Stakes, but this stable won't win very much more. Certainly, Mr. Amiel has no vision of a big clean-up.

Jimmy Jones finally got another win out of Coaltown, but Citation blew another start. You feel almost the same way about Citation as you do about Joe Louis.

You remember great years and then to see these two brilliant ex-champions floundering.

Both at their peaks were rated with the best in the game. Now both have lost stature and prestige by their closing efforts to handle time.

No one can handle time except the sun. Even clocks and calendars wear out.

Natural Hitter

"Just what is a natural hitter?" I once asked Johnny Mize.

"I guess you just like to swing a bat," he said. "I know I always did. I learned to follow the ball with my eyes all the way."

Johnny Mize was never a fast or an active man. He had a bad knee when he came to the Cardinals, was sent to the Reds, and came back to the Cardinals. He was supposed to be through with big-league baseball back in 1935 That was 16 years ago. But here's the Demorest Demon back under the Big Tent in 1951, swinging one of the most dangerous bats in the game.

The chances are that an odd collection known as Mantle, Morgan and Mize will have quite a bit to say about the Yankees continued success this season.

AMATEUR PROGRAM BEING PLANNED FOR JULY 4TH

Cash Prizes Offered All Final Entrants At Clear Lake

An amateur talent program is being planned to headline the evening program of the 1951 July 4th celebration in Clear Lake, Iowa, it was announced by Syd Halford, chairman of the celebration. The entertainment committee headed by Robert Roseland, Louis Schuler and A. B Engen have set up the rules and have proceeded to encourage entries from every possible place.

Any amateur may enter the contest. The act is not to exceed five minutes and may be given by one person or a group of not more than six for any one act.

Cash prizes will be the awards with $100 going to the first place winner of the finals. Second prize is $50 and the 3rd prize is $25. All contestants who are selected for the finals will receive $10 per contestant.

An elimination contest will be held the Tuesday evening of July 3rd and the finals will be the evening of July 4th.

The contest is open to all amateurs in speaking, dramatics, singing, instrumental or any other type of talent.

The entire program will be staged on the waterfront with a gigantic fireworks display the evening of the Fourth. Ted Saucke, chairman of the fireworks, disclosed Tuesday that more fireworks has been purchased for this celebration than in the past and that a preview of the big show will be held the evening of the 3rd.

The amateur talent program will be broadcast both evenings from the stage on the waterfront with Chuck Hilton acting as emcee.

There will also be yacht races and 30 concessions including six rides.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS KILL AS MANY PEOPLE AS BULLETS

An average of 33 American soldiers was killed daily in Korea during the first year of the war, while at home automobile deaths averaged 99 a day, a comparative study of war and traffic fatalities made by the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies disclosed today.

Close to 12,000 combat deaths have occurred among United States forces in Korea since hostilities started on June 25, 1950, according to Defense Department reports. On the eve of the war's first anniversary the Association's accident prevention department estimated that the nation's traffic dead during the same 12-month period totals about 36,050, three times the U. S. death toll in Korean battles.

Traffic Deaths Higher Than War

Traffic deaths currently are seven times heavier than U. S. war fatalities, however, with the estimated June average of 93 lives lost daily on highways almost equaling the low weekly average of 95 soldiers killed in action in Korea as the war entered its 12th month.

American military deaths in all of the nation's wars, including the first year of the Korean conflict, have reached a total of 998,000 in 176 years and two months since the Battle of Lexington on April 19, 1775, the study shows. In the 51 years and six months since the first U. S. automobile death occurred at the turn of the century, nearly 980,000 men, women and children have lost their lives in traffic accidents.

New Feed Mill Open To Public Friday

Free Coffee And Doughnuts Will Be Served To All Visitors

IOWA'S MOST MODERN FEED MILL WILL BE SHOWN TO PUBLIC JUNE 29TH

Was Constructed By T. E. Ibberson Co. Of Minneapolis

Friday of this week, June 29th, will be a big day in Klemme when the formal opening of the Klemme Cooperative Grain Company's new feed mill will be open for public inspection.

The mill, which was constructed and recently completed by the T. E Ibberson Comany of Minneapolis, who specializes in building mills, is the largest and most modern mill of its kind in the State of Iowa.

The mill is complete with all modern machinery to rapidly facilitate the handling of all types of feed grinding, mixing, treating, etc.

Coffee And Doughnuts

The mill will be open to the public beginning at 9:00 and visitors will be shown through the mill until 9:00 p. m. Coffee and doughnuts will be served throughout the day.

Description Of The Mill

Following is a detailed description of the mill. Scattered throughout this issue of The Times will be found pictures and descriptive matter pertaining to the many machines in the new building.

The new mill which has just been completed for the Klemme Coop Grain Company of Klemme, Iowa, it is the largest, most modern custom grinding and feed mixing plant in the Northwest. It has all modern facilities for the processing of grains and also the manufacturing of feeds that go to supply farmers in this community. All the latest and modern improvements have been incorporated in this plant.

New Type Hammer Mill

The new hammer mill in this feed mill is of the latest design having a 75 HP motor which grinds all grain; a 20 HP motor on the blower that takes the ground feed away from the mill and distributes it to the different bins in the mill. The ground feed can either be mixed, bagged, or delivered to the customer in bulk There is also a separate 7½ HP motor that is on a pre-crusher that crushes ear corn before it is ground, thereby speeding up the grinding capacity of the grain.

There is also a magnetic separator on this mill that will remove all tramp iron such as nails, bolts, wreches, and metal that happens to get in the grain when it is brought to the mill to be ground. This modern mill will grind ear corn and oats mixed as well as small grain.

Mill Has Many Features

One of the novel features of this late type of mill is that you can change this mill from a coarse to a medium to a fine grind without stopping the mill. This is all done from the floor with a lever system. This mill is also equipped with two mixers

Minerals Can Be Mixed In

There is a two ton Horizontal Strong & Scott Mixer that is so designed that minerals or any other concentrates can be mixed and do it very quickly and efficiently, and after the feed is mixed it can either be delivered to the farmer by sack, or in the bulk. There is also a one ton mixer installed in the warehouse that can take the overflow from the big mixer which increases the service to the farmer. This plant is capable of mixing 70 ton of mixed feed a day.

Corn Can Be Cracked

There is also a corn cracker located in the mill as well as a grader so that corn can be cracked and separated so that the farmer can either buy coarse corn, medium corn, or fine corn for young chicks. This grader is also equipped with an air system where all dust, flour, and bees wings can be removed from the corn so that the corn is absolutely clean for the customers.

Can Manufacture Rolled Oats

In a room by itself, there is an oat huller that is capable of hulling oats as well as making rolled oats and there is also a leg equipped with this machine so that this unit can be run independent from the rest of the mill so as to give the farmer a lot faster service and keep them from wasting too much time wating to be served. In another room there is a Clipper Cleaner equipped to clean seed grains.

This machine is the very latest type and of the most efficient manufactured. There is leg equipment with this machine so there is no chance of any mixing or any foul seed that gets into the grain that is being cleaned.

Seed Treating A Feature

There is also a seed treater installed in this building of the latest type and gives you the best of service in the treating of seed. All of the bins that we have and machines in the cleaning unit are all ironed on the inside and it is impossible to get any mixture or foul seed of any kind in clean grains This is also hooked up so that it will work as a separate unit giving a farmer a better and faster service.

Automatic Weighing Machines

Located on the work floor is a hopper scale that is used for the weighing of all grains that is to be retailed so that the owners are assured of correct weights when retailing to the farmer.

Bins For All Purposes

All in all in this mill there are 33 bins. These bins consist of processing bins as well as grain bins. There is also two legs in this mill. One is a soft-stock leg for elevating concentrates such as bone meal, alfalfa meal, etc. There is a pneumatic system installed on this leg so that all the concentrates are delivered to the mixer where they are to be mixed. In this weighing all ground feeds or mill there is also a Weight-O-Buggy which is a machine for old grains that are retailed to the customer

A Modern Plant

Taking everything into consideration the people in the community of Klemme, Iowa, are very fortunate to have a modern plant such as this where they will be able to have their feeds mixed and grains ground and grain cleaned and treated and do it with the most modern methods. This plant was built by the T. E. Ibberson Company of Minneapolis who specialize only in the designing and building of these types of plants.

Be sure and come to the opening and see what they have in the very latest in modern building, machines and equipment.

LET'S LEAVE OUR CARS OFF THE STREET FOR THE FARMER PARKING

On Wednesday and Saturday night a few townspeople and business men have been parking their cars early near the moving picture screen and near the band stand.

Let's remember that on Wednesday and Saturday nights we townspeople and business men are hosts to the farmers and out of town visitors. Lets not park our cars in spaces that our good friends, the farmers would like to use for their families Let's give our visitors the choice parking spaces.

Thank you. — The Editor.

The girls were selected from 34 contestants from counties over the State having clothing as their project.

The girls are judged on personal grooming, clothing grooming, accessories, poise and attitude and 4-H clothing record book.

Our History

A BIT OF ANCIENT HISTORY

In the year 1920 the organization now known as the Klemme Coop Grain Co first became a reality.

Dissatisfaction with the then existing marketing set-up was widely discussed among farmers In December of that year, a mass meeting was called Considerable interest was manifest among the seventy men who attended A temporary chairman, Mr. Herman Stille, was elected, and Mr E. J. Arnold was elected secretary. A date was set for a subsequent meeting

In January of 1921 a permanent organization was perfected, and the following directors were elected Herman Stille, John C. Larson, Herman Stromer, E. J. Arnold, Clarence Arnold, Valentine Josten, and Geo. Albers. Articles of incorporation and by-laws were drawn up and recorded. A committee was appointed to undertake the purchase of either of the elevators or to obtain a site on which to build. The latter plan had a few supporters. Three elevators in a small town seemed excessive After repeated attempts to purchase the south elevator, a deal was finally closed with the owner M. O. Hocum, and possession was obtained about May 1, 1921.

For a number of years the infant company had tough going. Shortage of funds, granting of too much credit to customers, falling prices due to the existing depression all conspired to make life miserable for the management. However, a loyal membership and a board of directors who believed firmly in the ultimate success of the enterprise and who never failed to lend credit when most needed helped it to develop into the lusty giant with over 400 members, which you now behold lined up along the Rock Island railway tracks.

Space forbids mention of many who served as directors without pay for many years. W H Greiman has the outstanding record of having served as president more than twenty years.

In 1941 it became necessary, under the Iowa Corporation Laws, to renew the charter. In the meanwhile a new law of Coop. had been enacted. A complete reorganization was undertaken. The original members who had taken shares costing $100 each (some held as many as five) were paid out, and new shares were issued at $10 each This plan brought on a rapid increase in membership and a corresponding upswing in business volume.

In 1948 a much needed addition was secured by the purchase of the north elevator from the North Iowa Grain Co Thus new storage space for 70,000 bushels of grain was obtained The purchase price of $80,000 for this useful plant seemed high at that time, but judging by present standards, was a bargain.

Now in the year 1951 we observe our 30th anniversary. A number of those who pioneered in the enterprise have passed on. We feel confident, however, that the younger men who have taken their places will carry on to still greater success.

Another Step Forward

The construction of the Feed Mill completed another step forward on your local cooperatives efforts to improve their property and extend its services to its members and patrons. This extensive program was started in 1949. During that year they acquired a 1½ ton Chevrolet truck to replace the International truck which had seen many years of service. Also a 1 ton Chevrolet pick-up truck was purchased to handle a increasing demand for delivery service On the north elevator extensive repairs were made to the foundation, cribbing and roof and new siding was put on At the south elevator the 30 ton Soweight scale was completely overhauled and a new deck was put on Additional office equipment was purchased. This included a checkwriter, seed germinator, master addressor and an intercommunication system A Kolker portable elevator was acquired thru H Lau Sons for use in filling CCC steel bins.

During the year 1950 work was started on the new mill. At the north elevator the annex to the south portion was repaired. This included a new metal roof and new siding. One new coal bin was built to house stoker coal of the Klemme School system. A new 40 foot Farmers Friend elevator was purchased thru F. J. Arnold, the local Oliver dealer, for use in filling quonset huts with CCC corn.

The year 1951 seen the completion of the mill building, which began operation during the last days of April. Present plans call for the installation of a REX-Fire Alarm in the new Mill and other electrical work done in the south elevator

BELMOND CHURCH SCENE OF WEDDING CEREMONY

Young Couple Will Reside At Clear Lake, Iowa

In a beautiful candlelight service at the St. John's American Lutheran Church Sunday, June 17, 1951, at 7 00 p. m, Miss Ruth Lacey, daughter of Mr and Mrs Wm. J Lacey, of Goodell, became the bride of Richard L. Kaduce, son of Mr and Mrs Dan Kaduce, of Klemme. Rev H P Senft, pastor of the church officiated with the double ring ceremony

The church was decorated with baskets of gladioli and garden flowers. Preceeding the ceremony nuptial music was played by Mrs. Senft, who also played the traditional wedding March Mrs Wayne Wolf of Belmond sang "Perfect Love," "Oh Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Senft.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white gown of slipper satin, fitted bodice trimmed in lace with a long train. Her fingertip veil was edged with lace and held by a pearl tiara. Her necklace and earrings of rhinestone were a gift from the bridegroom.

She carried a white Bible, a gift from her mother and father. Her flower was an orchid tied with long white streamers.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Dorothy Lacey. She wore a blue taffeta gown and carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations with white ribbon.

Elaine Lacey, sister of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a blue taffeta dress and carried a basket filled with red roses. The ring bearer was Ronald Lacey, brother of the bride. He wore a white suit and carried the rings an a white satin pillow edged with lace.

The bridegroom wore a bluegray suit with white carnation boutonniere Edward Kaduce, brother of the groom was best man.

Ushers were Ben Katiun and William Lacey, Jr.

The bride's mother was dressed in a gray and blue flowered dress with white accessories. The groom's mother wore a navy blue dress with navy accessories Both wore corsages of red roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home for the immediate family and relatives. The room was decorated in blue and white and garden flowers. A large four-tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom served as a center piece for the bride's table. The cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Claude White The nut cups for the bride's table were crocheted by the bride's grandmother

Miss Margaret Buckley was in charge of the guest book. Jaunita Dolton and Mrs. Vernon Pralle had charge of the gifts. Mrs. Wm. Madsen, aunt of the bride, cut and served the cake.

The bride graduated from Klemme high school with the class of '51, and the groom with the class of '50.

They will be at home at 10 N. 4th St. at Clear Lake, Iowa.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Genesis 1.26-27, Matthew 8 1-4, 12-9-13, 18.1-6, 12-14, I Peter 1:17-19.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 8.

You Are Important

Lesson for July 1, 1951

YOU are important! Whoever you are, wherever you live, whatever you do, you are important to others, to yourself and to God. You are the one and only "you" you will ever be; you have but one life to live, one destiny to fulfill, one soul to save.

Dr. Foreman

The Sunday schools of America are going to put in the rest of this summer studying Christian teachings about human relationships; and we begin, this week, by looking at a basic principle which underlies all of the Christian view of life and its relationships. No other teaching of the Bible will do you much good if you can't believe this simple truth; the incomparable importance of each individual person in the whole world.

* * *

In The Image of God

HOW does the Bible teach the importance of the individual?

First of all, by declaring that man was made in the image of God. In spite of man's sinfulness, even in the shabbiest and meanest of men there is still some trace of the image of God.

John Calvin, as is well known, was far from optimistic about the nature of man; but even Calvin wrote that the only good reason why we should love our enemies and do good to the undeserving, is that even in the worst of men there is still the image of God, so that what we do for any man we are really doing for the God whose image is in him.

Every man is in some sense a fresh creation. Widely used child's catechism asks the question: Who made you? And the answer is, God made me and all things. Every one has the right to give that answer to that question.

Bought With Blood

ANOTHER reason why we believe that every individual is important is summed up in what St. Peter said (I Peter 1): We have been redeemed—that is, ransomed, bought back—with what is more precious than jewels or gold, the "precious blood of Christ."

Does this mean only those who are now Christians? Surely not. You have a right to say to any man, anywhere: Christ died for you. If you cannot say that, then you are reduced to saying, Christ died for a limited number of people, and for anything I know to the contrary, you may be one of them.

That is a puny sort of gospel. If there is one thing which every evangelical church teaches with universal enthusiasm, it is that the gospel is offered freely to all. If there is one verse in the New Testament that sums up the gospel it is John 3:16: God so loved the world . . . that whosoever believeth . . .

That is no limited gospel. And no one who takes it seriously can look with scorn on any living soul. Jesus has warned us against scorning even a child. Isaac Watts once let a non-Christian idea get into one of his hymns—"for such a worm as I"! That is not a Scriptural idea Christ did not die for worms, he died for men.

If So, Then What?

MOST Christians do not need even as much argument as this to make them believe in the worth of the individual; they are sufficiently convinced by the attitude of Jesus himself. Nobody could think seriously about Jesus' treatment of children, or his parables about the lost sheep and the lost son, without coming to the same conclusion.

The key-question always is: What is this action, this attitude, this plan, this arrangement, this institution, this system,—what is this doing to persons?

Persons are more important than anything else in the world. This by no means goes without saying. For the world of our time is riddled and raddled with other and contrary ideas: as for instance that man is only an animal, or that he is simply the highest of the animals, or that a man's value comes from his family, or his race, or his bank account.

Against all these mistaken views the Christian must stand, firmly knowing that he, no more than others but no less, is made in God's image and an object of God's love; and so in himself, small though his place may be, not only has a value that can never be described in dollars, but is worth more than the human race can ever own.

Household Hints

When cotton is scorched, wet the spot with water and cover it with a thick paste of laundry starch. After it dries, sponge it off with peroxide, iron the article and put it in the sun for a few hours.

* * *

If you scorch linen, cut a raw onion in half and rub the flat side of it on the discolored area; then soak the linen in cold water for several hours

* * *

To keep snow from sticking to the snow shovel, rub it with a candle stump or piece of paraffin before using.

* * *

Rust on tools can be prevented in the first place. Heat two ounces of powdered resin with twelve ounces of lard until the resin melts completely. Then add one pint of benzine, and apply the mixture sparingly to the metal parts of the tools. It will protect them against rust for quite a whil in the dampest kind of climate.

* * *

An attractive, durable and efficient bath mat can be made by lashing a number of jar rubbers together with strong thread Let them overlap to make the mat strong, and tie them together until you end up with a rectangular mat.

If you have no regular bath mat, use a turkish towel as a makeshift. Just lay the towel on the bottom of the tub. Or fashion slippers out of a discarded turkish towel and wear them in the tub to prevent slipping.

JUST WHAT IS INFLATION? When there's a greater supply of money than of goods—that's inflation. It happens when goods get scarce, and you and your neighbors compete unfairly for these few goods. Then prices grow and grow—until the prices of more and more things are bigger than you can afford to pay.

HOW TO CUT DOWN THIS DANGER. Help hold the line on prices and wages. Buy only for current needs. Save in every way. Buy U. S. Defense Bonds. Strive for still more efficient production. Support moves to cut non-essential government spending. It will take all 150 million of us to lick inflation.

Cool Off with Chilled Ribbon Cake
(See Recipe Below)

Air-Condtion Entertaining

ICY COOL BEVERAGES, frosty desserts and a cool porch where the light breezes play invitingly on wilted brows give a perfect recipe for summer entertaining.

Plan to have beverages and dessert in the refrigerator just in case someone decides to drop over. Nothing is lost if they aren't used immediately, as beverages and dessert can always be used the following day in the menu plans.

Make the desserts and beverages while the morning coolness gives you the energy, and then you can appear with luscious desserts and beverages like magic when it's serving time

Apricot Punch
(Serves 8)

- 4½ cups (2 18-ounce cans) apricot nectar
- 6 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 cups orange juice
- ½ cup light corn syrup

Combine all ingredients. Chill. Serve with ice cubes, if desired, and garnish with lemon or orange slices.

Raspberry Frost
(Serves 6)

- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup water
- 1⅓ cups lemon juice
- 3½ cups cold water
- ½ cup crushed red raspberries

Cook 1 cup sugar and 1 cup water for 5 minutes; chill. Add juice of 6 lemons (about 1⅛ cups) and 3½ cups cold water. Put a spoonful of crushed berries into bottom of glasses. Fill with crushed ice. Pour over lemonade.

Pink Cherry Sodas
(Makes 2 quarts)

- 1 envelope cherry-flavored summer drink powder
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 cups milk
- 1 quart vanilla ice cream
- 1 quart carbonated water

Combine drink powder and sugar. Dissolve in milk. Add scoops of ice cream and pour over carbonated beverage.

This is a lovely beverage to serve in a punch bowl because of its delicate cool color and sparkle.

Lime Cooler
(Serves 8)

- 2 cups sugar
- 4 cups water
- 1 tablespoon grated lime peel
- ¾ cup lime juice
- Few drops green food coloring
- 8 7-ounce bottles lemon-lime carbonated beverage

Combine sugar and water; heat to boiling and cook over low heat 2 minutes. Remove from heat and add grated peel. Cool. Strain and add lime juice and green coloring; pour into refrigerator tray and freeze firm. Turn frozen mixture into chilled bowl; break into chunks; beat with electric or rotary beater until smooth. Return quickly to cold tray and freeze firm. Fill tall glasses with lime ice, add beverage; or serve in punch bowl.

Double Raspberry Milk Shake
(Serves 4)

- ¾ cup finely sieved fresh red raspberries
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 pint vanilla ice cream
- 1½ cups milk

Combine berries and sugar. Add mixture to one-half ice cream; beat smooth. Add milk all at once and blend. Serve in chilled glasses. Top each with a scoop of ice cream.

Coffee Ribbon Cake
(Serves 8)

- 1 envelope (1 tablespoon) gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1½ tablespoons instant caffein-free coffee
- ¼ cup sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1¼ cups heavy cream
- Piece of sponge or white cake, 8x4x2-inches
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 cup shredded coconut, toasted

Combine gelatin and cold water; mix well. Dissolve instant coffee, ¼ cup sugar, and the salt in hot water; add to softened gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Chill until slightly thickened. Whip ¾ cup of the cream and fold into gelatin mixture. Chill until almost firm.

Meanwhile, trim cake as needed to fit 8x4x2-inch loaf pan and split into three layers. Line pan with waxed paper. Place first layer of cake in bottom of pan; spread with half the thickened gelatin mixture. Add second layer of cake; spread with remaining gelatin mixture. Top with third layer of cake. Chill 3 hours.

Unmold loaf on platter. Whip remaining ½ cup of the cream with 2 tablespoons sugar. Spread over top and sides of loaf. Sprinkle with coconut. Chill 1 hour before serving.

Pineapple Refrigerator Cake
(Serves 6-8)

- 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 3 beaten egg yolks
- 1 cup crushed pineapple
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- ¼ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup dry cottage cheese
- ½ cup sugar
- 3 stiff-beaten egg whites

Soften gelatine in cold water. Combine egg yolks, pineapple, lemon juice and peel, ¼ cup sugar, and salt. Cook over hot water until thick, stirring constantly. Add softened gelatine and stir until dissolved. Remove from heat and add cottage cheese. Chill until partially set. Gradually beat ½ cup sugar into stiff-beaten egg whites. Fold into gelatine mixture. Pour into Corn Flake Crust: Combine 1 cup crushed corn flakes, ¼ cup sugar, and ⅓ cup melted butter; press firmly in greased 6x10-inch pan.

LYNN SAYS:
Use Handy Kitchen Tips While You're Cooking

Apples will be crusty if you pare them one-third of the way down the stem, fill the centers with brown sugar and dot with butter. Pour over them 1 cup of water and bake uncovered, basting them occasionally.

Serve fresh and molded salads together: make individual or large ring mold of tomato aspic. To serve, fill the center of the mold with creamy cole slaw.

Here's a quick fruit slaw recipe: toss 4 cups of shredded cabbage with 1 cup orange sections. Mix in 2 tablespoons salad dressing blended with 1 tablespoon cream.

Place a spoonful of firm vanilla ice cream across the center of small individual pancakes, then roll. Serve with fresh fruit sauce or butterscotch sauce.

Use the large meat basters when you're making mayonnaise. This helps you to add the oil slowly to the egg yolks to start the emulsion properly.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Term "Good" -Indefinite

By Lawrence Gould

Should you tell a small child to "be good"?

Answer: There is not much point in doing so because to a two- or three-year-old such abstract words as "good" have no clear meaning. He realizes that when he is something called "good" it pleases his mother, and he wants to please her so that she will love him, but words alone do not tell him how to go about it. He must be shown how to do certain specific things, like picking up his toys or letting baby sister play with them and then be praised for it. To have demands made on him which he does not know how to meet makes him feel insecure and frightened

Does a drunken man know what he is doing?

Answer: Not always At some times and with some people too much liquor may produce a mental state known as dissociation (popularly called "drawing a blank") in which one part of their minds may function well enough to steer them through familiar activities like finding their way home, even though their consciousness is dazed or comatose. The simplest form of dissociation is the "absent-mindedness" of the proverbial professor and sleep-walking is another and more dangerous one. When you start to "draw blanks," it's time to quit drinking.

May change of life cause paranoia?

Answer: When change of life brings on a mental illness, either in man or woman, this is usually of the "depressive" type once known as "involutional melancholia," leading to loss of interest in life, intense sadness and often severe delusions of guilt But psychiatrists now say that such symptoms generally occur only in a person who has previously had neurotic or psychotic tendencies On this basis someone who had always been inclined to feel suspicious and "abused" might develop paranoia when faced with the problem of adjusting to new life-conditions

KEEPING HEALTHY

Finding the Causes of Underweight

By Dr. James W. Barton

IN METABOLISM CLINICS, most of the patients are overweight and, according to the cause, appropriate treatment is given: reduced food intake, more exercises, in some cases the use of gland extracts, and finally the use of ametaphine and dinitrophenol to increase heat and melt fat.

However, all cases at the clinic are not overweight; there are a number of cases of underweight for which treatment is similarly prescribed according to cause.

If the physician referring an underweight case to the clinic suggests that there is a possibility of early goiter, the metabolism is first given, to determine whether or not the thyroid gland is overactive (goiter). If overactive to a considerable extent, the thyroid gland is removed by surgery or x-ray, because an overactive thyroid causes overactivity of all the body processes, greatly increasing the heat of the body and preventing any gain in fat or weight. Also, this increased activity causes the heart to beat more rapidly and it may become exhausted.

If the thyroid gland is normal yet the patient is losing weight, a further search is made. The first step is an increase in food intake. If there is no increase in weight after an increase in food, more rest and sleep and less exercise, then an investigation of the patient's family is made.

Were either or both parents underweight—or uncles, brothes, sisters? It has been found that in many cases of underweight there is a family tendency to leanness. In such cases, if the patient has a good appetite, sleeps well, and is active physically and mentally, the metabolism clinic physicians advise that no treatment for underweight is necessary.

Another cause of underweight is early tuberculosis. Underweights usually have a narrow chest.

Finally, an unsuspected cause of underweight is what is called slow or low infection—teeth, tonsils, gums, sinuses.

Chocolate Now Goes To War For Taste and Tonic

Washington, D.C. — Chocolate is once again at the battlefront as a diet super-charger for the American soldier fighting in winter-bound North Korea.

The popular energy food is considered so important to the G.I. that it is now included in every operational ration issued by the Department of Defense.

Food Packet Survival Arctic, for example, provides no less than four chocolate bars—two with almonds—per man per day. Soldiers going to the front lines for eight to ten hours are issued two one-ounce bars in their Food Packet Individual Assault. Ration C—the basic canned operational ration—offers both chocolate and cocoa disks.

Three-fourths of the candy component in the 5-in-1 Ration, designed for group use, contains chocolate, while the Ration Supplement Sundries Pack, for 100 men, includes 200 two-ounce chocolate and 48 two-ounce chocolate-covered bars.

The fighting man in Korea is not only getting a dose of energy with his chocolate but something tasty as well. This was not entirely true during World War II, despite the fact that millions of chocolate bars were consumed across the globe in the form of Emergency Ration D. This ration —containing four ounces of chocolate and some 600 calories—was designed especially to taste "no better than an unsalted baked potato" in order to keep the G.I. from eating it as candy.

Today, the army's new chocolate policy is to give the men the nourishing food in the form of sweets they have eaten and enjoyed since they were kids. In encouraging the use of chocolate the military may well be remembering the words of the Spanish explorer, Cortez, who wrote in the 16th century, "A single cup of this rich drink gives a man sufficient strength to march all day."

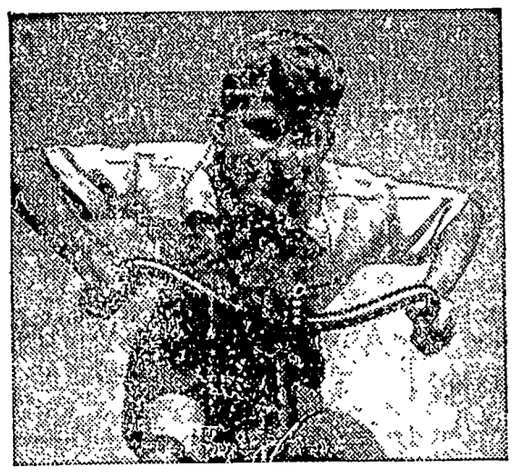
Although Cortez was quick to recognize the energy value of chocolate—a product of the native American cacao tree—he did not appreciate its taste as prepared by the Aztec Indians. When he introduced the food into Spain in 1528 it was used primarily as a medicine and was far too expensive for anyone except the rich.

An unknown genius added sugar to give chocolate its first wide taste appeal, but it was not until the 19th century that the price fell low enough to make it a popular beverage with all classes. In the United States alone, raw cacao imports leaped from 500,000 pounds in 1780 to more than 600 million pounds by 1946.

A room that is inclined to be dark and rather gloomy can be given a sunshiny aspect by painting the walls a pale tint of yellow. A ceiling painted white will reflect the maximum light that falls upon it. In one such room, the wood-trim was coated in a grayed-lavender tone and draperies were a silvery gray. The upholstery combined blue-green and gray and tangerine-toned accessories added gayety and life to the room's decoration.

"Hush-A-Bye, Baby" is the theme song in the home of an Oriental silk farmer when his silkworms begin to spin their cocoons. The family talks in whispers and walks on tiptoe, for silkworms will cease the spinning process when frightened. Many silk raisers share their homes with the productive little moth larvae.

HELP! This boy's in danger



Last year 120,000 school-age children were injured or killed in traffic accidents. Many of these accidents could have been prevented if the drivers had learned to regard all youngsters as human caution signs.

Remember this whenever you drive near a school or playground. Slow down so you can stop in an instant. You never know when a child may decide to dash out from between parked cars.

Be careful—the child you save may be your own!

Duncan Destoyed By By Tornado Monday

TWO MILLION DOLLAR DAMAGE IN HANCOCK

Only Three Homes Untouched By Fury Of Storm Late Monday P. M.

The little community of Duncan with 12 inhabitants was nearly blown off the map one Monday afternoon in the worst storm that ever struck Hancock County. All other homes and buildings in the little town were completely demolished or badly damaged.

Fine Church Destroyed

The beautiful St. Wenceslaus Catholic Church, a brick structure, built 25 years ago at a cost of $65,000 was completely wrecked. Also was a brick community hall, the Frauda General Store, and a blacksmith shop.

Eight homes were totally destroyed which included those owned by Frank Lisek, Ed. Brabec, Jim Drawer, Frank Simon, Frank Frauda, Eugene Lucas and John Zemelka; owned by the Delbert May family. All other homes were badly damaged in the storm which came in from the southwest.

No One Killed

Remarkable was the fact that no one was killed and only one person, Mrs. Hanson of Britt was badly injured when the storm rolled her car over and against the Frauda store. Others less seriously hurt were taken to hospitals and released after treatment.

Freight Cars Turned Over

Twenty-nine freight cars were blown over wrecked and scattered over the Milwaukee tracks through Duncan, keeping traffic for some 24 hours. Telephone and electric lines were torn down in the area.

A few hours after the storm, torrential rains swept the area and all over the county as much as 4 inches fell in a few hours.

The State Highway Patrol moved in to guard the town and more police and the Red Cross moved in to care for the people.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Thompson of Dallas, Texas visited on Thursday at the Ed. Thompson home. They were on their way to Lafayette, Ind., their new home.

Use Soldering Iron To Remove Stubborn Screw

There are several things you might try next time a rusty or tight screw won't come lose when you want it to.

Oftentimes a stubborn screw can be loosened by holding a very hot rod or soldering iron up against the head. You might jar it loose by setting a punch on the head of the screw and tapping it with a hammer.

If your screwdriver slips out of the slot, a little oil and emery dust or fine sand might do the trick.

BERWIND BRIQUETS

"Berwind Briquets heat more American homes than any other briquets!"

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

The young man tossed the small handbag into the back seat of the old sedan and turned to look at the white frame house under the trees.

He knew his mother was watching and he pulled self-consciously at the jacket of the uniform he hadn't worn during the last ten days - the quick days of furlough.

He slipped behind the wheel as his father walked from the house and climed in heavily beside him. They had 15 miles to drive to meet the train.

It was a quit ride. The battered old car - a relic of his high school days - gave the boy a sharp sense of departure. "Be careful driving this old can back, Dad," he joked. "It's still got speed." He shoved down on the accelerator to prove it.

It began to rain. He turned on the windshield wippers. They flipped twice and stopped. "Maybe you ought to sell this thing," he said. "I won't be needing it for quite a while now."

"Oh, we'll probably keep it around a while yet," his father said and remembered later that they were the last words he ever spoke to his son.

For in the next moment, on a curve, driving too fast, with rain flooding and blinding the windshield, the right wheels of the car dropped off the highway slab.

The young soldier pulled quickly at the wheel. The car jumped out of control, popped across the highway and slammed into an oncoming car.

The boy was driven into the back seat by the force of the impact. His father, pinned in the front seat, turned and watched him die, struggling without comprehension, cluthing feebly for the small handbag as though he only remembered that he had to go someplace.

TELLS WAYS TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS DURING THE HARVEST SEASON

High yields of hay and grain on Iowa farms aren't the only thing it takes to make a successful summer harvest. Unless the season is accident-free, full hay mows and grain bins may not mean much.

Accidents to farm people reach a yearly peak during the summer, warns Hancock County extension Director Paul Henderson. This danger period is caused mainly by harvest haste, long working hours, revolving shafts, belts, gears and the cutting mechanism of harvesting equipment.

Iowa State College Extension safety specialist Norval Wardle urges farmers to follow some simple safety rules during haying and harvest.

First, make sure that all shields and safety guards are in place.

Stop all movement on the implement before greasing, repairing, adjusting or unclogging. Operate tractors at sofe speeds

Never wear loose or ragged clothing and avoid jumping from moving equipment.

The combination of machinery and highways is especially dangerous. Look both ways before pulling onto a highway, obey the traffic signs, and use proper headlights and taillights at night.

One more thing, Henderson warns, small children have no place around harvesting equipment.

Here is a view of the sacking arrangement from the Corn Grader. The corn is first cracked in a Winona Attrition Mill which is located in the basement and then is elevated to the top of the spout floor where it is cleaned and graded into four sizes: Fine No. 6 spout, Medium No. 8 Coarse No. 7 and Flour. Each grading bin above each spout holds 80 bushels of cleaned and graded corn which is ready to be sacked, or sold in bulk as "KLEMME CRACKED CORN." Also you will note in the left hand corner is a small view of the 100 bushel Fairbank-Morse Hopper Type Scale where all grain are accurately weighed before being processed.

ANNIVERSARY OF WAR

By Gerald Bogan

This week, June 25th, marks the first anniversary of the Korean War Or is it a police action? Or a situation?

We're confused, mainly because the Truman administration didn't admit it was a war until 10 months of action. Some administration apologists still don't want full scale action in Korea because they are afraid it might lead to war.

But it is war A big one, at that.

During the first 12 months of war in Korea our battle casualties totaled 73,604 and non-battle casualties of 72,679. During the first year of United States participation in World War II, when boys from Iowa were dying on the sands of Africa and in the Pacific, casualties totaled 58,307. During 12 months of World War II, 8,192 American soldiers died; there have been 12,202 killed in the rice paddies and mountains of Korea.

It is a big war, a full scale war in which Truman and Acheson committed our ground troops without congressional action Acheson defended such action in the congressional hearing, pointing out that other presidents have sent American troops to foreign lands without congressional action. But one can hardly compare the Boxer Rebellion or the Nicaraguan campaign, or the smashing of the Tripoli pirates with a full scale war in which casualties are greater than they were in World War II.

Korean casualties are nearly double our total casualties for the Revolutionary War, the Mexican War, the Spanish-American War, and the War of 1812 combined. And all of them were wars, not police actions.

Yes, the treadmill war in Korea has been costly. It has been the result of a foreign policy of fear and timidity on the part of our leaders. They are afraid to use maximum force to end the war As Harold Stassen said in a speech in Massachusetts recently· "This doctrine of fear of communist might and communist ruthlessness does not fit America. There are hundreds of times in our history when, if the leadership had said 'we are afraid' there would be no great and free America. Timidity and weakness have never been a key to peace and freedom"

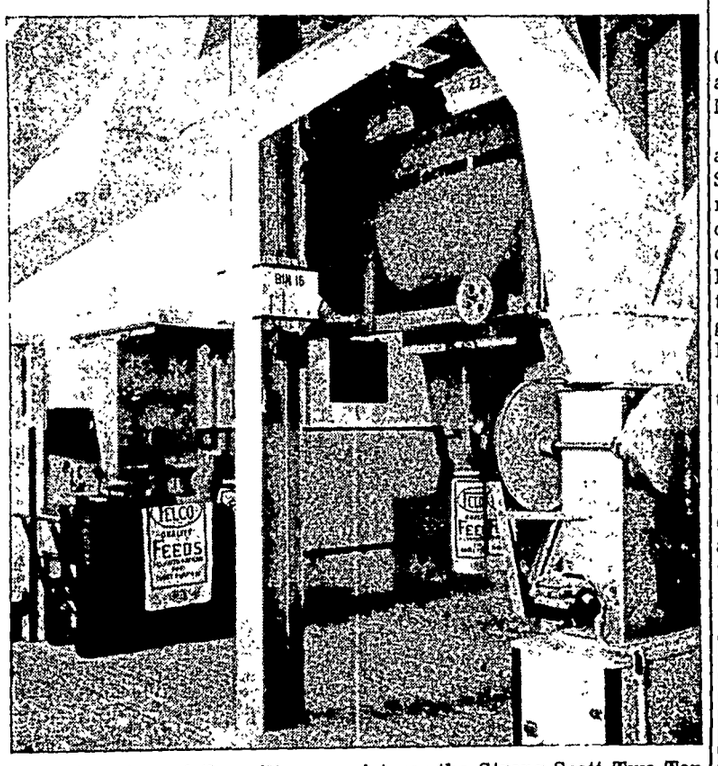
VIEW OF MILL ROOM



This view of the mill room pictures the Strong-Scott Two Ton Triple action Feed Mixer, where feeds are thoroughly mixed before they are ready to be sacked or elevated to overhead bins above the driveway where they can be loaded in bulk. Shown at right side of the picture is the Feeder, Scalper, and Magnetic Separator. This machine is a combination of what its name implies. It feeds an even flow of grain to the mill, scaling off the larger peices of refuse such a straw, sticks, cobs, etc., and the magnet prevents any metal from entering the mill. Under the mixer is an Ibberson Electric Bin Alarm Control Board. This alarm goes off when the bins are filled to capacity, so that we have ample time to shut off the flow of grain. This prevents any plug-ups in our elevating legs, and mill. In the left hand side can be seen a "Weight-o Bulk Buggy.

Iowa's Air Conditioning

Do you know they have free "air conditioning" in some homes in Iowa.

They dig down, strike a rock fissure, and cold air pours out. That air cools their houses all summer long.

"You can have your air conditioning," says Cousin Ed. "It gives me sinus trouble."

Well, it sounds fine to me. But that's the way with Ed. In fact, it's the way with most folks here in Iowa. We let the other fellow have what he likes, but we stick to what we like, too.

I like TV. Ed sticks to radio. I've a nice collection of ties. But Ed wears a black string.

Lots of our neighbors like ice tea in summer. Lots of others like a cool glass of temperate beer. It takes a variety of taste and people to make a happy community. Ours is a good town because we recognize that, and we all get along fine together.

SUGGESTIONS AVAILABLE ON RENTER OWNER BUILDING AGREEMENTS

Rainy weather and days in between the big summer jobs offer Hancock County farmers a chance to make plans and gather materials for building improvements to be made after harvest observes County extension Director Paul Henderson.

He adds that building and farm improvements sometimes pose a problem for tenants and landlords. A landlord may logically hesitate to make improvements that won't increase his income, but on the other hand a tenant may need improvements for livestock program or his home.

Henderson has in his office a wide range of printed material on farm leases, improvements on rented farms and farm-wage agreements that may be helpful in working out a solution to building improvement problems on rented farms.

Because some of the improvements may be up to the tenant to make, Henderson says latest Iowa State College pamphlets suggest that the landlord and the tenant agree before hand on what improvements should be made. They can decide on how much each will furnish and on the rate of depreciation has accounted for the value of the improvement.

For example, the depreciation for a major improvement might be figured over a 10-year period, while minor improvements, such as laying linoleum, extension of the electric line or sidewalk building require a shorter depreciation period

TWO WEEDS THREATEN OATS IN WET WEATHER

Two weeds which seriously infest Iowa oat fields when abnormally cool, wet spring weather keep farmers from preparing a good seedbed are on the prowl again this year, reports E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College.

They are marsh cress and cinquefol—the same two weeds which choked out hundreds of acres of small grain in north central Iowa in the late 30's and again in 1942 and 1943. But Sylwester says this need not happen this year if farmers watch for the pests and spray with 2,4-D.

Marsh cress is a winter annual of the mustard family. It looks like mustard but has pale blossoms. Cinquefoil is sometimes called "false strawberry" because it looks like the strawberry plant. It differs from a strawberry plant in that it doesn't shoot any runners and the blossoms are yellow instead of white.

The two weeds get started in late summer and early fall in cornfields. Normally they do not cause much damage because overwintering plants are killed out in the spring when the farmer disks and harrows stalk ground in preparation for oat seeding. But in cool, wet springs such as farmers experienced this year, both march cress and cinquefoil can cause trouble.

For controlling the weeds, Sylwester recommends ½ pound of the amine form of 2,4-D or ¼ pound of the ester 2,4-D per acre The spray should go on after small grain is tillered out but before heads emerge.

702 IOWA DAIRYMEN USE OWNER-SAMPLER TEST

Rapid progress is being made in Iowa's program of testing dairy herds by the owner-sampler method, a program started in this state in December, 1947.

Don Voelker, extension dairyman at Iowa State College, reports that 8,674 cows in 702 herds are now being tested by the owner-sampler method. This type of testing service is now available in 41 Iowa counties, most having organized this past winter. More associations are in various stages of the organizational process.

Owner-sampler records are based on 1-day tests which are taken each month. The supervisor leaves sample bottles and barn sheets at a group of farms The farmer weighs the milk and takes a composite sample of the morning and evening milk. These samples are picked up the next morning and taken to a central laboratory where they are tested and the records computed. The results are mailed to the farmer, and the supervisor discusses them with him on his next visit to the farm.

Three Other Methods

In addition to the DHIA cooperative using the central laboratory, there are three other methods of doing owner-sampler testing. In some cases, DHIA supervisors test a herd in the vicinity of the one they are doing the official test on. They do the testing on the farm rather than taking the samples to a laboratory.

Artificial breeding associations are also doing some owner-sampler testing The technicians distribute the sample bottle and pick them up again. They deliver them to a central laboratory where they are tested.

Some private individuals are also offering owner - sampler testing service, according to Voelker.

There are several advantages of this type of testing. Dairymen can place their herds on test at any time, and the association program is not upset when a dairyman drops from membership or when a supervisor is absent or resigns. His work can be done by other people trained for such emergencies

Better Trained Men

Higher salaries can be paid testers because of the increased amount of testing, and as a result, better trained men can be hired, according to Voelker. More cows can be tested and owner-sampler testing is economical It costs about one-half as much as DHIA testing.

Voelker points out that this type of testing is not designed to replace DHIA work. Rather, it supplements it. DHIA testing will continue right along with owner-sampler testing, as it is necessary to obtain official as well as complete records on the herd.

Owner-sampler records are not official and cannot be used in the sire proving program or for a basis of buying and selling animals. They are designed for dairymen who want practical production records to serve as a guide for culling, feeding and herd management

CATTLE ON GRASS ALONE MAKE CHEAP, SLOW GAIN

Going without grain the first 2 months of the pasture season gives beef cattle a chance to go to market at a lower cost af gain, but the marketing date will be later, according to 5 years feeding trials at the Soil Conservation Experimental Farm in Page County.

W. G. Zmolek, extension livestock marketing specialist at Iowa State College, reports that the cattle on pasture without the first 60 days of the grazing season gained almost as much as cattle on full feed in the experiments.

When pasture is plentiful and high in protein and sugar at the beginning of the season, a steer doesn't need to graze very long to take on all the feed he can use each day, Zmolek explains.

However, the average fattening time for steers on full feed in the drylot was 151 days. The cattle that went without grain during the first 2 months of pasture required 181 days to put on the same finish, while cattle in an all-summer grazing program averaged 227 days in finish. The cattle on pasture were marketed at heavier weights and the cattle on grass all summer went to market when the price was lower 4 out of the 5 years of experiments.

Zmolek says the feeding trials show that while cattle on pasture alone will grow more and require more time to finish, livestock men who use this program can expect to save on protein, labor and feed bills this summer.

In suggesting heavy use of growing pastures, he adds a word of caution on bloat. He says reports indicate more bloat than usual this year and he recommends giving cattle access to dry hay while they are on lush pasture.

BALED, CHOPPED HAYS ARE HEAVY

They May Cause Barn To Lean, Sag or Bulge

Storing chopped or baled hay and straw in barns not built for the extra weight is blamed for many barns leaning to one side, having sagging roofs or bulging sides.

A cubic foot of baled hay weighs three to four times as much as a cubic foot of loose hay, and chopped hay twice as much as loose hay, according to S. S. DeForest, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College. Baled straw weighs 3 times as much as loose straw.

A little extra bracing will prevent barns from leaning to one side or from coming apart at the joints. DeForest recommends using braces at the plate to tie the rafters to the studs. Collar beams can be used to strengthen the joints where the rafters are tied together at the peak.

Watch Supporting Posts

Bulging sides pose a problem in some barns in which hay is stored down the center clear to the ground. Thicker or more studs usually are needed to prevent this condition. However, DeForest points out that knee braces at the plate also will help keep the side of a barn in place.

Sagging roofs usually occur in the type of barn in which the roof and fow floor are supported by center posts. What happens, according to DeForest, is that when too much weight is put on the mow floor, the foundations under the supporting posts settle and the roof and mow floor settle or sag with them. He suggests making sure that the supporting posts are on a solid base. Making the foundations cover a larger area will help. If there are sand pockets, he recommends using reinforcing rods in the concrete foundations.

I-Beams Help

Use of I-beams will reduce the number of posts needed to support the mow floor and roof, making available more usable area in the barn. They also give the mow floor added strength, but extra joints are needed in some barns to provide the strength necessary to store baled or chopped hay and straw.

Sagging roofs and leaning barns are sometimes caused by wind and snow loads rather than by the weight of chopped or baled hay and straw. DeForest points out that the barn-strengthening ideas suggested also will help prevent damage from wind and snow. The weight of snow presses downward on the roof while wind tends to lift the roof.

Prevent bloat by feeding dry hay before turning cows on pasture.

DON'T CULTIVATE CORN TOO DEEP OR TOO CLOSE

A wet spring means a high percentage of corn roots in the surface of corn roots in the surface soil, observes E. S. Dyas, Iowa State College extension agronomist.

He cautions against cultivating too deep and too close to the row, especially as corn plans become bigger. Corn has about as much root material below the surface of the ground as it has plant above the ground, Dyas explains. Experiments have shown that any widespread cutting of corn roots by cultivator shovels will slow growth and reduce yields.

Similar experiments also show that shallow or sweep cultivation will kill as many weeds and keep yields as high as, or higher than, deeper cultivation. Dyas adds that the primary purpose of corn cultivation is to kill weeds, although corn on the contour can be cultivated and "ridged" to hold fore moisture on slopes

VIEW OF INCLOSED DRIVEWAY

The above picture is the inclosed driveway to the mill where all grains are unloaded to be either ground and mixed, cleaned, treated, hulled or rolled. An electric hoist is provided to raise the trucks, pickups, or trailors to unload the grain into a pit and from this same inclosed driveway the processed grain can be loaded again. The length of the driveway, 52 feet, provides ample room to load and unload any type of conveyance in adverse weather conditions and still have both driveway doors closed. Six overhead bins holding 350 bushels each are provided for garnering grain while being processed. We invite you to come in an inspect these features in our plant.

PAINTED BUILDINGS WILL LIVE LONGER

But Make Sure Paint Used Is Good Quality

A good coat of paint will make farm buildings more attractive and increase the length of their life. Paint protects the wood and keeps it from checking and warping.

It is important to get high quality paints for satisfactory results, however. C. H. Van Vlack, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, says good paints cost more than those of low quality but are less costly in the long run. Few materials provide as much durability and service as a film of good quality paint.

Examine Label

In buying paint, examine the label on the can. Most reliable paint manufacturers print the name and percentage of each kind of pigment and liquid used in the paint. If this formula isn't given, there is reason to doubt the quality. Good supplies are usually obtained when the better-known or "big-name" brands are purchased.

A high quality paint is made up of an oil or binding liquid mixed with a powder in a dry or paste from known as pigment, according to Van Vlack. The pigments color and hide the surface, and the durability and good consistency of paint depend a lot on them. The pigment should be opaque in linseed oil to form good protective films.

Some pigments become somewhat transparents in oil. These are called fillers or extenders and are generally used to reduce manufacturing costs. The cheaper, less durable paints contain a large amount of these fillers.

Oils Important

The most common solids used for filler is low-grade products are calcium carbonate, silica, magnesium and aluminum silicates, calcium sulfate, barium sulfate and lithopone. If any of these names are seen on the outside paint label, there is reason to doubt the paint's quality.

A large portion of the paint liquid should be linseed oil or soybean oil. The rest may be made up of thinner and paint drier. In cheap liquids, some of the substitutes for linseed oil or soybean oil are fish oil, oriental oil, painter's oil and "boiled out."

The thinner helps to leave a flat finish for following coats. Pure turpentine is best, according to Van Vlack. Some of the low-grade paints use "mineral spirits," "mineral turps," or even gasoline or kerosene. In some cheap paints, a large amount of thinner and less linseed oil are used. To be really durable, the house paints should contain a greater percent of pigment than liquid by weight.

TALL MEN!

A few weeks ago, some out of town people, visiting in Klemme, remarked: "How come you have so many tall men in your town?"

Well now, that was a new one to me, living here among the tall men for many years, I did not realize that our community was odd in this respect.

But then, every community is slightly different. When we go to Britt we look for Hoboes; in Titonka we look for Indians in Forest City and Lake Mills we expect to see a lot of intelligent looking Norwegians.

In Minneapolis we smile as we meet the nice well-fed Swedes.

In Chicago, half the people you meet on the street, look tired and sick, probably from drinking the dirty, medicated lake water.

However, if Klemme must be different from other communities, we are proud to be referred to as "The town with the many tall men."

We list here a few of the tall men, all six foot or more in height, who may be seen from time to time on Klemme's Main Street.

You will notice that many of these tall men stand very erect, and smile continually. They are probably the ones who sleep on seven foot beds, with extra length Inner Spring mattresses and "long John" coil bed springs. The Wellemeyer Store provides this special bedding for the comfort of tall men.

A flood of young men and their wives came from Germany and Northern Europe during a ten year period beginning in 1870. They bought farms near Klemme from the government for about $2 per acre, went into debt, paid 10% interest, built log houses with slough grass roofs and dirt floors. They fought the prairie fires, and endured the blizzard. The rich loam soil produced well for their gardens and field crops. The luscious prairie grass fattened their few head of live stock. Their table was supplied with home grown food and sometimes their fare was inriched with prairie chicken, fish and wild strawberries—all rich in the vitamins from the new soil. What a fight it was, and how they must have enjoyed their job.

These German Pioneers were men of medium height and of a stocky build, but their sons mostly grew taller than their fathers, many of the grandsons too are tall men, due partly to the rich soil, and partly to the quiet Christian influence of the homes in which they were reared.

Klemme farms are still rich in fertility, and much in demand. Buyers gladly pay more just to locate here and be a part of this rich farming community.

Marvin Lemke, Manager of our Coop. Grain Co. is one of our tall young men, and he dreamed about the New Mill while sleeping on a seven foot bed from Wellemeyer's.

We congratulate the Grain Co. on the good work they have done in providing this splendid and much needed building and equipment for our community.

In closing let me say—"Whenever you see a tall man, think of Klemme!"

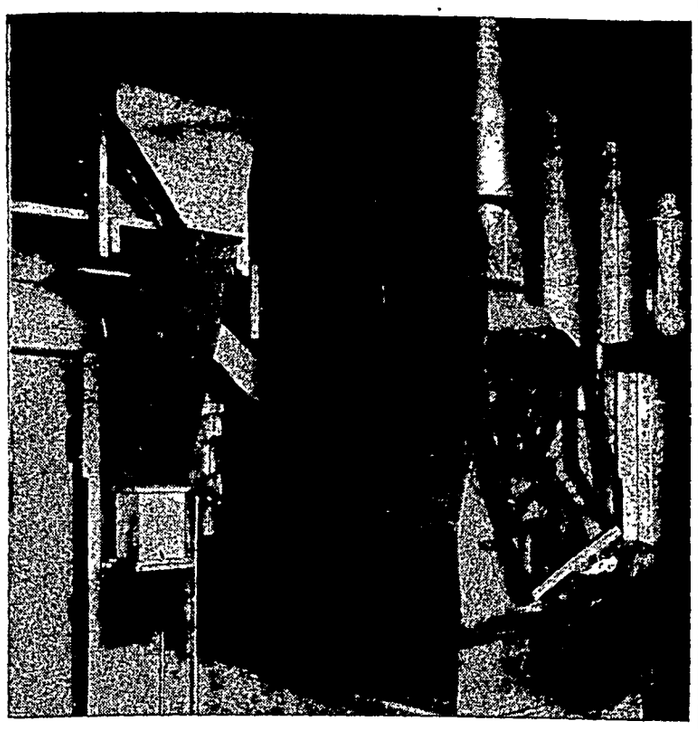
VIEW OF OAT HULLER AND ROLLER



Located in the south east room is the Roskamp Oat Huller and Roller. This machine can hull and roll at the rate of 150 bushels of Standard weight and quality oats per hour. This finished product can be either sacked from the machine or elevated to bulk bins for loading directly into your truck or trailer, or put into a storage bin. Feed is retailed as "KLEMME ROLLED OATS" and "KLEMME HULLED OATS."

Before any oats is hulled it is first run thru a Hart-Carter Separator where all refuse is removed and then it passes over a magnet where all tramp metal is removed. The Oat Roller is directly under the huller. Oats can be hulled, or hulled and rolled in one operation.

READIN' AND WRITIN'

Penmanship Isn't Such a Lost Art, Survey of Teachers Shows

Apparently the quality of American school children's handwriting has not fallen victim to the "rush of our times" and outside interests and distractions, after all.

A survey among 5,000 grade and high school principals across the nation turned up a vote of nearly two to one that today's youngsters write as well as or better than those of a generation ago. The Sheaffer pen company, that made the survey, said the actual balloting was 64.4 per cent to 35.6. Most of the principals credited improved teaching methods and more widespread use of good writing equipment for the fact that penmanship has "survived" as well as it has despite crowded curriculums and less time for instruction.

It looks like printing, but it is really a new style "manuscript writing". A recent survey of the country's school principals found that 95.5 of the nation's schools now teach this method in at least first three grades.

The widely held notion that basic arts like reading, writing and spelling have been shamefully neglected in this mechanized age is well refuted—so far as penmanship is concerned—by results of the poll. However, the minority of principals who feel handwriting has declined is so sizable and in many cases so emphatic as to leave no doubt that there's still lots of room for improvement.

BEARING OUT this observation was the high school principals' verdict that only about two-thirds of their students have a "satisfactory" handwriting by the time they graduate.

Grade school principals voted about two to one that children "learn to write more easily" nowadays Use of the "manuscript" form of writing—taught in about 95 per cent of the schools in the first two or three grades—was given much of the credit for this, along with more general use of good equipment.

The survey showed that quality of handwriting has an influence upon the marks children get in school. Among grade school principals, 89.9 per cent said "good handwriting helps produce good marks," and among high school heads the count was almost the same, 89 6 per cent.

The most commonly indicated reasons among those who think today's handwriting is better were: improvement of teaching methods, more widespread use of good writing equipment, and the repsondents' own disinclination to glorify "the good old days."

However, there is a sizeable minority of principals—35 6 per cent—who feel that the handwriting of their present pupils is worse than that of their forebears.

The manuscript form of writing (like lower-case printing) is now taught almost universally in the early grades A change is usually made to cursive (conventional writing) at the third or fourth grade.

They got their chance when Ben started his new daytime show, "Ben Grauer's Footlights and Klieglights"—practically every star in show business clamored for a chance to appear for nothing

BEN GRAUER

Among the first were Ed Wynn, Oscar winner Jose Ferrer, Ralph Bellamy, Edward Everett Horton, Victor Moore, Robert Sterling, Susan Douglas, Arthur Treacher, Barbara Bel Geddes and William Eythe Thousands of dollars would have been paid out for guest shots if they'd worked for money.

Jackie Kelk, squeak-voiced Homer of "The Aldrich Family", is in a dither these days getting his Poundridge, New York, farm in readiness for a Paramount camera crew. Scenes will be made there for "Burning Orchard".

Jack Benny will return to the screen after seven years' absence in "Somebody Loves Me". He will play himself, as he was in the days when he was a vaudeville star, often sharing star billing with Blossom Seeley, whose life story this is.

Robert Young, who has won innumerable awards for his "Father Knows Best" radio program, took his youngest daughter Kathleen to Warner Brothers as a fifth birthday celebration to watch him working with Joan Crawford in "Goodbye My Fancy". THE FICTION CORNER

MY MISTAKE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

MRS. Luther was very smug. "Of course, darling, I know how happy and thrilled you are at being married. Phil is a nice boy. Dear me, I remember when Alvin and I were first married. I was just the same." Mrs. Luther sighed. "The illusions of youth. Dear me."

3-Minute Fiction

Beth Franklin tried hard to maintain a role of gracious hostess. "Were your illusions shattered, Mrs. Luther?"

"Shattered?" Mrs. Luther laughed and suddenly looked wise. "Well, yes, I suppose they were. For I did have illusions about my husband, darling, just as you have about your Phil. And then—" Mrs. Luther's lips tightened—"he strayed."

"How dreadful!"

"Not dreadful, darling—fortunate. Oh, my yes. You see, Dave, my husband, is not naturally a woman chaser. He was frightfully upset and shamed. He promised to do anything if I'd only not leave him. To this day Dave is repentant. He'll do anything I ask. He is humble and grateful, and I declare I think I have the best husband in the world."

"I suppose it was fortunate, wasn't it?"

Mrs. Luther leaned toward her young hostess. "So fortunate, my dear, that I wish others could benefit by the same experience. Your Phil is very handsome, and Gretchen Carter is very beautiful." She smiled. "Well, darling, I simply must be going."

Beth sat down at a window, cupped her chin in her hand and stared out at the rain. "Gretchen Carter is very beautiful." What had Mrs. Luther meant? Mrs. Luther was bitter and disillusioned . . . Poor Dave Luther. How dreadful it must be to be constantly under suspicion.

TWO weeks later the Hempton Country Club held its annual spring opening ball. Phil and Beth went with the Craigs En route, Dorothy Craig said mischievously: "Keep your eye on that handsome husband of yours tonight, Beth. They tell me Gretchen Carter has bought the most seductive gown . . ."

Beth laughed. She strove for and maintained an attitude of indifference. Even later when she saw Gretchen Carter, blonde and gorgeous in a white, filmy gown that was truly seductive, she would not admit that what Mrs. Luther or Dorothy had said was affecting her peace of mind.

She danced the first dance with Phil and then, conscious of Mrs Luther watching her from across the room, conscious of Dorothy Craig's mischievous glance, she deliberately ignored her husband.

It was quite by accident that toward the middle of the evening she saw Phil slip through the French doors out on to the terrace. Or was it accident? Certainly it wasn't accident that sent her eyes sweeping around the room till they found Gretchen Carter.

And then her heart stood still. Gretchen was moving toward the same French doors.

The orchestra swung into a foxtrot. Beside her, Tom Craig said: "My dance, Beth?"

"No," she said. "No, Tom, I—I've got a headache . . . .Excuse me, please." And she moved away, swiftly, blindly. Without consciously establishing a destination, she made her way out on to the terrace, stood there in the dim light.

Abruptly she saw them—two figures silhouetted against the sky at the far end of the terrace standing close together.

Reason left her. Logic fled. Seized by an uncontrollable fury, conscious only of one desire—the desire to wreak vengeance on this woman who had robbed her of her faith, she sped along the terrace, cried out in sudden anguish and flung herself toward the filmy white dress and startled face of Gretchen.

As from a great distance she heard a masculine exclamation, saw a face in the dim light—and suddenly it was as if an icy cloak had engulfed her and was holding her close. For the face of the man who had been standing with his arm about Gretchen Carter was that of Dave Luther.

MacArthur Testimony Advises Stalin of Our Fear

By Wright A. Patterson

EVERY ONE—of both officers and enlisted personnel of the armed services of the United States—owe to the nation first allegiance over anything they may owe to any other superior or to themselves

That is a part of the rigid training they undergo and it continues throughout their career in the armed services. In the final analysis, the United States is congress It is not the President.

That was the basic argument of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, a general of the army, in his insistence in placing his views in opposition to those in higher authority

He was exercising his training he had received as an officer in the army. He recognized, not the President, but only congress as the top authority. That was as he had been taught.

It was that final decision, as to what was best for the interests of the United States in the far east, that Gen. MacArthur forced his convictions to the point where they would receive the attention of congress, and congress only should make the decision.

The investigation by a senate committee was for the purpose of providing the facts that congress, including the senate, might have the information needed in making such a decision. Gen. Bradley, in refusing to answer any question the committee might ask him, violated his allegiance to the nation, and placed himself in contempt of congress, a situation from which he was relieved by a ruling of the chairman and later by a vote of the members of the committee.

Had the question been asked of the President, the only legal reason he could have given for not answering would be that to do so truthfully might incriminate himself

The committee was attempting to ascertain the reasons for, and the methods used, in firing MacArthur. There are innumerable rumors in Washington of the existence of a feud in the high command that dates back to when MacArthur was chief of staff of the army, and stopped, for a time, the advancement of Marshall, with some like incident in the case of Bradley.

The committee was trying to find out if these incidents had any connection with the firing of MacArthur and opposition to the MacArthur views of the far eastern situation.

As to his reason for the firing of MacArthur, the President in a statement, not under oath, said the letter written to Representative Martin had nothing whatever to do with it. Marshall had testified earlier that it had. Which is right?

MacArthur's action was for the purpose of best serving the national interests, but what was started in that spirit has degenerated into a partisan political quarrel, both parties attempting to make political capital out of the investigation.

The only purpose it has served is to advise Stalin of our fears, and our disunity. There was no possibility of good, but there was a possibility of additional harm, and it is time the investigation stopped.

MacArthur is out. Continuing the investigation would not put him back in Japan. He will remain a five star general of the army. Congress named him that, and congress, not the President is supreme. Congress, not the President, is the United States. Next to congress, the people will decide. They are the real commander-in-chief.

When you make an estimate on the results of the November, 1952 elections, do not forget that there are considerably more than two million voters on the federal payrolls. These two million, plus another two million relatives and friends, will vote the way personal, rather than national, interests dictate. It is natural to consider one's bread and butter as of first importance. That is the "why" of the army of bureaucrats. They represent four million votes. Count them for the "ins."

At the meat markets in my town there has been no reductions in prices at the retail level. How about it in your town? Was that meat price reduction all talk with no action?

The reduction the farmer took on his meat animals has not reached the demanding consumer. So far he has only a promise.

Johnston Urges Strong Price Laws; Price War Confined to Large Cities

BUSINESS AS USUAL—For some time the home towner has been uneasy over the nation's economical outlook. Headlines in the last few days haven't helped his uneasiness any.

Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston's charge that the nation is sitting on an "economic time bomb" that may explode into runaway inflation next fall, unless congress keeps a strong program on the law books, caused considerable comment and worry. On top this the beef industry—all the way from farmer to grocer—was in an uproar over his charge that the beef industry is trying to ride roughshod over the American housewife with a cry of "damn the consumer and full pockets ahead."

Economic Stabilizer Johnston
. . "damn the consumer and full pockets ahead."

Noted for speaking his mind, Johnston said that "business as usual" has an ominous ring to me at a time when men are dying in battle in Korea for a free way of life. He added that the consumer, the housewife, is not going to be the forgotten American if I can help it.

Shortly before making these statements Johnston proposed a new wage formula pegging pay ceiling to living costs and permitting for millions of workers an immediate boost ranging up to 12½ per cent above the levels of January, 1950.

The belief is becoming more universal that the government must take a firmer stand and congress must enact stricter laws governing prices and wages. The threat to the nation today is as great from the inside as from the outside.

SWEET MUSIC—And while home towners tried to understand statements from Washington on the economic situation, the average small town resident read of reports from New York, Oklahoma City, and Atlanta of red-hot price cutting wars following the supreme court fair trade decision with a feeling of awe and incredulity To many it was like sweet music of yesterday.

Tens of thousands of gleeful shoppers—men and women—rushed wildly through New York bargain basements in search for nationally advertised goods that had been marked down, some of it as much as 40 per cent. Small electrical appliances, summer-weight suits, cosmetic items, best-selling novels, sheets, pillow cases, nylon hose and girdles were marked down again and again. It was a consumer's paradise

Home towners then took a quick look at their local newspapers in the hope that Main Street merchants had some new bargains. Most of them, however, were disappointed. The big city price-war had not yet reached the home town level. And economists reported it was not likely to

Most retail organizations predicted the New York price-war would level off quickly, with prices from 8 to 15 per cent below the former fixed-price levels.

Trade sources, also, pointed out that the price-war was not likely to spread because most home town merchants signed fair trade contracts. On top of this, consumer goods may become tighter as the summer progresses and defense needs begin to eat into present backlogs.

HOW CLOSE TO WAR?—The man on Main Street, who never knows all the facts, received a shock that sent a shiver of fear down his back as the MacArthur hearing continued in Washington. The shock was delivered by Adm Forrest Sherman who told senators that the U S. government so feared a world war last December that its field commanders were ordered by the high command to "increase their readiness" and the Mediterranean fleet went to sea.

Sherman said the orders were issued after MacArthur told the joint chiefs of staff that the U.N. should accept an armistice in Korea "on the best terms available" and the army would have to quit Korea unless the war could be carried against Red China.

Sherman's testimony before the armed services and foreign relations committees again impressed the average American with the fact this nation barely escaped World War III in recent months. Many are wondering how close to war we are today?

RURAL BANK DEPOSITS UP—Rural banks, largely farmer-owned and reflecting farmer finances, have shown amazing increases in deposits during the past 10 years, a recent survey of seven states revealed.

One bank, in an Illinois town of less than 400 population, increased its bank deposits from $168,000 in 1940 to $3,480,000, more than 20 times as much. In the same 10 years, its population dropped from 500 to 359. Country banks, generally, in the seven-state midwest survey area, showed deposits rose from three to 20 times, many of them 10 times, in the 10-year period

The survey was conducted in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri All of the towns had less than 600 population.

PEACE RUMORS CONTINUE—Rumors of peace in Korea continued to circulate in many world capitals although they were denied by high government officials. The move, if any is made, apparently will come from the United Nations side.

Some reports indicate the United States might be willing to halt the fighting at the 38th parallel provided it was a "real" settlement with assurances of no further Red aggression.

Observers in the far east, however, were skeptical that any peace feelers will come from Peiping. They might come from Moscow Communist China might be thoroughly licked, but they could simply call its "volunteers" back behind the Yalus river boundary and sit and lose little face.

SAME AS REFUSAL—The Russians now say they are willing to hold a foreign ministers' meeting if the ministers would discuss the North Atlantic pact and U. S. bases in Europe. The Soviet note with the big "if" was sent to the U.S. after 3 weeks of meetings in Paris by deputy foreign ministers of U. S., France, Britain and Russia.

According to western diplomats the Russian note amounts to the same thing as refusal to attend a foreign ministers' meeting. The U S. has told the Russians many times they would not discuss the North Atlantic pact. The new Soviet line is that U.S bases in Europe are "the essential cause of the worsening of relations between the U.S.S.R. and the three powers."

Price-War Shoppers
It's not likely to happen in the home towns. (See story above.)

BIGGEST CATALOG EVER

Sears, Roebuck Mails Largest Catalog

Home towners and rural families who have for years received the Sears, Roebuck catalog will soon get the new edition. It is the biggest sale catalog the firm has ever published, containing 404 pages. A year ago, the corresponding sales book contained 294 pages.

Hundreds of items, ranging from wading pools to wire records are offered at knock-down prices.

Notable by their absence from the current catalog are certain appliances that were featured a year ago. The sales book at that time contained refrigerators and washing machines at special prices. This year they aren't listed. Automobile tires are also missing from this year's catalog; a year ago they were offered less than the regular prices.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

• Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Kidney Slow-Down May Bring Restless Nights

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, headaches, dizziness and loss of pep and energy. Don't suffer restless nights with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

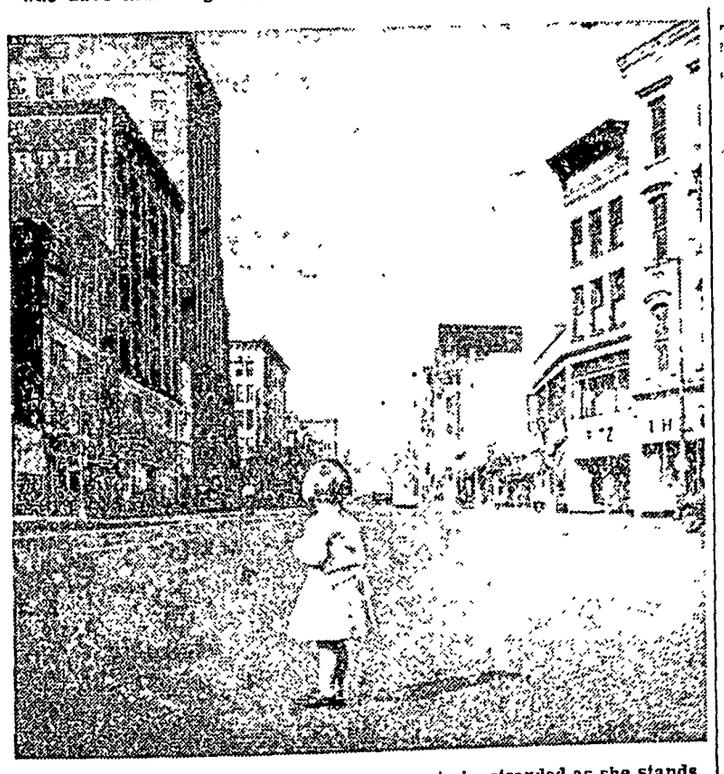
ONE-STOP NORWAY TO NEW YORK FLYER . . . Captain Charles F. Blair, Jr., who ended a one-stop Norway-to-New York flight, traveling by the way of the North Pole and Alaska, is greeted in New York by his son, Christopher, one year old, and his wife, Janice, following his arrival without mishap at the International airport. Captain Blair's solo flight over the North Pole was the first such flight to be made in a single engine aircraft. The flyer is an employee of an airline. He claims that passenger service to Northern Europe is very possible using the route that he just traversed.

STUDENTS TAKE DEFERMENT TESTS . . . Some of the more than 175,000 college students who are scheduled to take the new tests for deferment from the draft at more than a thousand centers throughout the United States are shown in this general view at Columbia University in New York City just prior to the tests. The new examination will determine whether these students will be granted deferments from the draft under the government's new program to postpone the induction of college men who have especial talents or who have made high scholastic marks in their chosen courses in the universities of the nation.



LIVING DEAD . . . Bonny Coby, 2, appears to be stranded as she stands alone on a deserted street in Utica, N. Y., during simulated atom bomb attack. The city was described as devastated with casualties heavy in the attack. Many residents failed to take cover and were described as the attack. Many residents failed to take cover and were described as "living dead." Make-believe enemy planes roared over the city and dropped the "atom bomb" 13 minutes before the red alert was sounded in Utica's industrial heart.

CHANGES BILLING . . . Dawlath Soliman, Cairo nightclub dancer, drew protest from Egyptian consul when she danced in Germany as King Farouk's "favorite dancer." She changed bill to read: "Dawlath Soliman—she enthused the king."

JOINS UNITED CEREBRAL PALSY TEAM . . . Joe Louis receives the United Cerebral palsy home run baseball bank as he attends a Dodgers-Braves game at Ebbets field. The baseball bank, symbol of the drive to help more than 200,000 children suffering from cerebral palsy, was presented to the former heavyweight boxing champ by Karl Van Meter (center), executive director, United Cerebral Palsy, and Melvin Ritter, chairman of the junior division in Massachusetts.

MRS. BING HOME . . . Mrs. Bing Crosby, formerly Dixie Lee of the films, boards an airliner at La-Guardia Field, N. Y., for flight to her California home after a vacation in Europe. This is one of the rare times Mrs. Crosby has posed.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

The Boss Sex?

I'VE JUST FINISHED reading an article in "The Saturday Evening Post." It is by a man named Jerome Ellison, and is titled "Is The U.S. Really Run By Women?" Whether the article makes me most mad or most proud it is hard to say.

To take the good side first, Mr Ellison does full justice to the amazing record of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, an organization to which, in several of its many branches, I have long belonged. He lists the influence of women in lawmaking, in the establishment of libraries and scholarships, gymnasia and special schools and clinics. He praises—but why go on? It would take every page of this paper to enumerate them.

Food for Europe, clothes for the destitute, millions of hours of reading to the blind, millions of visits to hospital wards, millions of earnest, unselfish women meeting, consulting, contriving to make this world a better place in which all of us may live. Women spend 85 per cent of the national income, own half our industrial stocks, pay 80 per cent of inheritance taxes, and could numerically outvote men by one million if they chose to round up the vote.

In other words, women play fair with their nation. But does their nation play fair with them? I think Mr. Ellison misses one of the most important points in this whole question, and I think it ought to be italicized. Women have done all that they have done, without government grants of money. That is the stupefying fact.

Women Aren't Boss

Women have no one in government to ask that an appropriation of some 300 or 500 millions be made for the all-important work they do And that's why I think the answer to Mr. Ellison's question is no, the United States is not run by women. Women do the best they can with the means at hand, they fight cancer and hookworm, (encourage Scouts and Campfire Girls) make cakes, gather rummage, watch the town fathers as they discuss sanitation and saloon licenses, put up their thousands of dollars monthly to send food overseas, and have no share in the billions that are so airily demanded for projects at home and abroad, projects with which they have no sympathy.

No, Mr. Ellison, if women ever had a stay on war boards, there would be no wars. Women don't pay what they have to pay for seven pounds of weeping, helpless babyhood, to pick the cream of it and send it away to kill the cream of other nations, the innocent boys who never had an ugly or revengeful thought in their lives

Women know—they don't have to be told—that killing never stopped killing. That hate never engendered love. That destruction is not the surest way to mercy and fellowship and rebuilding

Slips of the Tongue

And so one woman at least finds a good deal of the "bless-the-dear-foolish-creatures" attitude in Mr. Ellison's article He tells one or two mild little stories of slips of the tongue on the part of various chairwomen. Men can do that, too. Washington solons can do that, too. He dwells on one of the "main concerns" of one President as being a problem as to where new members for the senior clubs are coming from, because members like to stay among their familiar groups It isn't flattering to any club, in the hideous crisis of today's affairs in our nation and in all the world, to quote this laughable little ladylike difficulty as "one of its main concerns." Or to pay a charming compliment to the figures of two middle-aged clubwomen who looked, as they walked across the clubhouse square, "like two coeds on their way to class." This is gallant in Mr. Ellison, but it certainly doesn't belong in an article of this nature.

No, it savors of that kindly patronage that men turn aside to pay to women as they walk to those sacred chambers where matters of national and international import are settled, those meetings that men alone attend.

As I write this my bag is packed for a flight to Houston, to attend the 60th annual convention of the General Federation of Womens Clubs. The national president, Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton, a wise, humane, experienced woman, would be an excellent person to disperse a sum as presently unimportant as a billion is in our national spending today. If women can do what they have done with only such financial help as their own generosity and powers of personal solicitation can win them, what mightn't they do if men took this work seriously?

Home Run Competition Is Keen

By GRANTLAND RICE

MASS PRODUCTION in home runs will be a hustling business this season, with keener competition than we've known in some years.

In past seasons it has been the custom of Ralph Kiner, the Pirate's big first baseman, to take charge In his last five years with the Pirates, Kiner has struck off 23, 51, 40, 54, and 47 four-baggers This leaves him all alone in any five-year group.

But things are quite different in thi. new season of 1951. Kiner's main challenger for the new campaign should be Gil Hodges, the powerful Dodger.

Hodges is only 27 years old. He is six feet one, and weighs 200 pounds. It seems that big Gil has set an increasing home-run tempo year by year In his first full season with the Dodgers in 1948, he hit only 11 homers In 1949 he lifted this mark to 23 In 1950 he moved it up to 32.

Grantland Rice

So far as 1951 is concerned, Hodges is off flying well ahead of Kiner, Ted Williams and other leading sluggers from past years

If Hodges could hold his opening clip steadily through the summer he would have the best chance yet of reaching Babe Ruth's famous landmark—60 in one season.

Gil was born in Princeton, Indiana, not New Jersey, where he could have made the Tiger squad one of its best tackles or guards. He is normally a 285 hitter but he expects to do better this season.

Hodges is a leading part of the powerful Dodger attack. Any pitcher who has to face Abrams, well over .400, Reese, Snider, Robinson and Hodges (with Furillo due later) might as well stand with his back to the wall facing a firing squad. They can all pulverize any ball thrown in reach.

As fine a home-run hitter as Ralph Kiner is, the big Pirate can't afford to lose too much ground to a hitter of Hodges' standing. And while Ted Williams is hitting poorly, so far as his batting average is concerned, he still retains his old power Westlake has been giving Hodges his closest run Westlake hit 23 home runs in 1949 and 24 in 1950 He is moving well beyond this pace in 1951.

The Relief Handicap

Pitchers working overtime in relief roles can have a year or two of glory, but they pay heavily.

Joe Page had a terrific pennant-winning year in 1947. He had a bad year in 1948. He came back with another big winner in 1949 He fell apart once more in 1950. So far in 1951 he has had a hard time winning for Kansas City.

Page worked in 60 tough games in 1949 which is more than the average arm can carry when you consider the long hours one spends in the bull pen

The same fact has now apparently overtaken Jim Konstanty, the 1950 iron man of the Phillies.

Konstanty worked in 74 games last year. This means he was in the bull pen every day, warming up for almost every game. There was considerable doubt last winter that the Phillies relief star could return with anything like the same stuff he had last season.

He may have had a rubber arm or an iron arm last year, but there is always a limit. Without Konstanty last season, Eddie Sawyer's team could never have won. Konstanty's inability to hit his 1950 pace has been one of the main Philly drawbacks, plus the loss of Curt Simmons. This is like losing two star pitchers.

Any team that catches and holds the Dodgers this season will need everything it can reach for.

If you picked an all-star team from the National League, outside of the Dodgers, few could break into the Brooklyn payroll. Who in the older circuit is better than Campanella, Hodges, Robinson, Reese, Abrams, Snider and Furillo? Musial could get into this group, but not many others.

The All-Star game this summer is likely to be the Dodgers vs. the American League unless some drastic changes take place in the next few weeks.

Racing's Boom

Golf is facing one of its greatest spectator seasons. The Masters at Augusta broke all past records. "I have never seen such crowds," Bobby Jones told me. "They were beyond belief"

But actually racing appears to be the sport that is enjoying the greatest boom.

Crowds at Jamaica have been well above last year's gathering and the same increase is promised at Belmont and Aqueduct.

In 1949 racing drew 23,813,890 visitors to various mutuel windows. In 1950 the crowds numbered 24,121,233, only a slight gain. But in 1951 the jump has been amazing. The rise started at Santa Anita. This forward movement took a neat leap in Florida and it began to spread this spring when the northern tracks opened.

Finders Family Of Boys All In U. S. Armed Forces

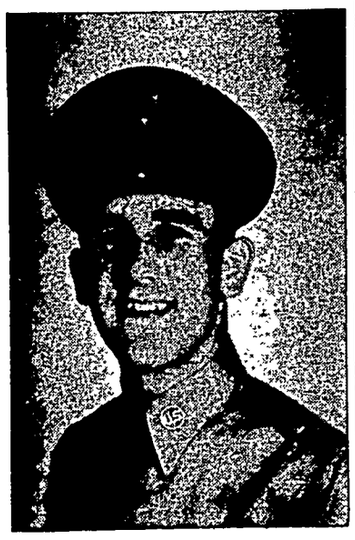
THREE FINDERS BOYS, GRADUATES OF K.H.S. IN U. S. SERVICE

Donald And Jerry Finders Picked Air Force For Service

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Finders, now of Fort Dodge, have all three of their sons, Dick, Donald and Jerry, all in the U. S. Service; Dick being overseas and the other two boys are in the States.

All three of the Finders boys are graduates of the Klemme High School and had spent most of their lives in Klemme. Mr. and Mrs. Finders are proud of their sons, and are proud that their family is so well represented in the Armed Forces.

Following is a brief description of each of the three sons in the Air Forces:



"JERRY" FINDERS

Pfc Jerold A. Finders recently completed his Basic Indoctrination Course at Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio, Texas, and is now stationed at Brooke Medical Center, at Ft. Sam Houston, near San Antonio, where he will receive an eight week course of study as a Surgical Technician.

"Jerry," after completing his high school course here, attended business college at Fort Dodge a short time. He then received an appointment to a position as clerk-typist with the Department of Justice in Washington, D. C.

In March 1951, he took military leave from his work, and enlisted in the Air Forces.

His address:
Pfc. Jerold A. Finders
A. F. 17325953
Co. D. 1st Btn. M.F.S.S.
Fort Sam Houston, Texas

"DON" FINDERS

Pfc. Donald R. Finders recently has completed a year of schooling with the Air Forces. After completing his Basic Course at Lackland Air Base; Don attended schools at Sheppard Air Force Base near Wichita Falls, Texas, and Chanute Air Force Base in Illinois, specializing as an accessories and equipment technician."

After a short furlough at his home in Fort Dodge and with Klemme friends, Don went to Ft. Dix, New Jersey, from there he sailed June 7th for Narsarssuak Air Base in Greenland for 12 months of duty. He says he likes Greenland.

HIGHWAYS JAMMED WITH SIGHTSEERS SUNDAY GOING TO DUNCAN

There was an almost continuous stream of cars headed north on highway 69 Sunday, and nearly as many on Highway 18, all headed for Duncan Sunday to see the destruction wrought by the recent tornado.

From the number of cars headed toward Duncan, there must have been thousands of people looking over the ruins Sunday.

Duncan is rebuilding fast and several houses which were unroofed have been rebuilt. Several hundred volunteer laborers have been helping at Duncan each day to clean up after the storm and to help rebuild.

BROWN-RIDDER EXCHANGE VOWS AT DAVENPORT

Avalon Brown, daughter of Mrs. John Logan and the late Merle J. Brown, and Elwyn Ridder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ridder of Liberty Township, were united in marriage on June 16th at Davenport, Iowa.

The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson of New Zealand. Both Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are classmates of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom is a student at the Palmer School of Chiropractics. They are making their home at 622 Main Street in Davenport.

KLEMME COPULE WILL BE HONORED WITH DINNER ON ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Busse of southeast of Klemme, are this week observing their Silver Wedding Anniversary.

They will be honored at a dinner sponsored by the Adult Bible Class at the Klemme Methodist Church dining room on Sunday noon, July 8th.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Busse who are not members of the class are invited to join the group in a pot-luck dinner, which will be followed by a program.

Don and Jerry graduated from Klemme High School with the class of 1951.

Don's address will be as follows:
Pfc. Donald R. Finders
A. F. 17274210

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Fishing and boating are popular vacation sports enjoyed by thousands of Iowans, especially during the Fourth of July holiday period.

These pleasant pastimes become a serious matter, when we learn that 18 of last year's drowning deaths in Iowa involved small boats.

Check this unnecessary waste of human life, your Iowa Safety Congress, with the co-operation of the State Conservation Commission and othr organizations, is sponsoring a statewide recreational safety program this week, known as "Water Safety Week."

More than 150 boat safety demonstrations are being conducted throughout the state at lakes such as Clear Lake, Black Hawk Lake, Lake Okoboji and Storm Lake.

To enjoy safe boating, follow the rules: If your boat capsizes, stay with it—boats will float; don't overload your boat—know its capacity; never stand up in a boat or canoe; raise anchor while seated; to change positions—row to shore and change there. Boats and canoes are not dangerous if properly handled.

Remember: It's fun to fish, but no fun to be fished for!

HANCOCK COUNTY FARM SPORTS FESTIVAL JULY 20, 1951

The annual Hancock County Sports Festival is to be held at the Garner Athletic Field on Friday, July 20th starting at 1.00 P. M.

All activities except the chair, clock golf, dart throwing, nail driving and horseshoe will be held on the Athletic Field south and west of the High School. The womens' activities and the picnic supper will be in the park situated right across the street, west from the playing field.

All contests are open to all farm families in the county and families of Farm Bureau members living in town.

In all events except softball, there will be a first prize of 50c and a second prize of 25c, softball winners will be awarded a first prize of $5.00 and a second prize of $2.50 in each division.

We are again cooperating with the Hancock County Creamery Association in having the selection and crowning of a Hancock County Dairy Empress at the evening program.

Ginger Kudje Had Birthday Party At Her Home June 25th

Virginia "Ginger," daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Art Kudje celebrated her 10th birthday on Monday afternoon, June 25th, when her mother had a party for her and invited her many little friends.

Although the weather was not good, the party was a great success and all enjoyed playing bingo and other games indoors after which Mrs. Kudje served a nice lunch.

Ginger received many nice gifts from her little friends who all wished that birthday parties came oftener.

Egeland Family And Friends Enjoyed Picnic At Dubuque

Rev and Mrs. Egeland and Mary, and Miss Lois Mellquist drove to Dubuque last Sunday and had a picnic supper in the park there with Mr. and Mrs. John Mellquist, Miss Myrtle Johnson and Sylvia Egeland of Chicago and Evanston.

After the picnic Mary and Lois returned to Chicago and Evanston with the Mellquists, and Sylvia came back to Klemme with the Egelands. Mary returned to her work in the Technological Library of Northwestern University. Sylvia will spend a few days at home.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

The little frame house sits close to the highway, so close that Mrs. Downs can clearly hear the high, hard hum of cars approaching and the sudden wind-slam of their passing.

It was a sound that had become so much a part of her 10 years in the house, that, up to a month ago, she had ceased to hear it. She hears it now - day and night.

And every time she hears that rubbery whine of a fast moving car, she waits to hear the long, long, incredibly long scream of brakes that reached her in the kitchen that day.

It seemed to last for hours, hours in which she could not move, could not stop what was happening, because she knew that a car was trying to stop for Johnny and could not stop in time.

Only a minute before, six-year-old Johnny had dashed out the front door. "Look in the mail box," she had called. The mail box was on the other side of the highway. Johnny was so careless about crossing, but she simple didn't have time to—Oh, not a speck of soda left in the box, well . . . .

Then the sound she didn't hear, the high, hard hum of a car coming fast. Then the sound she did hear, the shriek of wheels locked on the highway.

Johnny had waited for an eastbound car to pass, then ran in front of a westbound car. He died while his mother stood in the kitchen and listenend and crushed an empty soda box in her hands.

She hears it now, day and night, the hard rubbery whine of cars coming and the sudden, empty wind-slam of their passing.

COUNTY'S PRE-SCHOOL CHILDREN TO HAVE MEDICAL EXAMINATION

A committee was recently appointed by the Hancock County Health Council for the purpose of planning a uniform preschool medical program. Members serving were Mrs. C. E. Barnes of Garner, Chairman; Mr. and Mrs. John Chambers of Klemme; Mrs. E. Phillips of Garner; Miss Elsie Mae Van Wert of Garner; and Paul J. Skarda of Corwith.

A uniform pre-school medical program was planned for the county at a recent meeting of the committee. Form 18-PHN, prepared by the Iowa State Department of Health will be used for uniformity and the convenience of everyone concerned. Each town school superintendent will send this form to the parent or guardian of each preschool child in his area, together with a letter of explanation. The parents of children attending rural schools will be contacted through the efforts of Mr Charles S. Whitney, County Superintendent of Schools, and Miss Elsie Mae Van Wert. Mrs. E H Phillips of Garner may be contacted if additional information is needed relative to the program.

The medical examination is given to help them obtain the proper start when entering school. Parents are requested to complete questions one through twenty-one of the form, to the best of their ability, before the child visits the family physician for examination. The form should be maintained by the parents and presented to the teacher on the opening day of the coming school year.

DALE HULL ANALIZES THE WIND DAMAGE TO BUILDINGS

Dale Hull, Iowa State College Agricultural Engineer, has visited many of the farms destroyed by the wind storm. Mr. Hull pointed out reasons for some of the buildings not withstanding the windstorm. He listed lack of proper bracing, lack of having the building fastened to the foundation and in some cases just not using enough nails in their construction. Mr. Hull also pointed out that more knee bracing might have saved some of the buildings on some of the farms.

Hull also made it clear that some of the buildings destroyed were properly constructed and that tornadoes will wreck the best of construction.

Mr. Hull will be in Britt at the Allison Hotel Tuesday night, July 10th with at least 2 other agricultural engineers to help give information on proper construction of buildings. Anyone building new buildings is urged to attend.

You may also get information on building plans from County Extension Director Paul Henderson at Garner.

Klemme Boy Visits Chicago, Sees Ball Games And Gets Plane Ride

Bobbie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Arnold is back home after an eventful trip with his grandfather, Wilbur Carr of Garner.

Mr. Carr and Bobbie took the train for Chicago and went to the White Sox ball park and saw part of two games played, both being rained out. Bobbie also saw many interesting things in Chicago.

Leaving Chicago, Mr. Carr and Bobbie boarded a passenger plane and flew as far as Dubuque, where they were met by Mrs. Fred J. Arnold and Mrs. Carr and then finished the journey home by auto. Mrs. Arnold and Mrs. Carr had driven to Platteville, Wis. for a visit before going to Dubuque.

ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS HELD IN THE EVENING

Local Company Showed Substantial Growth During The Past Year

Marvin "Mike" Lemke, manager of the Klemme Cooperative Grain Company, reported that some over 1,000 people visited the new mill on the formal opening day, Friday. Coffee and doughnuts were served to all visitors and the entire crew of men at the mill were on hand to show visitors through the mill and explain the operation of the machinery.

The Klemme mill is the largest and most modern feed mill in the state of Iowa and is so equipped that a large variety of services are available to the farmers in this territory. Many of the visitors came from quite a distance to see the new mill.

Annual Meeting Held

In the evening the annual meeting of stockholders was held at the Klemme grade school building.

Manager Lemke gave a detailed report of the past year's business, which showed a substantial growth in every department The total assets of the Company now stand at $264,660.80 which is an increase of $128,000 over last year. Broken down this means currents assets were increased by $20,000, investments by $5,000 and buildings and equipment by $103,000. This last figure represents the new mill, and equipment.

Aiming At Million Dollar Business

The past year's business went above three-quarters of a million dollar business; to be exact: total sales reached $870,344.47. The Company hopes to go over the million dollar mark for the year 1951. Sales of the past year were over a quarter million dollars ahead of last year.

The company has showed a steady growth during the past ten years from a gross of $107,463 in 1941 to the seven-eighths of a million mark this year.

TO HELP WITH YOUTH WORK IN COUNTY

Miss Virginia White and Dale Hover both seniors at Iowa State College next fall were working in Hancock County this summer with the youth part of the extension program.

Miss White is assisting Elsie Mae VanWert, county extension home economist, with the 4-H Girls program. She is from Bloomfield, Iowa in Davis County and was a 4-H Club member there for seven years. Her longtime record and Achivements gave her trip to National 4-H Club Congrss.

Dale Hoover is assisting Paul Henderson, County Extension Director, with the 4-H boys program. He is from Oskaloosa, Iowa has been a 4-H member for eight years. He was State 4-H secretary-treasurer and has also been State President of F.F.A.

We want to welcome these two people into our county and hope they will enjoy our community throughout their stay this summer.

Montgomery Home Improved

The Clifford Montgomery home is being given the final touches after undergoing an improvement program started about a year ago when an addition was built to the house and the kitchen modernized with new cabinets.

The latest in the way of improvements at the Montgomery home are new concrete front steps and a new cement walk around the house. Next in line will be a repainting job on the exterior.

Evaluation of Responsibilities Important to Local Merchants

Independence Day affords our Main Street merchants little, if any, opportunity for merchandising. But it is a day which gives the home town businessman, in this or any community, time and inspiration to consider his responsibilities to the community.

One good way to point out the local merchant's importance to his community is to compare him with the city merchant. In fact, they are brothers in name only. The city merchant may have thousands of customers, hundreds of employees and operate as a "big business". The head of the firm in all probability will direct the activities of his store from a private office with directives through department heads. There is nothing personal or intimate in the organization.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

On the other hand, the local merchant is on intimate terms with his customers, knowing many of them as friends and others by name. He works with his clerks behind the counter and knows their problems both in the store and at home And with this knowledge his responsibilities to them increases.

As for the community as a whole, the local merchant must realize that it is the community that keeps him in business, provides his living, his home and his social activities. For this it is only fair that the merchant give something in return.

Most local merchants today realize these facts and are always the first to offer services and funds for any project for Community betterment. That is why in many small towns the merchants have formed organizations to promote the community, not for their own commercial advantage as many of the public suspect, but for the community as a whole.

Independence Day, therefore, with its deep meaning of freedom, justice, and equality is the ideal time for Main Street businessmen across the nation to analyze the local situation economically, socially and spiritually It is a good time for each merchant to ask himself if he is doing his part in promoting the community and the American way of life.

A local merchant who takes his responsibility to his community seriously could start his analysis of his business and home town with his employees. Discontented employees are a bad advertisement for any business and any home town. Perhaps a little encouragement and interest upon the part of an employer will make a better employee and a better citizen.

There are too many economical responsibilities of the local merchant to discuss them all. But the merchant might continue his analysis by asking himself if he gives his customers the best possible merchandise at the best possible price. It is not good business to get "all the traffic will bear." It hurts the customer financially and thus the entire community.

The social and spiritual attitude of any man is his own personal problem and one that must be worked out by the individual But the merchant's spiritual and social behavior has greater effect on the community as a whole than that of the average man.

These are but a few of the questions any local merchant might consider as Independence Day approaches They are important questions and the answer will mean much to the community.

Generally, merchants in small towns agree their town is the best there is. If they didn't think that they wouldn't be there. But many of these towns face problems in local government, are worried about war and taxes, new streets and sewage systems. Here again is an opportunity for the local merchant to come forward and display the leadership that is needed to solve such problems.

Recently in the midwest a small town businessman gave his community a public utility that cost thousands of dollars. Why did he do it?

He explained that he had lived his entire life in the community and he made his money there. He liked the town. He wanted to give the town something in return. He wanted to help the community.

Merchants in any community with this attitude, although they may not be financially able to give money, will give much to the home town that can not be valued in dollars and cents.

EXPERIMENTAL FORESTS

Research Forestry Aids Nation's Woodland Owners Grow Trees

To meet the increasing demand for timber, Uncle Sam's research foresters have come up with ways of producing stronger trees and making them grow faster.

During 1950 the United States consumed approximately 39 billion board feet of lumber. This represents more lumber than the nation used in any one year since 1942, when 60 per cent of the lumber produced went into military channels. Lured by high prices and a continuing heavy demand, too many woodland owners today are selling off timber faster than they are growing it.

The small corps of research foresters working in the forest service of the U. S. department of agriculture have spent long years making studies of the growth, harvesting and utilization of trees. Work has been slow because it takes from 20 to 80 years for a tree to mature. Now the foresters are coming up with some of the answers to the forest owners' problem of how to make money and at the same time guarantee a future supply.

Caring for the forest involves taking out diseased, deformed and lowgrade trees. Research men have developed sprays which will kill insects and prevent the spread of infections. They have experimented with poisons as a means of killing low-grade species. They have produced hybrids that resist certain diseases and that will grow twice as fast as their parents. As another means of getting trees to grow faster, these foresters have tried thinning lightly or heavily at different intervals.

In the above picture a forester studies the annual growth rings which show tree's rate of growth. Tree rings are measured before and after different forestry practices.

120 Experimental Forests in Country

Trees are a crop to be planted, cared for and harvested, just like any other plant. Some individuals get a lot of fun out of planting a variety of trees as they walk through the woods or as an experiment in their back yards Commercial planting, however, is not a hit-or-miss proposition.

Studies of trees are carried on through 11 forest and range experiment stations in this country Actual field work is conducted at 61 research centers and 102 experimental forests

The Koen experimental forest, for instance, is a part of the central Ozark branch of the forest service Experiments carried on in this forest will help owners of 20,000,000 acres of woodland in 24 counties of the Ozark highlands manage their forests. Each station finds what practices are best for woodland owners in that particular area.

Prepare Canning Vegetables Correctly
(See Directions Below)

Processing Vegetables

IT'S EASY to bring the garden vegetables to the table, even in mid-winter, if you put them into jars now. Then, when you want them, they'll be at your beck and call, providing menu inspiration as well as nutritious food for the family.

Canning is no problem if you organize the work properly and avoid doing too much in a half day or a whole day. Lack of efficiency causes food to spoil before you get it properly processed and causes loss all along the way.

Do only as much as you can accomplish easily, and you'll cut down opportunity for spoilage. Then, too, you can do another batch of foods the following day without letting them over-mature in the garden.

Try to estimate the amount of time required to prepare and process the vegetable, as well as the amount of produce you'll have, so there's no trip necessary to the store to buy more jars while the vegetables wait, and probably spoil. There should be no time lost in the canning procedure, for spoilage may result, and certainly loss of food value, flavor and color.

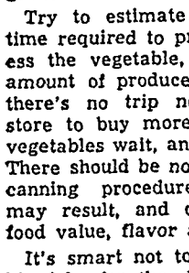
It's smart not to plan any other big jobs for the day you can, as best results come from devoting yourself exclusively to this particular enterprise. Plan a simple dinner, and prepare in advance, if possible, so that nothing except the slightest and most unexpected interruptions can intervene.

How to Select, Prepare Vegetables

TENDER, YOUNG VEGETABLES give the best results when they are canned because they can be processed more readily, and their flavor is at peak. They should be washed very thoroughly in plenty of water to remove all dirt, as soil frequently contains bacteria which may cause spoilage.

For washing, use a sink which can be stoppered, as it holds plenty of water, or a large basin or kettle. If you can spray the vegetables with water, this helps to get them clean. Use several changes of water, until it runs clear.

If the vegetable is to be canned whole, it's best to sort according to size, as this will give a better looking pack. It also helps during processing, as larger vegetables take slightly longer processing, and this would overcook the smaller vegetables if placed in the same jars.



Tomatoes, beets and carrots should be blanched by plunging into hot water, then dipped in cold water. This shrinks the skins and makes for easier peeling.

Hot pack is usually preferred for vegetable canning because it shrinks the vegetable before packing, and make more fit in the jar. To hot pack, cook the vegetable for a few minutes, according to the chart, before packing in the jars.

Peas, corn and lima beans should be packed in the jars somewhat loosely, and to within one inch of the top, as they will swell during the processing. Greens, such as spinach, kale and others, should also be packed somewhat loosel, to allow the heat during processing to penetrate them properly. All other vegetables should be packed tightly so that the jar will be full, after processing time is over.

Canning Day Menu
Cold Baked Ham Potato Salad
Green Beans, Crumbled Bacon
Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Pickles
Melon Wedges with Lemon
Beverage

Use of Pressure Cooker Helps Assure Safety

VEGETABLES BELONG to the non-acid group of foods, and this means that, to be canned with safety, they should be processed at high temperatures for a long period of time.

The pressure cooker should be fitted with a rack at the bottom, a tight cover that will hold in the steam, a petcock and a pressure gauge that will give accurate temperature for processing.

To use the cooker properly, place an inch or two of water in the bottom, and the filled jars on the rack. Prepare only enough jars to fill the cooker. Adjust the cover and fasten tightly.

The petcock should be left open to release air in the cooker, for five to seven minutes. Then close the petcock and allow the temperature to come to the desired amount. Start counting processing time only after the desired temperature is reached.

When processing time is complete remove the cooker from the fire and let the pressure return to zero before removing the cover.

Remove jars from the cooker and set on several thickness of cloth or newspaper. If the self-sealing variety is used, the lids should not be tightened or adjusted. Let these cool in the upright position, away from a draft. Store in a cool, dark place.

Wash, Scald Jars Before Using

Before packing food into jar for canning, check the jars to make certain they do not have nicks or cracks in them. It's especially important to see that the rims of old jars are perfect, as a faulty rim will prevent perfect sealing.

Jars to be used for hot bath or pressure cooker should be washed in hot, soapy suds. Then they should be rinsed thoroughly to eliminate all soap. Scald the jars with boiling water and invert on a clean, folded cloth from which they are to be used.

Caps and lids are best prepared by placing in a shallow pan or bowl and by pouring boiling water over them. Leave them in the container until ready to use.

Note: All vegetables, except tomatoes which are acid, as well as all meat, poultry and fish, canned at home, should be boiled in an open vessel for at least 10 minutes before tasting or using.

If storage room is too hot, the seal on the jars may be destroyed by causing expansion of the contents of the jar. Freezing and consequent thawing injure the flavor and texture of canned products.

Beets should be precooked with about two inches of the top left on so they will not bleed too much and thus lose their red color.

If the jar is defective, the vegetable requires re-packing and this is scarcely profitable as the vegetable would not stand up to processing the regular length of time.

LYNN SAYS:

Know These Canning Facts For Preserving Vegetables

Salt may be added to the vegetables when they're packed in jars, or it may be added later when the vegetable is heated for serving. It may be omitted entirely for dietary reasons.

Never attempt to save an overripe vegetable by canning it. Usually there's too much damage done by the ripening to give you a good canned product.

MIRROR Of Your MIND ■ ■ ■ Nervous System Works Two Ways

By Lawrence Gould

Can your nerves make you ill?

Answer: Not directly, says Dr H Waldo Bird in the Mental Health Bulletin, Detroit. All that your nerves do is carry messages and commands between your mind and your body. But the nervous system is twofold, and the involuntary ("sympathetic") nerves which control organs like your heart and stomach are channels through which emotional energy is conveyed from the mind to the body. When the mind develops an overcharge of an emotion like fear, the result may be a bodily disturbance such as palpitation of the heart or nausea, and chronic emotional disturbance may cause chronic illness.

Do "mother's boys" make business leaders?

Answer: No, says Dr. Wladimir Eliasberg. In business, as elsewhere, authority depends more on the willingness of the subordinate to obey than on the leader's will to command. Everyone has in him both a desire to assume responsibility and an urge to lean on others, and which of these impulses predominates in any given person depends on his early relations with his parents The man who becomes a leader is the one who has freed himself from the "mother-image," which implies dependence, and who dares to emulate his father by doing things "on his own."

Have reading difficulties an emotional basis?

Answer: Yes, writes H. C. Gunzburg in Mental Health (London). The best approach to the problem of the child who cannot learn to read is to study "the relationship between his emotional and social adjustment and the reading situation." Teaching boys of 14 to 16 to read is largely a matter of making them feel secure and "wanted," since they think of reading as something demanded of them by a world which they have found unfriendly and against which they accordingly wish to rebel. But it is hard to find reading material easy enough to inspire confidence in such boys which does not seem "babyish" to them.

Underactive Thyroid Causes Fatigue

By Dr. James W. Barton

AS WE THINK of the human body, most of us naturally have in mind the underlying bones which form the framework, the hundreds of muscles over the framework, then the various organs which handle our digestion, our breathing and circulation of the blood, and, finally, the brain and nerves.

What many of us forget as we think of the body are the various glands which regulate the processes of the body: the thyroid gland in the neck speeding up the various processes and the adrenal glands in the small of back, one above each kidney, which slow down and steady the rate at which the body processes work. There is the pituitary, lying on the floor of the skull, which has much to do with regulating the handling of starch foods by the digestive organs and also glands supplying other organs.

While we know about the overactivity of the thyroid gland (goiter) and how it makes the various organs and processes work faster, many of us do not know as much about the underactivity of this gland, which slows up all mental and physical activity. In severe cases, the condition is called myxedema and the individual is called a cretin.

As one of the outstanding symptoms of underactivity of the thyroid gland is fatigue or tiredness, Dr H. E. Christman, in Ohio State Medical Journal, states that of the many patients who consult their physicians with a complaint of fatigue, only a small number have heart and blood vessel disease, anemia, diabetes or tuberculosis. "Life situations are a little too difficult for some and in others the fatigue can be accounted for by poor living habits."

Therefore, Dr. Christman believes that mild hyperthyroidism (underactivity of the thyroid gland) is present in many patients who complain of fatigue There were 138 patients with this condition among 1,000 consecutive cases of unselected patients seen in his office.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Impulse to work is matter of habit; neglect in using impulse may decrease it. That is why regular exercise is valuable.

• • •

The impulse to work is usually less than normal in overweight individuals.

Excess fat interferes with work of the heart and lungs.

Too much fat inside and outside abdominal muscles interferes with nature's efforts to store sugar in these muscles.

Health specialists point out that the ideal weight for men and women is what they weighed at 30.

Leanness itself may cause gland disorders.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Fantastic Father

"MY HUSBAND is insane," Ray Runyon opens her letter abruptly. "There is no other word for it. Outwardly, he is what he has been for the 13 years of our marriage, a quiet, devoted husband and father, a successful professional man, popular in business and club circles.

"But, actually, he is inflicting upon me and upon our children, Mimi, 11, and Charles, 8, as cruel a persecution as any torturer of old could devise. He has fallen completely under the spell of a woman two years older than he, a twice-married and twice-divorced woman, a woman whose dyed hair, coarse talk, and low associates ought to repel him, as they do all self-respecting people Chuck invests her with every charm and virtue on the list, can hardly speak of her for the reverence and emotion her name evokes in him, and proposes to tear our lives to pieces so that he may place her in the proud position of his wife.

"He wants me to give him a divorce, accept a third of his income, which would not be $3,000 a year, keep the children, allowing them to come and stay with 'Daisy' whenever he decrees, and that I keep friendly with Daisy and never say anything that reflects on her.

Never Loved Me

"He says he has never loved me—this after years of such companionship and happiness as few women know. He says Daisy will be a far more intelligent mother than I, to his children, and he told his own devoted mother that he had never had much respect for her judgment. He continues to live at home, seizes every opportunity to win the children's sympathy, telling them kindly that Mother isn't well, and that's why she is so nervous and tearful. He never speaks to me at all, declines all invitations that include me, and to my request, in a moment of desperate anger, that he move to his club, he returned calmly that he could not afford it, as he expected his expenses to be doubled shortly.

"... the children's sympathy ..."

"For Daisy's birthday he ordered a white cake frosted with daisies, in the center of which he placed a ring worth thousands that he had been holding, up to that moment, for Mimi, some day. When he took Charles into the mountains fishing for a week, she went along. If I force him to speak he says patiently, 'Why don't you act as Daisy does? She has never done a small or a mean thing in her life.' And he told me that if he threw her down now it would kill her, and brought out the old argument that it would be better to have two of the three of us happy, rather than all be miserable.

Heartbroken

"Of course, I can't eat, or sleep, or pretend I am not heartbroken. This horrible thing, vaguely suspected at this time last year is reality now. This morning, for the first time in months, Chuck was loving and coaxing with me. He begged me to be kind, to be nice to Daisy, to realize that she was taking nothing from me, because he and I had lost all love for each other long ago This last is completely untrue. And finally, as I did not yield, he hinted what I have known must come, that no household bills would be paid, and that the children and I would have no money at all until I agreed to his arrangement. When I said I could claim support under the law he said by all means to do so.

"All this is like a nightmare. What shall I do? Help me, and tell me what to do."

What you must do, Ray, will be done for Chuck's sake as well as yours and the children's. You must stick it out. Even if the woman were a finer type, and there were a faint chance of his really loving her, you would have to pursue the same course. You cannot fail the children because he does If you have to take boarders, or a job, or move back to Mother's, no matter. Stick to your guns. You cannot lose. And the person who will be most deeply grateful to you in the end will be Chuck himself.

But the eternal mystery of it, to a woman! Not that a man can be attracted to another woman, or want a divorce. Those things, if indicating a weakness for flattery and self-deception, are natural enough. But that the man should want to insult and hurt the woman he loves, sweep all the value of the happy past aside, injure his children as no enemy could injure them, and add to all this the bland assurance to everyone concerned that he is acting wisely, generously, and with a cool head. His wife, he assures her, never really loved him.

MRS. MERRITT SAYS NAGGING ACHES AND PAINS LEFT HER AFTER TAKING HADACOL

HADACOL Relieves Nagging Aches and Pains When Due to Deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron

Mrs. Louise Merritt of Earling, West Virginia, suffered from nagging aches and pains, a poor appetite and a tired run-down feeling which can be caused by a lack of Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron and the pains bothered her so that she was unable to do much house work. But let Mrs. Merritt tell you her story in her own words:

"I am 27 years old, married, and I am a housewife. Before I started taking HADACOL, I didn't have any appetite. I felt tired all the time and I suffered from nagging aches and pains, and I was unable to do much house work. Now, I am on my 4th bottle of HADACOL and I am eating well and the nagging aches and pains and tired feelings have all left me. I was also underweight before taking HADACOL. Now I have gained a few pounds. I intend to continue taking HADACOL."

Yes, now Mrs. Merritt is able to enjoy life once again.

Louise Merritt

HADACOL now makes it possible to actually relieve the REAL CAUSE of those nagging aches and pains when due to the lack of Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron in the system.

AND LISTEN TO THIS! Continued use of this great HADACOL not only gives continuous complete relief but helps keep such painful distress from returning when caused by such deficiencies. Now that's the kind of product you have been waiting for. That's the kind you should buy and start taking at once.

And HADACOL'S wonderful Vitamins and Minerals come in special pleasant liquid form so they are quickly absorbed and assimilated in the blood, ready to go to work at once.

HADACOL IS SO EFFECTIVE

Because HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these precious Vitamins and Minerals to every organ and to every part of your body.

You may have tried other Vitamin preparations or other Vitamin and Mineral preparations, so we make you this offer. Try a bottle of HADACOL today. You be the judge. If you do not believe that HADACOL is the best Vitamin and Mineral preparation you have ever taken, we will gladly send you back your money. That's our positive money-back guarantee. You take no chances.

So be fair to yourself. Don't go through life suffering from nagging aches and pains when they are caused by lack of Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron, when relief may be as close at hand as your nearest drug store.

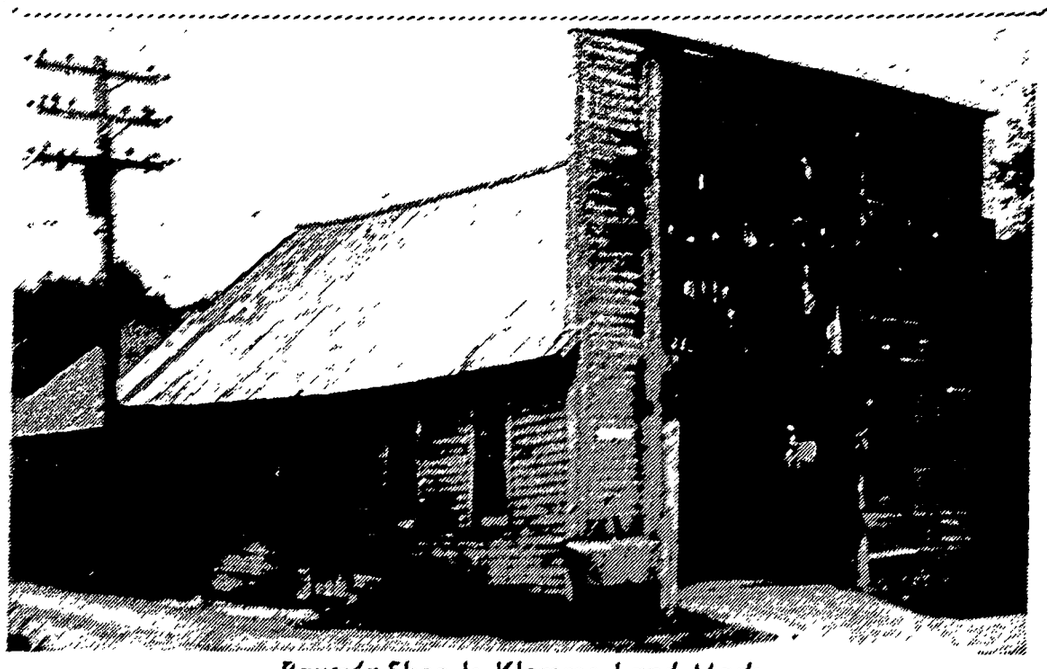
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES

There is only one HADACOL. Don't let anyone tell you something else is "just as good". Insist on genuine HADACOL. You risk nothing because HADACOL is sold on a strict money-back guarantee.

Sold at all drug stores. Trial size, $1.25, but buy the large family-size, only $3.50.

If your dealer does not sell HADACOL order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana.

One Of Iowa's Old Timer 'Smiths



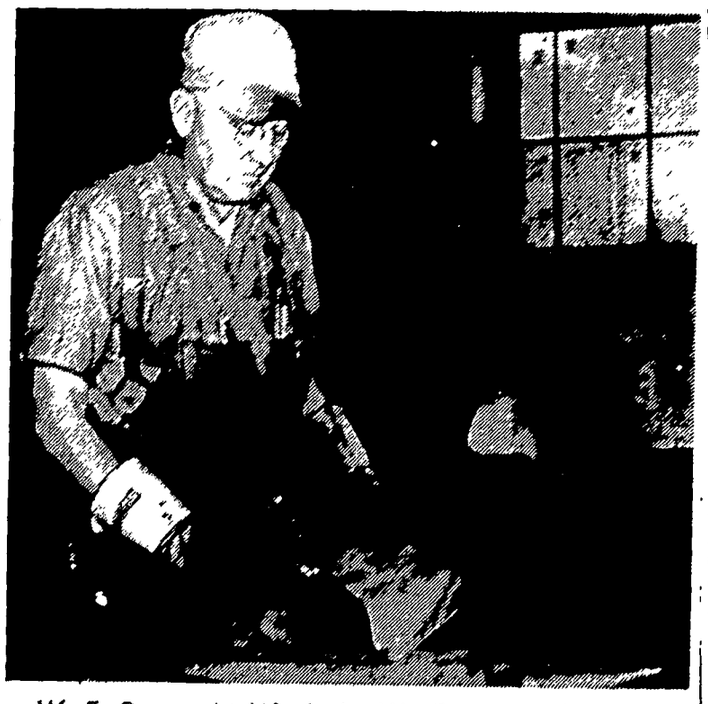
Pavey's Shop Is Klemme Land Mark

No Sign Needed—W F Pavey, pictured in doorway, declares that he doesn't need a sign in front of his neat but weatherbeaten blacksmith and general repair shop in Klemme "I've been here so long that everyone knows where to find me if they need some work done," the 67-year-old blacksmith explains. Pavey will celebrate his 38th anniversary of business in same building next October.

Editor's Note: The following story was written by Mrs. Mary Cady Tinker, Clarion, a friend of Mr. Pavey of many years standing. Mrs. Tinker has written many human interest stories for Iowa newspapers and magazines. We are very glad to have her story of Mr. Pavey's shop.

Every figure has a story. Many of them are sad stories of broken homes, broken hearts, broken lives. Some are stories of success, of happiness, of contentment. Some are stories of struggle and hardship, of poverty and want. Some are stories of adventure and romance. Some are stories of ambition and achievement. Some are stories of failure and disappointment. Some are stories of hope and despair. Some are stories of mechanization of farming and transportation.

Wagon repairing and horse shoeing jobs, once the main part of his day's work, are no longer in demand. It's been a long time since Pavey shod a horse. He doesn't remember exactly how long. He still does some sharpening of plows and tool repairing.



W. F. Pavey At Work At His Forge And Anvil

Pavey's customers are equipped with modern equipment.

The forge and anvil, trade marks of the blacksmith business, still have their place in Pavey's shop. And they are used frequently.

Pavey is president of the Klemme Civic Club and he has served as town council member. He and Mrs. Pavey have two children. Wayne Pavey of Webster City, and Mrs. John Clements, Klemme.

Question For Homemakers—Does It Pay To HOME-PRESERVE FOOD?

Line up your jars, polish up your equipment, find the best and nearest supply of fruits and vegetables—and marshal your summer's campaign. Food preservation is your first line of action this year.

Every homemaker who can put her hand on a readily available home-preserved supply or abundant market supplies of fruits and vegetables this summer is charmed with the job of feeding her "home front." The word nationally is—that a few of the present rational defense measures, well used to step up our food preservation.

Four Good Reasons

There are four good reasons for this, Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist of Iowa State College, tells us. (1) It's the best way we can help to fortify the health of each of us as we face again into a heavier work program both in industry and on the farm. (2) It will assure an adequate reserve of essential food supplies. (3) It can make our food dollars go further. (4) It will relieve bottlenecks of transportation, manpower and packaging materials.

The food situation nationally for the next several months is this: There will be an abundant supply of food, but all of us will be drawing upon these supplies to an even greater extent than we've done before. Our demand is expected to outdistance the supply from our own local production areas and the national commercial vegetable and fruit growing regions. Thus, higher prices are ahead—a real challenge to the family budget.

On this score, Miss Graham indicates that quite often she is asked if it pays to put up foods at home. Her answer is: "A well-planned home-preserved food supply will give your family foods with higher vitamin content, you'll be likely to plan better meals consistently, and you'll have the satisfaction of making major savings. Families with gardens have found that their work has paid them as high as $31.25 per 10-hour day in food produced. Even for folks who take advantage of peak seasons to buy fresh foods in quantity on the market, the saving is considerable. By doing this, they are helping to make good use of abundant commercial food supplies, and at the same time are checking inflationary pressures."

In dollars and cents, says Miss Graham, you can save half the cost of the food if you invest your time in canning or freezing.

Canning or freezing foods can become a tiresome ordeal unless you know what goals you've set for your family, she adds. There's no doubt that looking at last year's leftover supply of green beans can make you wonder if it all was worth the effort. On goals, she says that a recommended 100 quarts of canned or frozen food each person for the year is reasonable. But guage your own needs with this as a guide.

Canning Plan

On the basis of this goal, you might divide your canning plan up this way: 30 quarts of tomatoes put up in various ways; 20 quarts of green vegetables drawing upon a wide variety to avoid monotony in family meals; and 10 quarts of other vegetables, plus 40 quarts of fruits. If you have a home freezer or town locker, you might divert some of your food in that direction. In any case, a well thought-out plan will give as much variety in meal planning as you could wish.

Wise canning and freezing, Miss Graham finally adds, calls for following the best of recommended methods to assure that all your carefully preserved products will keep. Use your home freezer guide of directions in freezing foods, and look to the canning booklet "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," available from the college, to make your preservation season a success.

Iowa's Coal Palace

In 1869 a Coal Palace was built at Ottumwa, in the coal mining section of Iowa, and President Harrison was a visitor.

Lincoln's Iowa Farm

Abraham Lincoln received a land warrant for his services in the Black Hawk War. In 1860 a second warrant was issued to Lincoln and recorded in Crawford County in 1867. The 120 acre tract continued in the Lincoln family until 1892.

Holstein Cattle

The first herd of pure bred Holstein cattle west of the Mississippi was established by W. B Barney in the early seventies just south of Hampton.

Iowa Counties

Only three Iowa counties were named for women: Bremer, Louisa, and Pocahontas. Pocahontas County was named in honor of the Indian Princess whose heroism saved the life of John Smith. It is interesting to note that the first seat of government of Pocahontas County was named Rolfe, presumably for John Rolfe, who married the Indian Princess.

What steps up the health value?

. . . MILK

Like so many other foods, soups are more nourishing—better tasting, too--when made with milk. To almost every recipe in cooking and baking, Milk adds essential vitamins, minerals, proteins—so much extra nourishment at such low cost.

Use milk generously when preparing meals, and keep plenty of milk on hand for snack-time.

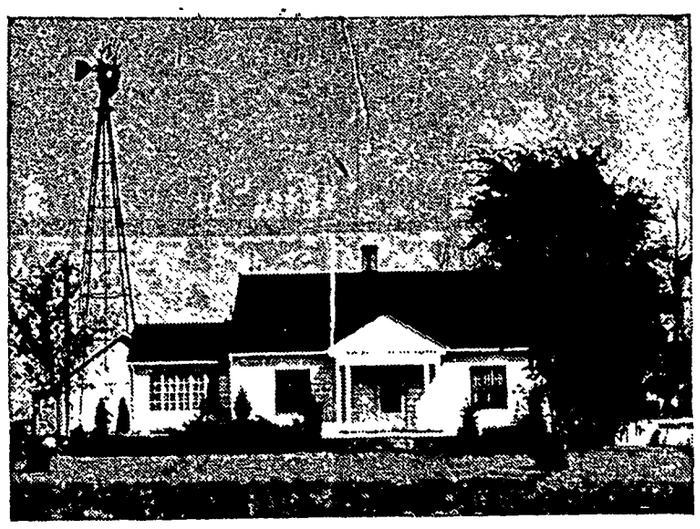
Farm Folks Describe—

THE HOUSE THEY WANT



Here's the recipe for the kind of house that typical farm families in 12 North Central states would like to have: a one-story, with sloping roof, one or more porches, from five to seven rooms and a basement.

What would the farmhouse of the future be like if the people who are to live in it had their say? That's what agricultural engineers and home economists set out to discover in a recent survey of farm family housing needs and preferences in the North Central states. The states included Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Ohio and Wisconsin. Here are some of the findings.

One-Story House

A sample of nearly 900 families was carefully chosen by statisticians to represent all of the families in the survey region. The majority of these families would prefer a one-story house with basement, five to seven rooms, a sloping roof, and one or more porches. Of the families who do like a second story, most emphasized they would like one or more bedrooms on the first floor.

Popular features wanted are a dining room that would accommodate six or more persons for a meal, space to serve meals in the kithchen, central heating and a spare bedroom. Other needs and wishes expressed were for a separate closet for coats and outdoor wraps, a first-floor workroom and a place for carrying on farm business. Families also wanted the house and drive planned in such a way that callers would naturally come to the front door.

Storage Space

Adequate storage space was given as one of the "must" features in a new house.

Why do so many families want a basement? Almost 70 percent of the families said they would want to wash and iron or dry clothes there. Other frequently named uses for a basement were: recreation, farm work (such as handling eggs, milk, cream, meat or seeds), work-bench space; wash-up area; and housework such as canning, churning and washing the separator.

What were the greatest needs for improvement in preseht farmhouses as disclosed by the survey? They were: clothes closets, basements with finished walls or floors, and installation of running water and bathrooms. And 25 percent of the houses in the region still had no electricity.

Purpose of Survey

The purpose of the survey was to give architects, engineers, builders, contractors, lumber dealers and educators an insight into the kind of houses farm families want so that they might be better equipped to help fill their needs. When the survey was made, 1 in 8 families were planning to build new homes for themselves.

An important over-all finding of the survey was the need for a farmhouse flexible enough to meet the changing size, needs and interests of a given family or of new families moving in. For instance, a six-room house best suited to the needs of farm families might provide the following: kitchen, living room, two bedrooms, and two rooms so located and planned that they could be used as a dinning room, work room or a third bedroom.

Reports Is Available

Findings of the survey, "Farm Family Housing Needs and Preferences in the North Central Region," have been published in booklet form by the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station at Ames.

Avery Sunbeams Met June 9th

The meeting of the Avery Sunbeams was held on June 9 at the home of JoAnn Burgess with 12 members answering roll call. We decided to have a bake sale Saturday night, June 16th to be held at Wellemeyer's Store. Plans were made for our all-day meeting to be held at Elizabeth Lemke's.

Mary Ann Blumer was program chairman. "Be Sweet and Clean," was a talk given by Marlene Blumer. Another talk, "Explanation of the Unit Methods of Sewing," was given by Kay Jacobs. Ione Rosendahl gave a talk on "Be Kind To Your Hand," Mrs. Roy Arnold gave a demonstration on "Laying Out a Pattern and Cutting." Lunch was served by Eunice Helps, JoAnn Burgess and Judy Brede.

100 YEARS OF BROTHERHOOD

YMCA Plans to Expand Services In Small Towns and Rural Areas

(The first of two articles.)

One hundred years ago the Young Men's Christian Association, known familiarly to four generations of Americans as "the Y", was founded in the U.S. to fight vice, degradation and delinquency in the cities. Since then, its aims have broadened. Today, the Y teaches Christian ethics, through good fellowship, to the entire community. With 3,500,000 members, the Y has been successful in the cities. Now, in planning its next century, the YMCA is going to move into small towns and rural areas

Always a self-searching organization, the Y is taking into account the somewhat humiliating fact that in this new campaign they are joining the tail-end of the parade. The 4-H clubs, the Epworth League, the Camp Fire Girls, the Future Farmers of America, the Girl Scouts, the Roman Catholic Rural Life Conference and even the youth program of the Mormon church are far ahead of the YMCA in respect to rural area activity.

Even their arch-rivals, the Young Women's Christian Assoc., is better organized outside of the cities than the Y. Some advisers at last year's Y conferences argued that other organizations held such a decisive edge in the farm country that competition would be a waste of time.

The social service program of the Y, however, is without parallel, offering as it does everything from recreation in the swimming pool or on the basketball court to a course in auto mechanics or professional advice in marital or parent-child relations. No organization which attempts to do similar work in any of its fields of activity is as well organized nationally or internationally or has such tremendous resources in manpower, equipment and experience.

In rural areas, however, the Y has a lot to learn Fifty-four per cent of the YMCA's established in cities under 25,000 have died of inertia and disinterest in the last fifty years. For its failures in the past the Y freely blames itself. The organizations have failed to learn what people in small towns are like, what services they need and want and how they are best reached, Y officials recently declared.

In the cities, the Y has been particularly successful in handling restless, idle youngsters from all social and economic classes who, anxious for something to do, can just as easily be attracted by a stimulating hobby or a vigorous, healthy sport as by a pool hall or a low-class movie. The same need for legitimate outlets for aggressive energy does not exist in rural surroundings, Y researchers have discovered. Nor are they interested in the same skills or educational trends.

On the other hand, people in non-urban areas are likely to be anxious about health problems, and the Y will turn its attention to promoting good health in the country.

THE LACK OF PROPERLY trained teachers, the movement for consolidation of schools, the decline of the rural church, the absence of recreational programs for both children and grown-ups will be its other major concerns. It will attempt to introduce a new awareness of the importance of mental health and study, in conjunction with trained scientists, the emotional stresses and strains peculiar to country living.

The program sounds overly ambitious to those not acquainted with the Y's last century of progress, but the organization has proved its right to plan on a grandiose scale. Its influence on American life in the past century is almost without parallel.

Basketball, now called the country's most popular sport, was invented by a YMCA physical education instructor who was looking for something to replace the dreary up-down-up-down calisthenics of his day. A few years later another instructor introduced volleyball. The Y was the first to establish summer camps and to encourage the now multi-million dollar summer camping movement. They gave the Boy Scouts their start-off push. A quarter-century ago the Y first recognized the psychological dangers in the decline of father and son relationships and devised the Indian Guide program to bring fathers and sons back together. They were the first to declare a holiday to honor the nation's fathers, and they have taught millions of young Americans how to swim.

shows and television programs, and will also film "Shadow Riders of the Yellowstone". This novel by Les Savage made such an impression on Ladd that he bought the screen rights himself without even asking his studio to get the story for him.

Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, triumphant stars of the current festival in Great Britain, are doing something never before attempted by an acting team. On alternate nights they play Antony and Cleopatra as written by Shakespeare and by George Bernard Shaw. Shaw's heroine is a young girl, Shakespeare's a mature and wily siren.

Ronald Colman and Benita have signed up for another year in "The Halls of Ivy", an encouraging sign to all radio producers who believe that there is a large and growing audience for adult entertainment on the air.

THE FICTION CORNER

OBADIAH

By Richard H. Wilkinson

OBADIAH Nelson was a man of unappreciated qualities. For two years he had worked as clerk in the scenario department of Magnificent Films, Inc., and had thought up ideas for pictures which scenario writers wrote into scripts and directors produced for a neat profit. "Lady Luck," Magnificent's most recent success, had netted the house something over a million dollars. Noel Norbert, who wrote the script received $2000, and Obadiah, who thought up the idea, collected his $60 per week.

3-Minute Fiction

Ada Adams, who occupied a desk next to Obadiah's and who earned $50 a week reading stories, knew what was going on and told Obadiah in no uncertain terms what she thought of him.

"Barnum was right," she said. "How a man can be such a sucker and still live is beyond me."

Obadiah blushed to the roots of his hair.

"Why, shucks, I didn't do anything. It was just an idea I had that I mentioned to Mr. Norbert."

And Mr. Norbert collected $2000 for it."

A month later Magnificent began work on "Love's Appeal." Noel Norbert had turned in the script after taking Obadiah to lunch. A week after that Ada Adams came into the little restaurant on Sunset boulevard where Obadiah was eating lunch.

"Well, how's Magnificent's $60 a week sucker today?" she asked. "They tell me Mr. Norbert has turned in another box-office success that you thought up for him. He's asking $2500 for it."

"Well, how's Magnificent's $60 a week sucker today?" Ada asked Obadiah.

Obadiah's face went white. Without knowing it Miss Adams had aggravated a wound that she had inflicted five weeks previous with her first scathing comment on Mr. Nelson's lack of what it takes to get ahead. She was, therefore, astonished when Obadiah suddenly rose without a word and left her.

Outside, his cheeks still rather pale, Obadiah was hastening toward the Magnificent studios.

"Mr. Maurice," began Obadiah firmly, "I want to know why it is that you pay $2000 to Noel Norbert for writing scenarios that I think up. No, don't answer. I know why. It's because you think I'm a sucker without enough backbone to stand up for my rights. Well, let me tell you something. I mean, you can drive a horse to water but you can't make him willing—I mean, drink. Or something. Anyway, I'm quitting. The Pacific studios have offered me a thousand a week to work for them."

Obadiah paused, breathing heavily, and mopped his brow. "Well," he said, "I guess that's all."

"Is that so?" said Mr. Maurice. "Well, young man, you're wrong. That ain't half of it." And he punched a bell button on his desk.

ADA ADAMS was eating dinner in the same little restaurant on Sunset that evening when Obadiah came in.

"Well," he said, "I've been raised from $60 a week to $1000."

"So I heard," said Ada, "Congratulations. I'll bet you could have got more, however, if you'd gone back to Pacific and told them that Maurice was meeting their price."

"I couldn't," said Obadiah, "because Pacific never offered anything in the first place."

Ada stared in open-mouth wonder. "Well, well, well," she said. "And likewise, well."

"Even if they had," said Obadiah, "I couldn't have thought up ideas for Pacific anyhow."

"Why?" asked Ada.

"Because you wouldn't have been there," said Obadiah. "All those ideas I thought up were about you and me. Just seeing you put them into my head. Without you I couldn't think of anything. In fact," he added, "sometimes I can't think of anything with you."

Ada swallowed a scallop whole. "For goodness sake!" she exclaimed. "Obadiah Nelson, I didn't think you had it in you to propose marriage."

"Propose?" said Obadiah. "Who's proposing? But it's not a bad idea at that."

Honest Harold Ickes 'Stole' Tide Lands Oil Wells

By Wright A. Patterson

WHEN I WAS A BOY in Washington county, Iowa, Long's Creek was one of the waterways of that county. It was not navigable even for a light canoe. It was just a creek, with water in spots in the summer, and those spots provided breeding places for bull heads and swimming pools for the boys of the neighborhood.

Because of the swimming holes, the boys claimed Long's Creek as their rightful property. Had the federal government of those days attempted to do what the federal government is doing today, it would have meant an insurrection on the part of those Washington county boys, that would have taken a corps of marines to suppress.

The counties of southern California have creeks similar to those in every county of every state. These California creeks serve the specially useful purpose of irrigation for the hundreds of foothill farms, without which they would not produce, and would be valueless. Those creeks have been the source of irrigation for those foothill farms, back to the Spanish mission days.

Now, without warning of any kind, the federal government notifies the farmers that they can no longer use the water of those creeks, as they are federal government property, and the rights to the water they carry belong to the federal government. Those water rights have been recognized as belonging to the farms they irrigate for more than 100 years.

That is seizure of property by the government, without adequate compensation to the owner, and it is specifically forbidden by the fifth amendment to the Constitution, but the federal government has refused to recognize the rights to compensation by the citizens.

What has happened in these California counties, could happen in Washington county, Iowa, or in any other county in any state, if California permits the central government to get away with such a steal.

It will be tried in other states, and the citizen will soon have no rights the government at Washington will recognize. That bold move on the part of the attorney general's office is more far-reaching than the little community of Wallbrook in southern California. Should it get away with that steal, there is no limit to what it can take.

In the days when F. D. R. and the New Deal was operating with the regularity of well greased clock work, honest Harold Ickes, then secretary of the interior, was a recognized source of New Deal ideas. One that bobbed up in his always fertile brain was for the government to take over the tide lands oil and so gather in the royalties the operators were paying to the states for each barrel of oil they recovered from the ocean depths, and to secure which they had invested large, very large, sums in the drilling and operation of those tideland wells.

The terms Honest Harold offered were far from satisfactory to the operators, and they refused. But they stopped pumping and drilling. The states lost the royalties they had been receiving, and to supplement their diminishing revenues had to levy other taxes on their already over burdened people; the nation lost the supply the tide lands fields had provided.

And all because Honest Harold had a bad dream. He would provide more revenue with which to meet New Deal spendings, and put one over on the wealthy oil operators. Like some other of his ideas, that one did not work out as he had planned it.

Without that tide land oil we cannot meet the national defense requirements and keep 52 per cent more automobiles on the roads. Should the service station refuse to sell you all the gas you might wish, it will be safe to lay the blame at the door of Honest Harold's New Deal dreams.

Learning to Say 'We'

Lesson for July 8, 1951

The "We-Feeling"

GOD INVENTED the family; that is what is meant by calling it a "divine institution." It is part of God's plan for each of his children that he shall learn how to live, not in a lonely cell by himself, not as a lonely wolf fighting against all comers, but as a member of a family.

Dr. Foreman

The family is enormously important in many ways There is room to speak of only one of them. Students of personality have found a new but simple name for something that every one ought to have, but not every one does have: it is called the "we-feeling."

The lone-wolf type of person never really thinks "we." His mind divides the world into two armed camps: on the one side is "I" and on the other side is every one else.

He goes through life assuming that nobody is for him, nobody is with him, and he in turn is for nobody and with nobody. His "hand is against every man," as the Bible says. Even if he teams up with others for a while, he will double-cross them if he thinks he will make something out of it. He is your typical criminal, "anti-social" as teachers and sociologists call him.

What It Means to Grow Up

CHILDREN usually begin life without much we-feeling, if any. They don't naturally share their toys or their dinners or anything else. They grab all they can and they don't like to be grabbed from. The process of growing up—really growing up, not merely getting older and bigger—is a process of developing a healthy we-feeling. Nearly every one develops this to some extent, of course; but when some people say "we" they don't mean very many.

We have all heard of the man who prayed: "Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife. Us four, no more. Amen!" He doesn't make a very good citizen.

But as the "we"-circle grows wider and wider we get a more and more public-spirited and service-minded citizen, till at the high point of the we-feeling we see a man like St. Paul who calls himself a debtor to all men, or like John Wesley who said, "The world is my parish," or a modern international citizen and statesman such as John R. Mott.

How the Family Helps

THE very best place to learn the "we-feeling" is in a good family. This does not necessarily mean an aristocratic family or a wealthy one. Many good families, perhaps most good ones, are quite poor and obscure, as the family of Jesus was.

But whether it is in the city or the country, or however large or small it may be, the good family is one that helps every member of it to grow up into a healthy adult we-feeling. Living in a family teaches the meaning of "all for one."

In a good family, all are proud of what any one accomplishes; the big brothers and sisters are just as pleased with little brother's first steps as little brother is himself. When father wins a prize at the state fair, or when mother is elected an officer in her church society, or when Molly makes the honor roll in school or Jim makes the basketball team, everybody in the family is just as pleased as if they themselves had received the honor.

When any one of the family gets into trouble, they all stand by to help.

The Best Families Are Christian

THE best families are those where religion is real; and if we believe that the Christian religion is the best, then we shall agree that Christians ought to have the best families.

Remember that in a Christian home Christ is the real head of the house. If ever any one had the "we-feeling" in its purest form, it was Jesus. No one can ever live long in his company and stay selfish.

So in the home where he is not only the best-loved guest but the true head of the house, every one from oldest to youngest learns to say "we" and loves to say it, and means it and lives it. From such homes come the best citizens and neighbors.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Memories Are Short

OUR MEMORIES are so very short. And as a people we do not seem to learn, or at least to heed, from our past experience. We can at least say, however, "Here's where we came in."

Do you remember back in 1946? That's when price controls were thrown out the window. They were thrown overboard because big business and some segments of the farm industry told the people that once controls were off prices would find their own level, that the law of supply and demand would bring prices down, that increased production would win the battle for us.

Do you remember the slogan "Had Enough?" Do you remember the threats of the big cattlemen that unless price controls were discarded there would be a beef shortage, although there were just as many cattle in the country as before?

That was a phony issue, as phony as the threats and predictions of the big cattlemen are today. Don't forget price controls did work prior to 1946.

But now the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and the master of the National Grange are telling congress that controls won't work—just eliminate controls and prices will find their own level and increased production, plus increased taxes, will do the trick.

In 1946 prices did find their own level, but it was a skyrocket level—a guided missile level that soared prices up 12½ per cent in five months.

The Opposing Side

What is so paradoxical about this picture is that we have big business and big agriculture, telling big businessmen and big farmers, they are all wrong. For on the opposing side of this spearhead to kill off wage and price controls are the men heading the control agencies, such a galaxy of big business executives as have never been in Washington before.

Wilson Is Top Man

Heading the top control agency is probably the Mr. Big of big business, Charles E. Wilson of General Electric, who gave up an astronomical salary of something like $250,000 annually to try to do something for his country. And he is doing it.

Mr. Wilson tells big business, "This generation has witnessed the horror and agony of two world wars. Yes, we are building America's might. But for what purpose? Not to fight a third world war, but to keep it from happening . . . Under these circumstances is it too much to call upon industry and business to take down their 'business as usual' signs? I ask you, is it fair to call upon industry, labor and the farmer to be content with reasonable profits, wages and prices?"

Johnston's Plea

Then next in line is Eric Johnston, price stabilizer, twice president of the U.S.C. of C., and a very successful businessman in his own right, who tells big business that the beef industry is trying to ride rough shod over the American housewife with a cry of "damn the consumer and full pockets ahead."

He declared his fellow Mr. Bigs of big business and big agriculture who are trying to defeat wage and price controls exhibit "a mixture of astigmatism, wishful thinking, and a burning desire for business as usual at a time which is perhaps the most critical in all history."

Production at Peak

Production is at the highest rate in the history of this nation at this moment, a rate of 351 billions a year; personal income is up to $223 billion a year; savings are at highest point in history; a house committee has recommended a 12½ per cent tax boost.

Bank credit, consumer credit, installment credits have been curbed and may be tightened. Federal reserve board and treasury have agreed on new debt management policy, and you will be asked to buy bonds until it hurts. Still inflation persists and our dollar buys less. Price and wage controls have not had a chance to work. Why not give them a chance,

Slaughter Tapers Off

The volume of cattle going to market was below normal in recent weeks and big packers passed up many of the limited offerings, claiming they couldn't buy them and stay within price ceilings.

Spokesmen for the office of price stabilization, however, charged the situation was a "sitdown strike" and "an obvious attempt by the cattle industry to create an artificial shortage." It is an attempt to kill controls

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

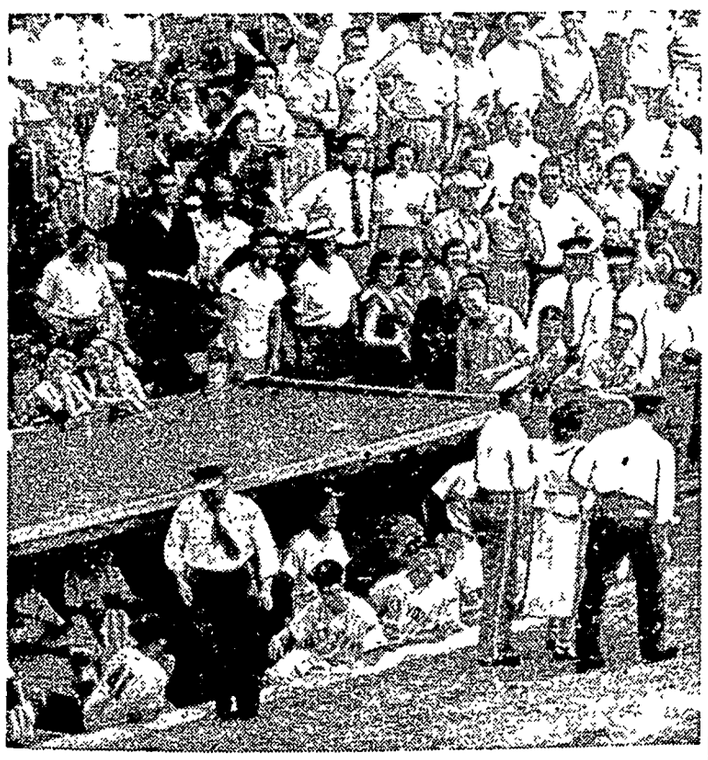
PUERTO RICAN NO. 1 HERO . . . Returning to Puerto Rico, Sergeant John Rosado, member of Puerto Rico's 65th regiment, is given a tumultous welcome on his arrival in San Juan from Korea. The sarge is one of the grade A heroes of the war. He has won the silver star, the bronze star and the purple heart with cluster, and now has been recommended for the congressional medal of honor, first Puerto Rican to be so honored, Rosado saved the lives of seven comrades by throwing his body over a Red mortar shell. The explosion blew him six feet into the air. He is now home on rotation, recovering from wounds.

TIMELY SALE IN PRICE WAR . . . Not to be outsold by other leading department stores which have been in the throes of a price war, a department store on Union Square, New York City, dropped all barriers on prices on nationally-known watches. Many of the timepieces were listed at 50 per cent off their former retail price. Representatives of the major watch companies, seeking to control retail prices of goods that have passed from their ownership, have sought to serve injunctions against the sale and put an end to the consumers' field day. Here's a view of a watch department jammed with buyers.



WOMAN IN YANKEES' DUGOUT . . . A "lady" fan climbed over the wall in Cleveland stadium recently and invaded the private sanctuary of the New York Yankees dugout at the start of a second game of a double header between the Yanks and the Indians. Two employees of the stadium are firmly escorting the uninvited visitor off the baseball field, as fans and players in the dugout seem to get quite a bit of amusement from the incident. Rice, the staple food preferred by Chinese and North Koreans, is made in batches of hundreds of pounds in these huge kettles. This gives a graphic idea of the job involved in caring for thousands of Communist prisoners in allied hands. More than 10,000 were captured recently.

Cattlemen Withhold Beef in Protest Of Government's Rollback Program

EMPTY MEAT CASES— Empty meat cases were beginning to show up across the nation as cattlemen continued to hold beef off the market in protest to the government's price rollback program of 8-to-10 cents a pound by October 1. The shortage was being felt only in larger cities, but the home town housewife can expect to feel the pinch if marketing does not increase within a short time.

President Truman and Price Stabilizer Michael V. DiSalle continued to stick by their rollback decisions. DiSalle told reporters retreat now might wreck the whole stabilization program. President Truman called it a "good program" and said he thought beef producers could be brought around.

Empty meat cases and full corrals described the meat situation in the nation last week.

While Truman and DiSalle were making these statements, Chicago and other cities reported nearly empty cattle pens. Packing firms continued to slaughter only a trickle of their normal quantity of cattle. Only 122,100 cattle were sent to market last week in the nation's 12 biggest livestock centers. In the corresponding week a year ago 167,700 were marketed.

At the moment it seems unlikely there will be a great increase in slaughtering until after June 30. Cattlemen are gambling that price controls will be lifted at the end of this month.

The present situation is somewhat similar to the 1946 beef battle when cattlemen withheld beef in their successful attempt to kill the government's price control program. It was argued at the time that if price controls were lifted there would be an increase in production and a decrease in price. There was an increase of production, but as today's prices testify there was no decrease in price.

FAR EAST SPECULATION—The unexpected and unannounced visit of George C. Marshall, secretary of defense, to Korea raised considerable amount of speculation in the home towns of the nation. Was his visit the first step toward a cease fire in Korea? Was some new military development about to be revealed?

Repeatedly, Marshall told reporters he did not expect any Chinese peace move soon and that his visit was strictly military. He remained silent after a series of guarded meetings with Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, U. N. supreme commander in the far east.

Of this much the home towner can be reasonably sure. Aging and not too well Marshall did not make the long and tiresome trip to Korea as a mailman's holiday, so to speak. If the home towner is speculating, the Kremlin and Pieping must be down right worried.

MACARTHUR INVESTIGATION—The Armed services and foreign relations committees' investigation of the dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur moved on its weary way with two new witnesses. For eight days Secretary of State Dean Acheson testified. The committees then called Lt. Gen. Albert C Wedemeyer.

Acheson's testimony was remarkable in that during the eight days there was no show of temper on the part of the witness or the investigators. In the minds of many, Acheson's thorough coverage of all questions asked was an attempt to justify the administration and the first move toward his withdrawal as secretary of state.

Only on one point was his testimony different from that of other administration witnesses He asserted that MacArthur approved the 1946 attempt to bring the Chinese Reds and Nationalists together for a "unified, democratic China" MacArthur immediately issued a statement that he was the victim of a "fantastic" lie.

The other witness, Gen. Wedemeyer, backed and even went beyond the Korean War proposals of Gen MacArthur, but said President Truman had the right to fire his old commander Briefly, Wedemeyer would withdraw American troops from Korea, break off relations with Russia, go into full mobilization, and "go to the real perpetrator of all this." These would be drastic moves and a definite risk of war.

WHEAT CROP MAKES COMEBACK—The agriculture department reported the nation's wheat crop is making a comeback from bad weather conditions and now promises the eighth successive harvest of more than a billion bushels. The June forecast is about 72 million bushels more than forecast a month ago.

The new forecast indicated a wheat crop of 1,054,000,000 bushels, about 25 million bushels more than last year's crop. Such a production would be only about 96 million bushels short of the government's production goal.

Unfavorable weather, particularly drought in the southwest great plains, and insects in the same area, coupled with cool, wet spring weather, had put the crop prospects under a cloud a month ago. Conditions improved greatly in May to bring the overall farm-production prospects up to normal by June 1

THE SLOW ADVANCE—United Nations troops in Korea smashed the Communist "Iron Triangle" and continued their slow advance northward. The Reds have put up stiff resistance in the last two weeks and suffered an estimated 40,000 casualties in defense of the triangle.

The Communist were retreating slowly and orderly. There were indications in some areas of enemy buildup, possibly in preparation for renewed attacks. There was nothing in the over-all picture that indicated a clear cut victory for United Nation troops

United Nations troops continued their slow, steady advance in Korea, inflicting thousands of casualties on Chinese Reds in the "Iron Triangle."

INFLATION BATTLE—June 30, expiration date of the present defense production act, is only a few days away and there are several indications that the administration is afraid new control laws won't be strong enough.

President Truman appeared worried and made three moves to get a strengthened law through congress. He issued a public warning that the nation may see "an unmanageable torrent of inflation" unless economic controls are extended, he called in congressional leaders for a get-the-controls-bill through conference, and he made a direct appeal to the people in a nationwide radio talk.

Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston, on radio and television shows, has tried to arouse the people to the dangers of inflation. Neither President Truman or Johnson have been very successful in their efforts.

DAY OF DECISION

Local Boards Must Pass on Students

There is going to be a buzz of action around home town draft boards within a short time. Local boards will start to receive any time now results of recent college tests to determine which college students shall have their military service deferred. On the results of these tests local boards—3,853 of them—must make their decisions.

Board members must determine whether Joe College, who wants to complete his education before donning a uniform, shall be classified II-A (student deferment) or I-A (eligible for induction).

In making this determination, they may take into account his score on the aptitude test, his scholastic standing in his college class, and his locally-known capabilities and possible capacity for leadership.

First Pale Sox Surge Won Pennant

By GRANTLAND RICE

The new White Sox stampede, which the wearers of the Pale Hose started some time back, recalled again the first White Sox rally which won a pennant and later a world series back in 1906, a matter of 45 years ago.

Grantland Rice

The 1951 charge is led largely by fine pitching, as well as consistent all-around play. It is also a stirring tribute to manager Paul Richards, who has turned in an amazing job, whatever happens later on.

At the time of the first White Sox upheaval, we were toiling in the Cleveland vineyard where Larry Lajoie was in charge. Late in July or early August, Cleveland had a good chance to win the pennant. The White Sox Hitless Wonders were in seventh place, and rapidly going nowhere.

Then suddenly it began to happen. The helpless Sox began to win game after game, until they had won 19 in a row and moved into first place.

How did this happen so suddenly? In the first place, they had a grand catcher—Billy Sullivan. In the second place they had a fine pitching staff headed by Big Ed Walsh, Doc White and Nick Altrock.

The Sox couldn't hit but they had a strong defensive club, with Jiggs Donahue, Frank Isbell, George Rohe in the infield and a good outfield built around Fielder Jones.

The ballplayer who actually led the White Sox insurrection was Jiggs Donahue, the fiery Irishman playing first. He not only handled the bag brilliantly, but he was the flaming spirit of the team. If any one of his fellow players started loafing or not giving his entire all, Donahue would threaten to brain him. He rode the team with savage and untiring venom.

That Sox rally won the 1906 pennant although Cleveland had a great team, with seven or eight .300 hitters and a fine pitching staff that had Addie Joss, William Bernhard, Otto Hess, Dusty Rhodes, Earl Moore and others.

But this team, which Lajoie, Bill Bradley, Cotton Turner and Claude Rossman on the field couldn't quite meet that wild Sox counter-attack.

The World Series Upset

The White Sox carried their rush on through the world series, where they were not given a faint look-in. The Cubs had just won the National league pennant with 116 victorious games.

They had the brilliant Johnny Kling back of the bat; Three-Finger Brown, Ed Reulbach, Jack Pfeister and others in the box; Chance, Evers, Tinker and Steinfeldt in the infield; plus a star outfield.

They looked unbeatable. But what the populace at large overlooked was the Sox pitching staff. Ed Walsh was just coming into his own as the greatest spitball star of all time. Two years later he won 40 games and saved 12 others; working in 60 games that season. Doc White was the sole Ty Cobb nemesis. Nick Altrock was another star.

There was one funny development as the series started. There was a big Irishman named Fog Finnegan who had been a hot Cub rooter. Fog worked in a saloon on the West Side near the ball park. Most of the players or many of them were his friends.

Just before the first game started, Fog stood up and shouted: "Two hundred dollars on the West Side." There were no takers. So Finnegan tried again: "Three hundred dollars on the West Side." Still no takers.

Then the batteries were announced:

For the West Side—Reulbach and Kling.

For the South Side—Walsh and Sullivan.

Fog Finnegan swallowed twice, leaped again to his feet, and called out: "Five hundred on the South Side—them's the byes."

It has been a long, long time since the White Sox have had the chance to wipe out that 1919 series, where the white suddenly changed to black. They have been shooting at a recovery, now a matter of 32 years.

The Other DiMaggio

More than a few pieces for newspapers and magazines have been written about Lou Gehrig's long span under Babe Ruth's gigantic shadow. Big Lou of Columbia and the Yankees drew more than normal cheering during his brilliant career, but no one can doubt that his partnership with Ruth was on the junior side. There was only one Babe Ruth.

In the same way, there is no questioning the fact that a better than fair player is known as Dominic.

No one can doubt that Dom, as good as he is, isn't quite another Joe. Dom is about 30 or 35 points back of his older brother when it comes to his lifetime batting average. But Dom is just about as good an outfielder as Joe or anyone else.

The two DiMaggios and Terry Moore are the best centerfielders I've seen since Tris Speaker, and all three are up around the Speaker class.

Goodell Church Is Setting For Ceremony Sunday Eve

MISS MARLENE ROTHS IS BRIDE OF VERDELL WAGNER

Double Ring Ceremony Followed By Reception In Church Dining Room

The E.U.B. Church at Goodell was the scene of a double ring ceremony Sunday evening at 7:00 o'clock when Miss Marlene Roths, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Roths of Klemme became the bride of Verdell Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Wagner of Belmond, with the Rev. Harold Knight performing the rites.

Maurice Jacobs, Klemme, played the nuptial music and accompanied Miss Marilyn McNutt who sang "Because," and "I Love You Truly."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of white satin with veil and train, and a pearl necklace and earrings, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Kay Wagner, wore an aqua formal with corsage. Best man was Billy Roths; flower girl, Elaine Lacey; ring bearer, Ronnie Lacey and the ushers were Howard Wagner and Junior Roths. The church was lighted with candles and a candelabra provided the background for the altar.

The bride's mother wore a navy blue dress with corsage and the bridegroom's mother wore a tan suit with corsage.

After the ceremony some 75 guests attended the reception in the dining room of the church. The bride's table was centered with a four-tier wedding cake and decorated with baskets of gardenias.

Miss Neva Anderson was in charge of the guest book and the Misses Luella and Mariam Priebe had charge of the gifts. Mrs. E. H. Nuehring poured and Mrs. Claude White and Jeanne Mickelson cut the cakes.

The waitresses, Helen Suckow, Luella and Mariam Priebe, Neva Anderson and Jeanne Mickelson all wore corsages. The Missionary Society of the church also assisted with the preparation and serving.

The bride is a graduate of the Klemme high school and has been employed at Thornton. The groom is in the Army and stationed at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and will return to the post after a wedding trip.

50,000 BOYS and GIRLS
WILL PARTICIPATE IN THE IOWA 4-H HAZARD HUNT!
July 21, 1951
TO HELP KEEP AMERICA STRONG BY Saving MATERIAL! TIME! LIVES!

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

By proclamation of Gov. William S. Beardsley, residents of Iowa are urged to join in the observance of National Farm Safety Week, July 22 to 28.

The Governor's proclamation points out that "preventable accidents result in death or injury to great numbers of Iowa farm residents each year."

Approximately 500 Iowa farm folk are killed and 45,000 injured each year, making the annual cost of Iowa farm accidents total more than $3,000,000.

"Such accidents cause tragic losses of life and limb and reduce the manpower for food production which is so vital to the strength of our state and nation," Gov Beardsley said.

He requests every farm family to "remove hazards" and "adopt safe practices in all activities."

Working in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress, Iowa 4-H Clubs will conduct hazard hunts on farms throughout the state on Saturday, July 21st.

Using red tags, 50,000 4-H boys and girls will mark danger spots on the farms they inspect and encourage farmers to correct them during Farm Safety Week.

Your Iowa Safety Congress urges: Remove hazards on the farm and save material, time—and lives!

Mrs. Clara Stille Presented The Borden's Bouquet by KGLO

Saturday afternoon Postmaster Franklin Kluckhohn delivered a box of red roses to Mrs. Clara Stille from radio station KGLO of Mason City.

Mrs. Garfin, (the former Shirley Stille of Klemme) granddaughter of Mrs Stille had written a nice letter to Borden's who give bouquets for the best letters. Many Klemme listeners heard the program last Thursday morning.

Goodell Damaged By High Winds, Hail Sunday A.M.

WIND STORM DOES GREAT DEAL OF DAMAGE AT GOODELL

Early Sunday Morning Storm Was Near Tornado Proportions

Residents of Goodell were awakened shortly after 5:00 o'clock Sunday morning by a terrific wind storm that swept across the town, up-rooting trees, blowing down large trees and damaging a few roofs. Telephone and electric service lines were down in a number of places in town where trees had blown across the lines.

The heavy wind storm came in from the northwest. At Klemme the wind was felt to be strong but only a few branches were blown from trees. Toward Goodell the effects of the wind began to show with many trees blown down on the north side of farm groves. The storm must have struck full force at Goodell and continued south to Belmond where many trees were up-rooted and branches blown from the trees.

A barn on a farm 4 miles east of Goodell was flattened by the storm. A number of smaller buildings were upset. At the C. A. Larsen farm west of Klemme, a silo was blown down and the barn was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. A silo was blown down at the Bill Lacey farm south of Klemme.

In Goodell some damage was done to house roofs. At the Green Elevator part of a roof over a bean storage warehouse was torn off causing damage to stored beans.

About a mile north of Goodell hail damaged crops to quite an extent. Some hail fell in Goodell, which also had a heavy rain with the wind storm.

Two barns were burned to the ground at the Fred Lurar farm 8 miles west and one mile north of Klemme. Lightning caused the fire.

The Central Iowa Telephone Co. of Klemme had a lot of line damage due to trees falling on rural lines. Only 4 lines out of 26 were operating Sunday morning after the storm.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

" . . . a small boy who could run very fast." That is the way a Highway Patrolmen described the 2-year-old child. It's as simple and tragic a description as any that could be written - now.

At 10 o'clock one morning, four young men crowded into the cab of a loaded gravel truck and started across an Iowa city, driving through residential sections to avoid traffic.

About a half hour later, the little boy who could "run very fast" was standing on the curb in front of his home. His older sister, watching from the yard, saw the truck coming and ran toward the boy, afraid he would go into the street.

Perhaps the boy thought his sister was playing a game. He turned and ran the last few steps of his life.

A few seconds later, the girl picked up the body of her brother and ran with it to the house, as though just getting home would somehow change the unbelievable thing that had happened.

Four young men climed sickly out of the truck that had come to a stop with a broken wheel against the curb.

Fragments from a Patrolman's report tell the whole, needless story:

" . . . driving with a chauffeur's license.

" . . . four riding in cab.

" . . . exceeding speed limit.

" . . . faulty brakes.

And "a small boy who could run very fast."

Auxiliary Election

MRS. FLORA BACK, NEW AUXILIARY PRESIDENT

The American Legion Auxiliary met for its monthly meeting on July 3rd at the Council Room with Carrie Schwichtenberg opening the meeting in regular form.

Lois Chambers gave some rules of using and displaying the American flag.

A new election for president was necessary when Fern Linahon, president-elect, resigned, Flora Back was elected.

Carrie Schwichtenbeg read some highlights of the Spring Conference from the book. No one from our unit was able to attend this Conference in Emmettsburg.

The holiday coin cards will be used again this year.

The president, Flora Back and the secretary, Helen Stille, will be sent as delegates to the State Convention in August. Louise Etchen and Thelma Arnold were elected alternate delegates.

A national citation for reaching our membership quota on time for 1950-1951 was presented to the unit by Carrie Schwichtenberg.

After the business meeting, the following newly-elected officers were installed:

President --------- Flora Back
Vice Pres. ------ Louise Etchen
Sec.-Treas. ------- Helen Stille
Historian ---- Thelma Arnold
Chaplain -------- Nellie Arnold
Srgt.-at-arms -- Neva Anderson
Executive Board - Leafy Coobs
Neva Hartzell
Mary Ahrenkiel

The installing officer was Margaret Thomas. Thelma Arnold was winner of the door prize.

Acheson's Testimony

HOW MUCH the American people know about the seven days of grilling testimony which Secretary of State Dean Acheson gave to the joint committee investigating the ouster of General MacArthur is hard to judge. This is true because of the way in which some newspapers have treated the whole MacArthur episode, and, because for months Secretary Acheson has been held up to ridicule in a conspiracy of intimidation to force him out of office.

But Mr. Acheson would not be intimidated and he gave a brilliant presentation of the facts of record which even won for him the praise of some of his political enemies. He says he will not resign. President Truman says he will remain in the cabinet. So well did the secretary handle himself in the face of the most grueling questioning that the traditionally Republican New York Herald Tribune said editorially:

"Nowhere in their lengthy cross-examination have the hostile senators seriously shaken the Acheson position or the prior policies. Nowhere have they even begun to sustain the vague mass of accusation - of pro-Communist, appeasement, betrayal, misfeasance and blunder - which has been woven around him and one cannot really read the transcript of the hearings without being forced to the conclusion that most of this is simply, to use Senator McMahon's words, an example of "error being converted into accepted fact by constant iteration'."

'Big Lie' Dangerous

This policy of intimidation of government officials by telling the big lie often enough and big enough which has been adopted by Senators McCarthy, Wherry, Jenner and some others, is a dangerous and serious business, particularly if told from the sanctuary of the senate floor where there can be no retribution. And it is having an effect of disuniting the people of this country when we should be more united.

Student's Won't Talk

This reporter was struck by the statement of four young college men who appeared on Arthur Godfrey's television program recently. These boys were from the University of Texas, the University of California, the University of Michigan and Cornell University. They were clean cut, good looking Americans boys and yet in answer to a question from Godfrey they admitted that 'McCarthyism and Wherryism" was even getting into the colleges and universities to the extent that these young men were even afraid to say what they thought, and that their teachers and professors were affected by this policy of intimidation.

Defeated Tydings

There is no question but that this big lie policy defeated the veteran Sen. Millard Tydings of Maryland, in which Senator McCarthy directly participated along with others. And as a result of which, by the way, Jon M. Jonkel, Sen. John Butler's campaign manager, pleaded guilty to violation of six counts of the Maryland election laws and was fined $5,000 in Baltimore criminal court.

Kerr Donates Blood

During the Acheson testimony before the committee, Senator Wiley of Wisconsin, petulantly demanded at one point, "Are we men or are we mice?" And Senator Kerr of Oklahoma remarked," The strange thing is, the senator really wants to know."

And speaking of Senator Kerr, the National Red Cross had moved into the senate office building asking for blood donors from the senatorial great. Only one senator presented himself and gave blood, Kerr of Oklahoma. The rest sent their clerks and typists, etc. Sen. Lyndon Johnston of Texas did come to the room, but excused himself before he gave blood, on pressure of business.

New Probe Looms

And now another full fledged probe is looming - an investigation of the China lobby, the China lobby being composed of friends of the Nationalist China government now exposed on Formosa. Demand for the probe first came from Sen. Wayne Morse, Republican of Oregon. Maybe we will eventually learn who has been financing McCarthyism.

NDA Expires June 30

The national defense act of 1950 which expires June 30, likely will be extended without much change. However, Chairman John Sparkman of the senate small business committee, along with 40 other senators will try to get in an amendment setting up a smaller war plants corporation, much like that set up in 1942 to aid small business.

Congressmen have received many letters from small business in recent weeks.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Looking Abroad

WORDSWORTH wrote four lines, in his poem to the daffodils, that go like this. "For oft when on my couch I lie, in idle or in pensive mood, they flash upon that inward eye that is the bliss of solitude, and then my heart with rapture fills and dances with the daffodils."

That inward eye that is the bliss of solitude is a source of rare comfort to us all, when this year's Fourth of July brings us so much that is anxious, doubtful, depressed. We are living in a strange time of change and discomfort, and on all sides insoluble problems beset us. War, juvenile delinquency, broken homes, high taxes, high prices, high angry words in high places—there's just too much of it all. And it has become too easy and too common to get the report on healthy, wealthy, popular young persons "Patsy's gone off her rocker again, you know, back in the psychopathic ward," or "Johnny's acting so queerly that they've sent him away."

And as these clouds lower and it takes real faith and strength of spirit to disperse them I like to think back across the easier years and take out memories to review and reconsider.

China Visit

China for example. Rural China not Europeanized Shanghai and Peiping. Swarming country China, level rice fields between sluggish canals. Muddy dwellings framing muddy compounds, swarms of ivory-skinned men and women in mud-colored robes, jealously guarding the rice that shifts about in a little basket. To one respectable old amah in China I gave a square of dark green felt.

"... against hopeless odds ..."

It was hot summer weather, but when Amah next appeared she had felt sewed in neat squares over her quilted thick garments on knees, elbows, and between her shoulders. Amah, working hard all her 60 years had no room of her own, no bureau, no small privacy anywhere to store that treasure against the bitter winter. She put it where she could keep it. And she is typical of 300 million.

India. More swarming half naked people, snatching bits of food from the curb, hanging about the hotel doors. Hungry, dirty, impoverished in the midst of fabulous wealth. India, where a hundred sleeping and whining pandicants may be knocked down in the scramble for a few thrown pennies.

Russia. So much work to do, such hard work, such poor pay. Everyone hurrying, a faint scowl the national expression. And the old woman upon whom I called sharing two rooms with a boy and a young man, and exultingly showing me matches that lit when scratched, and a gas stove we would consider as dated about 1902.

Europe's People

Italy, with the children herding geese for all day hours, and macaroni hanging in fringes over the dark doorways of basement hovels on Naples Hill. France, with everything for the tourist, and pinched courage and gaiety for the Paris throngs. France, where the very children look sharp and anxious. Germany, Austria, Poland, Belgium - no need to talk of them! And mighty England standing in long queues for not too appetizing food.

And then the inward eye comes back to another land, where the streets blaze with colored lights at night, and the motor cars nudge one another going to the ball games, and children troop to school in blazing socks showing under their jeans, and popcorn and chocolate bars are on every corner, and poverty flees to prosperity, and prosperity reigns in thousands and thousands of homes, wide-spread between the great clean oceans.

And it comes to the figure of a mud-spattered, weary old soldier in a buff-and-blue greatcoat, it turns to Washington, fighting against hopeless odds, enduring unspeakable hardships, believing in his dream of a free people in a free land, and bequeathing to us the reality of that dream.

And the figure of another Titan, gaunt, lonely, heartsick, but holding us together, Lincoln, giving the vigils of long night hours that the nation might survive, and in the end giving his life for America.

Yes, it is good to get home in one's musings, good to get back under one's own flag, and realize for just what miracles the Fourth of July stands. There is no nation in the whole world that can give its people what we have, of one-half of it. There is no nation whose constitution permits the independence of thought and action.

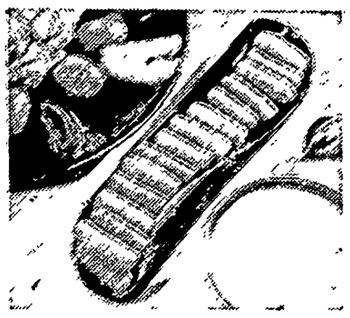
Serve Protein-Rich Foods for Summer Meals To Repair Tissues

"SWEAT SUITS & YAM PARADE" is days gone by was the way one would designate for good nourishment. Calories can now be regulated the meals with foods which not only supply protein for building tissue but also furnish vitamins and minerals to help the body to function properly in warm weather.

Meals salads and cooling beverages are ideal in helping the body to withstand unnecessary energy that may be lost by perspiration in work and play on a hot day. This means they need to contain not only enough body building and energy producing foods but also those that help to regulate the functioning of the body.

A good source of iron is essential as it has a tendency to carry body heat to the skin where it is given off in perspiration. Lean meats, eggs, whole grain or enriched breads and cereals, green leafy vegetables and fruits are used for its preservation.

Cheese Pizza Pie is a fine example of a nice dinner dish. Prepare pie shell, sauce and cheese filling. Bake pie shell. Pour sauce into shell. Add cheese filling. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 30 minutes. Serve hot.



Cheese Pizza Pie and a leafy vegetable salad like this make healthful meals that contain milk, garden vegetables, sweet tomatoes and cauliflower. Lemon and cauliflower dressing adds a delightful accompaniment to the salad.

Cheese Pizza Pie
(Serves 6)

2 cups mashed potatoes
2 tablespoons butter
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup shredded (½ pound) American cheese, processed type
1 egg
½ cup fine cracker crumbs
Stock or tomato juice
Salt, pepper

1 cup tomato sauce
½ cup mushrooms
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1½ tablespoons horseradish
Salt, cayenne, paprika

* * *

1 cauliflower
Plain vinaigrette
Cucumber wedges
Cooked, whole green beans

Combine hot mashed potatoes, butter, cheese, beaten egg, ¼ cup cracker crumbs and seasonings to taste, mix well. Toss on bread board, sprinkled with remaining crumbs. Roll to ¼ inch thick. Cut into 2 inch lengths and fry in deep fat heated to 360°F. (hot) until brown.

Combine the tomato cream, mayonnaise, lemon juice, mustard, horseradish, salt, cayenne and paprika to taste. Chill well.

Separate cauliflower into flowerets and chill thoroughly after washing. Place in center of platter and surround with vegetables, cucumbers and whole green beans. Serve with tomato cream dressing and hot cheese pegs as an accompaniment.

HOT POTATO SALAD is a popular meal, especially when served with a fudgy meat. Frankfurters. Both potatoes and frankfurters are rich in proteins.

Pan-Fried Franks
(Serves 4-6)

Heat 2 tablespoons fat in a heavy skillet and put in 6-10 frankfurters whole. Brown moderately fast on all sides, cooking until heated through. Serve immediately.

Well-seasoned hot potato salad is a welcome treat when served with pan-fried frankfurters. Neither the salad nor the frankfurters takes much cooking, and will help keep your kitchen cool when the temperature's soaring.

Hot Potato Salad
(Serves 6)

2 buttery potatoes
6 slices bacon
½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped or finely sliced onion
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup water
½ cup vinegar
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon sugar

Scrub potatoes but do not peel. Cook until just tender in boiling, salted water. Meanwhile, pan broil bacon until crisp; remove from fat, drain and crumble. Pour off all but 3 tablespoons fat. Add green pepper and onion to warm fat; cook until tender but not brown. Stir in flour, then add water, vinegar, sugar and bacon. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add potatoes, cut in cubes, and heat through, stirring gently to coat with dressing. Serve hot.

A GOOD VEGETABLE to serve with an otherwise cold dinner of sliced meat and cheese is this one made with cabbage and green pepper.

Pennsylvania Dutch Pepper Cabbage
(Serves 6)

1 small head cabbage (2 pounds)
1 teaspoon salt
1 medium onion, grated
⅓ cup sugar
⅔ cup cream
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 green or red pepper, chopped

Chop cabbage fine. Add salt, onion and sugar. Let stand one hour. Blend cream and vinegar; pour over cabbage. Add pepper and mix thoroughly.

A TANGY PIE which includes protein-rich eggs is an excellent dessert choice for hot weather meals. This one goes well with a hearty meal because it's light and airy with a refreshing flavor of lemon.

Lemon Velvet Chiffon Pie
¾ cup sugar
4 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup boiling water
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon plain gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup light cream

Mix together sugar, cornstarch and salt in saucepan. Add boiling water, and while stirring, cook until thick and smooth. Remove from heat and mix in beaten egg yolks and butter. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, for 5 minutes. Remove from heat, add lemon juice and peel. Stir in gelatin that has been dissolved in cold water. Blend in cream. Let set until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into baked 9-inch pie shell and let stand in a cool place until thick. If desired, served with a topping of whipped cream.

Stuffed peppers with ham or chicken are something of a novelty. Fill the parboiled green peppers with a mixture of ham or chicken mixed with cooked rice and seasonings including basil. Sprinkle with cheese and bake. Serve with heated tomato soup, as a sauce.

Tender green beans, fresh out of the garden, do proudly as your vegetable for company dinners. Cook them with a bit of sugar, then drain and season with a dusting of salt, pepper and melted butter in some hot cream.

THE READER'S DATE BOOK
Main Street Reaps Big Profits From Millions of U.S. Tourists

If Main Street happens to be on a national highway it will mean big business for the home town during the remainder of July and August. Millions of Americans will take to the highways to see the country. And they will spend millions in the home towns for eating, drinks on hot soft drinks, souvenirs and gadgets.

The home town that can't a national park or historic shrine nearby or is situated in a beautiful, scenic area will reap the biggest dividend during the weeks that Americans are on wheels. But the opportunity to further your town's economy is often neglected by merchants, cafe owners and the publishers of local newspapers because they fail to get the facts about their assets. It's not too late for many home towns to do better during August.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

The home owner who plans to take off a few days during the month of August to play around in his own backyard does a big share of the country's most useful ways to spend holidays and vacations.

Overall postwar highway construction has not been able to keep pace with the ever-increasing volume of motor traffic. In addition one of the severest snowfalls in the history of the country covered many northern states last winter and the added deterioration damages to road surfaces. Hence, those traveling on highways in your region will find traffic delays, very likely increased during the next two or three months.

Motoring in the United States has come a long way since 1900, when a national magazine declared "anybody can drive sixty miles in fifty days." However the magazine warned that anyone undertaking to drive from the Atlantic to the Pacific in sixty days can "expect the journey to prove a failure unless a number of motoring studies are made."

Today the motorist is not nearly so adventurous as in that days but a 3,000 mile journey and staying seven or eight days is a record to shoot at.

But due to the weather during the past winter and deterioration during the war years, this schedule should be revised slightly upward this year. Most states have labored to improve their road networks, but the motorist must expect to find many inadequate stretches of highways.

For the home owner who has not yet decided where he will spend his vacation this year, here are a few figures on costs and events in the west, east and west.

Kansas, naturally known as the wheat playground of the nation, is making a big bid for summer vacationers this year. Many cities and towns, in cooperation with local and state park officials, are offering special vacation package deals for as little as $2.50 a day per person.

In many home apartments are available for as little as $40 a week. Hotels are offering rooms at $5 and $6 a day that rent in winter for $22. Efficiency apartments, renting in the winter season for $110 a week, drop to $25 for the summer months. The average cost for motels will be about $2 a person during the summer months.

Motorists in the west will find prices very favorable when compared with the nation as a whole. One of the big attractions in the west as vacationers start rolling down national highways are rodeos. Here are a few dates and places of rodeos in the next few weeks:

63 Million to Take Motor Vacations

According to the American Automobile Association some 63,000,000 persons will take recreation motor trips before the year ends, despite highway shortcomings caused by heavy snows and freezing during the past winter.

This prediction is made after government sources indicate there will be no shortage of spare parts and gasoline, and that tires will be available in nearly every part of the country.

The A.A.A. reports that prices in motor courts across the country have not increased in proportion to other items and that motorists will find comfortable, clean housing within the average family's vacation budget.

National parks, visited by 32,000,000 people last year, are expecting more than 35,000,000 tourists this season. Of the total, 94 per cent will arrive in private automobiles, the A.A.A. reported.

Shockproof Homes

Lesson for July 13, 1951

EVERYBODY who begins a home wants it to last. Nobody really wants a temporary makeshift home. There are some people who, through lazy unconcern, want a home that will fall down around them, but most people want a home that will withstand the storms of life. What is the secret of homes together and makes them so? Life brings many earthquake shocks. How do you build a shockproof house?

Dr. Foreman

Homes Without Marriage

LET it be said at once that most homes begin with marriage, and the normal, home consists of father, mother and children. There are certain wrongly married couples. The story of Mary Martha and Lazarus in the New Testament is the story of such a home.

Here were three grown persons, two sisters and a brother, and they had a good home in most ways been a good one as Jesus would not have enjoyed going there as often as he did.

There have been other homes which have blessed all under the roof, such as a college group in an orphans' home or a group of old people living together in one household, even a boarding house may, through the consecrated genius of some one person, become a kind of home, ordered and very happily maintained.

But when all is said and done, all these kinds of marriageless homes, good as they often are, take as their model the "normal" home of parents and children. And this normal home begins with marriage. If the marriage is permanent, the home will be; if the marriage drifts and wrecks, so will the home.

"Till Death Do Us Part"

As the present writer has said in "Facing This Day Forward" (a small book on the meaning of the Christian marriage service), "Only the Christian religion approves the highest form of marriage in the world. For Christian marriage is permanent. The state does not demand it, and social pressure in most places will not demand it, other religions have lower ways.

But the Christian ideal of marriage is nothing less than the union of one man and one woman, for their lifetime.

No Endurance Test

"CHRISTIAN marriage is not a mere endurance test. If that is all, it may be genuine, but not successful. Now a genuine cake is not a pie and not a roast, but not all genuine cakes are successful.

Marriage and a home at their best can be a kind of heaven; but who would want a heaven that might evict its tenants any morning?

On a windy day in a certain street of houses hastily built for G.I.'s, any one might see the flimsy shingles flapping in the wind like so many sheets of paper. The young couples who were flim-flammed into buying these houses have already regretted it. No one want to live in a house that the wind will blow to pieces. And no one wants a home that will be shaken apart by the winds of adversity or the earthquake shocks of disappointment.

* * *

The Heart of the Home

THE only real basis of a lasting home is love. Everybody knows this much; not every one knows what love is. Love is not mere sentiment, and much more than emotion.

What Paul said long ago has been put by J. B. Phillips into modern words:

*"This love of which I speak is slow to lose patience— it looks for a way of being constructive. It is not possessive; it is neither anxious to impress nor does it cherish inflated ideas of its own importance. Love has good manners and does not pursue selfish advantage. It is not touchy. It does not compile statistics of evil or gloat over the wickedness of other people . . . Love knows no limit to its endurance, no end to its trust, no fading of its hope; it can outlast anything. It is, in fact, the one thing that still stands when all else has fallen."

A home where love of that sort is at its heart, will stand every shock of time.

MINISTER'S WIFE TELLS HOW HADACOL WAS SO HELPFUL

HADACOL Helps Folks With Weak, Run-Down Conditions, Poor Appetite, When Caused by Deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron

Mrs. Longaker

A weak, run-down condition can make life mighty drab for folks who feel that way. Imagine not having a good appetite. Loss of weight and energy often accompany this condition. When Mrs. Ardena Longaker, a minister's wife, who lives at Rt. 5, Meadowbrook Rd., North Kansas City, Mo., began feeling that way she began taking HADACOL for she had heard how it was helping people with weak, run-down conditions and poor appetite, when due to a deficiency of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron. Now, Mrs. Longaker says she feels good and is recommending HADACOL to her friends.

Here is what she says:

"I am a minister's wife and am 29 years old. I was run-down, lost weight, was listless, and had no appetite at all. I'm on my fifth bottle now and am amazed at the results. I want to eat all the time now. Most of all, I'm glad to say, I've gained several pounds. HADACOL is so economical, I believe almost anyone can afford it, and I do recommend it to my friends."

HADACOL makes it possible to actually relieve the REAL CAUSE of weak, run-down conditions, stomach distress, nervousness, poor appetite and nagging aches and pains when due to the lack of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron in the system.

AND LISTEN TO THIS! Continued use of this great HADACOL not only gives continuous complete relief but helps keep such painful distress from returning when caused by such deficiencies. Now that's the kind of product you have been waiting for. That's the kind you should buy and start taking at once.

And HADACOL'S wonderful Vitamins and Minerals come in special pleasant liquid form so they are quickly absorbed and assimilated in the blood, ready to go to work at once.

HADACOL IS SO EFFECTIVE

Because HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these precious Vitamins and Minerals to every organ and to every part of your body.

You may have tried other Vitamin preparations or other Vitamin and Mineral preparations, so we make you this offer. Try a bottle of HADACOL today. You be the judge. If you do not believe that HADACOL is the best Vitamin and Mineral preparation you have ever taken, we will gladly send you back your money. That's our positive money-back guarantee.

So be fair to yourself. Don't go through life suffering from these conditions when caused by lack of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, when relief may be as close at hand as your nearest druggist.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES

There's only one HADACOL. Don't let anyone tell you something else is "just as good." Insist on genuine HADACOL. You risk nothing because HADACOL is sold on a strict money-back guarantee.

Sold at all druggists. Trial size, $1.25, but buy the large family size, only $3.50.

If your dealer does not sell HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, La.

GROUP OF LADIES ENJOYED ANNUAL PICNIC JULY 4TH

A group of Klemme ladies, who meet every year for an annual picnic, held their picnic this year at the home of Mrs. Clara Barz, as the weather was too cold at the park. The ladies had a big feed of fried chicken and everything that goes with it.

These ladies have a lot of get-to-gethers, and they ought to have a name, so the Editor will simply refer to them as the Klemme Ladies Past Thirty!

Besides enjoying a big noon day meal, the ladies also enjoyed playing games in the afternoon.

LOAN ASSOCIATION WILL PAY FIVE PERCENT DIVIDEND

A regular 5 per cent dividend is now being paid to about 300 farmers and stockmen in Hancock and Winnebago counties by the United National Farm Loan Association of Forest City.

Checks totaling more than $4,150.00 are now being mailed to farmers and stockmen who have Federal Land Bank loans through the cooperative, according to Wm. F. Johannaber, secretary-treasurer of the association.

Payment of the dividends was made possible because of a dividend recently received by the association from the Federal Land Bank of Omaha, Mr. Johannaber said. He explained that the land bank is owned entirely by cooperative National Farm Loan Associations in a four-state area, and the associations in turn are owned by farmers and stockmen who obtain land bank loans.

Directors of the association at Forest City are C. M. Palmer of Forest City, president; J. E. Read of Forest City, vice president; M J. Bergland of Lake Mills, R. B. Puffer and Lyal W. Fox of Britt.

Klemme Teacher Qualified For Driver-Trainer Instructor

Ames, Iowa, July 11—Eugene E. Fischer, of the Klemme High School, was one of 33 participants in the driver education workshop at Iowa State College to receive his certificate upon completing two weeks of training and instruction.

He is now a qualified driver-trainer and will conduct such work in his area. The workshop was designed to instruct in the proper and safe methods of training driver in Iowa.

Commissioner of Public Safety Pearl McMurry spoke at the Friday noon luncheon when certificates were awarded. Commissioner McMurry also received a certificate from the Motor Club of Iowa, presented in behalf of the American Automobile Association, for the pedestrian protection program in Iowa. The city of Ames was also awarded a certificate for pedestrian protection programs in cities of its size in the state of Iowa.

METHODIST CHURCH PICTURE PLATES

The Women's Society of the Klemme Methodist Church has secured a supply of plates, on which there is a picture of the Klemme Church building, for sale to members and friends of the congregation. The likeness of the church, taken from a photograph of the building, and done in brown on ten inch dinner plates should have a sentimental appeal to all who have been interested in the Klemme Methodist Church. Baked into the finish on the back of the plate is a brief historical sketch of the church organization.

These plates are available in three styles, Embossed English, Fluted Gold Border, and Ballerina Gold Border, and sell for $2.00 each. A spring hanger for displaying the plate as a wall decoration is also available. Profits from the sale of these plates, which must be seen to be adequately appreciated, will go into a fund created by the Woman's Society to provide new carpeting for the Sanctuary.

DAILY CULLING WILL HELP TO KEEP FLOCK HEALTHY

Some of the risk is taken out of the poultry business if poultrymen practice daily culling.

Proper culling will help keep the flock healthy. Poor producers generally have low resistance to disease, says F. W. Wollney, extension poultryman at Iowa State College. Flock owners who remove low producers will not only reduce disease hazards but will also cut feed costs.

Daily culling, sometimes called "spot" culling, is the best way to eliminate low producers. With this method, the flock manager handles only the birds that appear to be non-producers.

Systematic culling, where every bird in the flock is handled, is important at certain times of the year. But systematic culling shouldn't be done every month, Wollney says. Excessive handling of birds can cause a serious setback in egg production.

Cull the flock thoroughly when it is taken to the range and again when it is moved into the laying house. At other times spot culling will do the job. It's foolish to handle a flock of 500 birds if only 5 or 10 birds will be culled, Woolney says.

The poor producer can be spotted by her plumage and actions. Feathers are generally smooth and unbroken. She has a lot of pigment throughout her body; she's the last one off the roosts in the morning and the first on at night.

Being flighty and tense, the nonproducer squawks when she is caught. Her comb and wattles are generally small, shriveled and pale in color.

USE INSECTICIDES IN GARDEN REGULARLY

To keep down garden damage from common insects such as the potato bug, the potato leaf hopper, the cabbage worm and the Mexican bean beetle, County Extension Director Paul Henderson says to make regular application of insecticide.

While DDT is effective for about 2 weeks under most conditions, applications may need to be made more often when garden plants are growing rapidly. New growth that develops aften DDT has been applied to the rest of the plant needs protection too, Henderson explains.

Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College extension entomologist advises watching plants that are growing fast and applying DDT as often as is needed to give protection to both old and new growth. When plants are not growing rapidly, every two weeks is often enough to apply insecticides containing DDT.

Insects such as the potato leaf hopper, Mexican bean beetle, flea beetles and other common insects that carry bacterial wilt can infect a garden plant with one bite. The six-spotted leaf hopper also carries the virus disease "carrot yellow" that often ruins 25 to 34 percent of the carrot crop in a single garden.

ESTABLISH WILD CANADIAN GOOSE COLONY

Plans to establish a nesting colony of wild geese on Rice Lake in Winnebago County have been completed, and twenty-five goslings and four adult geese have been secured to form the nucleus of what is expected to be the first wild migratory Canada goose nesting in the state in fifty years.

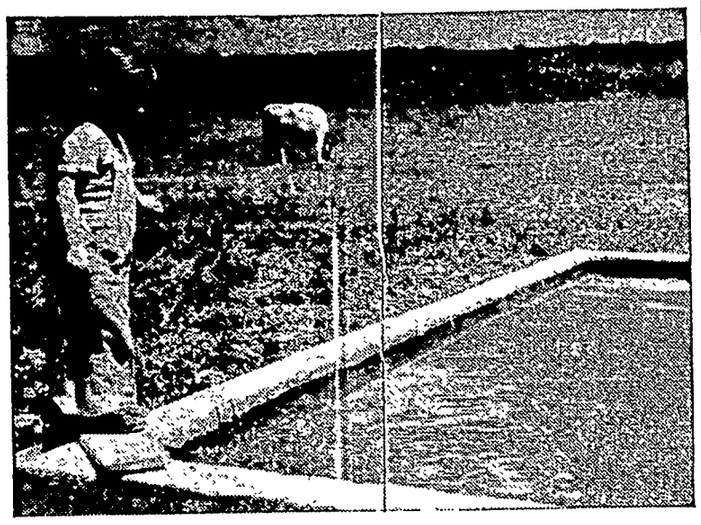
Canada geese have a definite homing instinct and return to the general vicinity of their birthplace. With a similar program having been carried out successfully in Michigan, the state conservation officials are optimistic about the Iowa experiment.

The plan is to pinion the present flock of geese and not allow them to migrate. As the birds nest on the Rice Lake area, part of the young will be allowed to migrate and part will be held to add to the breeding stock. According to Les Faber, Superintendent of Federal Aid, "The herd to be held permanently on Rice Lake will be built up to fifty pairs at which time all young will be allowed to migrate." In Michigan's experiment, a large part of the migrating young returned and have now established a larger migratory population of geese in an area where no nesters had been known for many years.

The original stock of geese was secured from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Wanted: Watchful Parents, Careful Children—

SAVE YOUR CHILD'S LIFE



Is your youngster safe when he goes out to play? You've heard of heart-breaking accidents that happened to the child down the block or next door. You've thought, with a catch in your breath, that it might have been your own child. You check your house and yard for safety; you try to teach him safe living from the very beginning.

A little 3-year-old girl was killed when she fell from her father's car as he backed out of his driveway. A 4-year-old boy suffered first and second-degree burns on his face and arms when he tipped over a pan of hot starch. Two boys, 3 and 5, climbed into an old unused ice box and shut the door, were rescued when their frightened, muffled shouts were heard.

A 5-year-old youngster wandered from a family picnic, fell into a creek and drowned. Tetanus infection developed from a cut from a dry weed, and a 10-year-old boy lost his life. A and touched a high-voltage he climbed a 50-foot power pole and touched a high-voltage wire.

These are only a few of the tragic accidents that have befallen Iowa children during the past 4 weeks. According to Norval Wardle, safety specialist at Iowa Ssate college, all could have been prevented by a watchful parent or a safety-minded child.

Accidents, he tells us, are the leading cause of death among children from 1 to 15. Forty percent of these fatal mishaps happen in the home, 34 percent in or because of motar vehicles.

Teach Your Child Safety

It is up to you to teach your children safe practices and safe thinking, until it is a natural part of everything they do, says Wardle. You can start when your child is very small, and be sure to set a good example yourself—whether it is crossing the street with the green light and pointing it out to him as you do so, or drying your hands and his carefully before you pull the light chain in the bathroom.

But don't expect a young child to see danger and remember. Until he ie 5 or 6 he needs your constant supervision. And he needs a safe house and a safe yard to play in, too. Here are a few questions that Wardle suggested you ask yourself.

Do you have a safety gate across the top of staircases, a sturdy handrail and a good light? Are all throw rugs tacked down, or do they have rubberized backing so the won't slip? Are sharp knives and all poisonous substances inaccessible to small hands? Do you know basic first aid practices, how to give artificial respiration? Do you teach your children to swim at a very early age? Do you know that a silo can be a dangerous place to play, especially when the silage in it is fermenting? Is the yard kept clear of garden tools and farm implements? Are wells and cisterns covered?

Prevent Car Mishaps

A small child shouldn't be allowed to ride by a car door, says Wardle, unless he is held by a grown-up—or unless there is a safety catch on the door so it can be opened only from the outside. If you're riding alone with a little tot, keep him close beside you on the front seat, or standing on the seat behind your right shoulder. This way, you can prevent him from being thrown against the windshield in case of an accident or sudden stop.

Teach your child safety from the time he's in diapers. Give a shining example of your own safe living and make your home and yard free from potential danger. You may be saying his life.

NICOTINE SULFATE, SOAP SPRAY WILL KILL APHIDS

Aphids are attacking maple trees in the state. Reports have come from Union, Ida and Mitchell counties of a bug attacking and damaging maple leaves, and the same trouble may be occurring in other parts of the state.

The bug is an aphid covered with white cottony material and is found on leaves, petioles and small twigs. The aphids suck out juice, and damage appears as dead areas in the leaves. Wind damage from the storm of May 27 may also be apparent on the leaves.

If the aphids are numerous, it might pay to spray the trees with 1 pint of nicotine sulfate and 2 pounds laundry soap in 50 gallons of water, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. The insects must be wet with the spray. Sprays containing oil should not be used on maple trees because they will damage the trees.

High-pressure spray equipment is needed to reach the tops of tall maples. Gunderson suggests contacting your county extension director, who may be able to give names of custom operators with such equipment.

NEW GULLIES SHOW NEED TO SAVE SOIL

Contouring And Strip Cropping Cut Losses

New gullies in Iowa fields since the recent hard rains show the need for more and better soil saving, observes M A Anderson, Iowa State College extension agronomist

He explains that the hard, driving rains each year usually come in May and June when fields in row crops have very little cover This means the soils in fields in row crops planted up-and-down the hills are exposed at a time when erosion is most likely

Takes Combination

Research studies show that soil losses can be cut in half on Iowa crop land by contour planting Contour listing will cut soil losses by 75 percent, while terracing will reduce losses by 95 percent

Strip cropping is another effective way to hold soil on slopes, especially during the season when rains are heaviest While no one farming practice will completely stop soil erosion during and following hard rains, a combination of several of these practices will reduce losses to a very small amount, Anderson says. He thinks farmers will be wise to use as many soil saving practices as are needed to hold the soil in place He points to sod crops in the rotation as one of the best ways to stop erosion A good crop rotation also will help maintain fertility

Pays In Yields

Research has shown that contouring will increase corn yields by 7½ bushels per acre, oats by 5 bushels and soybean yields by 2½ bushels per acre Replanting problems usually are greater in the up-and-down-hill planted fields since small erosion gullies often follow the planter tracks and wash out the seed or the young plants

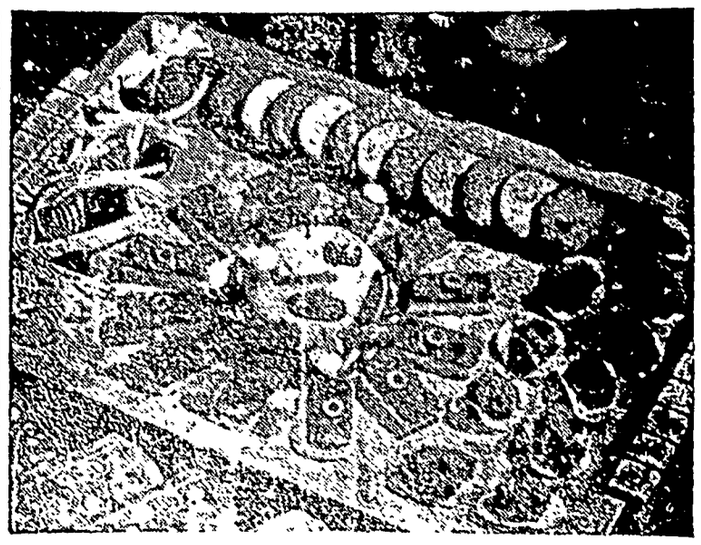
Summer Sets the Stage for--

INFORMAL ENTERTAINING



What's nicer than having your friends in for a chatty tea time, or more enjoyable than getting acquainted with new nighbors over a cold drink and a sandwich?

Summer was meant for catching up a free hour or two in your busy life and asking your friends in The nice thing about entertaining in your home, summer or winter, is that you can make it just as informal and simple as you like. Jewel Graham, nutritionist at Iowa State College, suggests serving sandwiches or cookies and a cooling iced fruit drink.

You'll probably want to have everything ready ahead of time, so there won't be any fuss and bother at the last minute—especially if it's a hot day, says Miss Graham. Choose a comfortable setting — such as a screened-in porch, or a shady corner of a porch or terrace if there aren't mosquitoes and other bothersome insects stirring.

It may be most convenient to serve from a large tray placed on a small sturdy table. If you use a tea table, a bowl of fresh cut flowers will add a special touch. And remember when you're arranging your table that plates, glasses, silver, tablecloth and food should all contribute to the decorative effect.

Use A Favorite Recipe

You may want to stir up your favorite brownie or cookie recipe for your guests. For sandwiches, use nut bread, fruit bread or thin sliced bread Use both dark and enriched white bread in one sandwich for color contrast Good sandwich fillings of various kinds of cheese foods and spreads, ground meats, cashew butter, peanut butter, fish and chicken salads, cream cheese and jelly, and honey spreads. Another idea suggested by Miss Graham is to serve big pototo chips spread with a special meat or sandwich filling.

If the teen-agers in your family like to have their friends over, help them out by setting the stage for a tea or party they can whip together themselves. Miss Graham suggests that you provide a special snack shelf for the youngsters. Stock it with sandwich spreads, flavorings for drinks and a full cookie jar This way they can make their own refreshments on short notice and have fun doing it. If your daughter likes to bake, her contribution to these parties might be to keep the cookie jar well filled.

Help Themselves

Youngsters like to sit around a table with everything within reach and help themselves. If you have a lazy susan, they could use it for "dunking" mixtures, sandwich fillings, olives, potato chips and a variety of crackers and wafers.

Here's an idea for a sandwich spread that usually goes over big with grownups as well as teen-agers. Use soft American or cheddar cheese as a base, add cream cheese and a bit of roquefort or blue cheese and whip it up together with the mixer Form it into a ball the size of a grapefruit or orange and roll it in chopped nuts. Then put it in the refrigerator to blend the flavors and firm for about 24 hours. You could serve this in the middle of a big tray with crackers and rye or pumpernickel bread arranged around it. The youngsters help themselves, armed with bread and butter knives.

Take time out this summer for occasional informal get-together-ers now and then. They'll pay you dividends in fun, relaxation and both new and renewed friendships.

RACING PIGEONS MISS DISASTER IN SPIRIT LAKE

Fourteen banded racing pigeons were rescued from a watery grave in Spirit Lake last week by Conservation Fisheries Biologists The birds landed on the surface of the lake in heavy fog at Templer Park were taken to the state fish hatchery, fed, dried out watered and released on the hatchery grounds The birds took to the air, circled the south shore of Spirit Lake, and headed northeast

The birds, part of those entered in an unknown race, have probably reached the safety of their home lofts. The band numbers have been recorded and the Conservation Commission will attempt to secure information on the banded birds from the American Racing Pigeon Union

Commission biologists are anxious that all the banded birds found in the wild be reported to the Conservation Commission. It is not necessary to return the leg band, however, a post card stating all information found on the band, number, date and location of the find, will be greatly appreciated.

1951 HOG CROP SECOND LARGEST

Hancock County hogs moving to market this fall will help make up a 7 percent increase over 1950 marketings, according to June 1 estimates of the nation's 1951 pig crop, reports county extension director, Paul Henderson.

Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates show the 1951 spring pig crop to be the second largest on record, although it's 14 percent below the 1943 peak.

Increased farrowings accounted for only 4 percent of the increase in the spring crop, but a boost in the number of pigs saved added another 3 percent.

In addition, W. A. Pearce, Iowa State College farm economist reports that breeding intentions for this fall show a 4 percent increase in the number of sows bred. If these intentions are carried out and an average number of pigs are saved, the increase in fall pigs will be 3 percent over last year. This makes the combined pig crop about 5 percent larger than 1950 crop, the economist adds.

He thinks the larger 1951 pig crop will about cancel out the stronger consumer demand, and a more normal seasonal decline in hog prices may occur this fall and winter. However, international events and the size of this year's corn crop will be important factors in late 1951 hog market. In any event, pushing hogs for early sale is expected to pay.

FISHERIES BIOLOGIST FINDS PLENTY OF CATFISH

Fisheries investigations on the Upper Des Moines River have proved to fisheries biologists that there are plenty of channel catfish in the Upper Des Moines River and many of large size.

In spite of high water, biologist Harry Harrison has trapped and tagged hundreds of the channel catfish in the vicinity of Estherville, Emmetsburg, Rutland, Bradgate and Humboldt on the Upper Des Moines River. The fish were weighed, measured and tagged for indentification on subsequent recapture.

In some nets as many as 500 channel catfish from 8 to 15 inches in length have been caught in two days' fishing. In one net three channel catfish between 15 and 20 pounds were caught. In other nets as many as 20 catfish averaging 5 pounds each were taken.

Harrison reports the big catfish feeding on large minnows and other food fishes.

Anglers in the Upper Des Moines River are asked to watch for tagged channel catfish and report any such fish taken, to the State Conservation Commission, East 7th and Court Avenue, Des Moines 9, Iowa.

SUDAN GRASS WILL GRAZE 2 TO 3 COWS PER ACRE

Sudan grass for summer pasture will carry two or three cows an acre at time bluegrass is dormant.

It offers a quick, nutritious summer pasture at a time when native grasses are hard and unpalatable, says Ralph Krenzin, Iowa State College extension agronomist. Under the normal growing conditions, sundan grass is ready for pasturing 6 to 8 weeks after planting.

This temporary pasture is easy to grow, it thrives in hot weather and grows rapidly on fertile soil.

Krenzin recommends rotation grazing of sudan grass. Planting dates can be staggered by a week or 10 days. Then when the early-planted field is grazed down, the second planting will be ready

Rotation grazing is also necessary so that small plants will not be eaten by cattle or sheep. This short growth is occasionally high in prussic acid, but there is little danger of prussic acid poisoning when plants are 18 inches or more in height.

Neighbors Held Surprise Party On The Henry Busses

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Busse were pleasantly surprised Friday evening by neighbors who came to help them celebrate their Silver Wedding anniversary.

All enjoyed a social evening after which a nice lunch was enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Busse were presented with a gift

A decorated wedding cake had been baked by Mrs. Harmen Trampel for the event. Out of town guests were Miss Mildred Busse of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Busse of St. Cloud, Minnesota

HERE'S A QUIET WAY TO REMOVE STUMPS

There's a way to remove ugly tree stumps that's as quiet as dynamite is violent. It's not as fast as dynamite, but it can be used in back yards and other enclosed areas where dynamiting is too dangerous.

Here's how E. P. Sylwester, Iowa State College extension plant pathologist, suggests doing the job.

Drill several holes into the stump as deeply as possible. These holes should be at least ½ inch in diameter, one hole for every 4 inches of tree diameter. Fill the holes loosely with sodium chlorate or potassium nitrate (saltpeter). Repeat this filling two or three times as rainwater disolves the chemical. This chemical will permeate the wood and make the stump more inflammable.

In late July or August when the stump is dry, soak some kindling wood or cobs in oil and build a fire around the stump. It will slowly smolder into the ground, Sylwester says.

DON'T LET WEEDS GET HEAD START IN GARDEN

Iowa gardeners who let summer weeds take over the garden are throwing away a lot of spring work as well as chances for good yields from vegetable crops, says M. W. Reger, Iowa State College horticulturist.

He says vacations and busy summer days often give weeds a running start, and the result is undersized tomatoes and potatoes at harvest time and disappointing yields from other garden crops.

Reger recommends keeping down summer weeds by raking between the rows as often as weed seedlings appear. Weeds can be removed from the rows by hand along with extra vegetable plants that are too crowded to give top yields.

For families who will be vacationing away from home with no one to look after the garden this summer, Regres suggests using a mulch of light material such as straw or grass. A mulch will hold down weeds and will prevent evaporation of moisture from the soil surface during the hot, dry days of July and August.

SMALL GRAIN SEED CROP BEING CHECKED IN FIELD

Eighteen fieldmen will soon be walking Iowa's small grain fields in search of weeds and of mixtures with other crops and varieties. Joe L. Robinson, secretary of the Iowa Crop Improvement Association, says that each of these men has been schooled in the art of inspecting for production of quality seed.

About 900 small grain fields will be checked by these 18 fieldmen in July. Most of the 900 fields are Shelby oat fields. Moore is the favorite barley crop.

Most of the fieldmen who will be calling on certified seed producers this summer are experienced in the work. Some have been inspecting for certification for as long as 10 years.

Fieldmen make calls on growers at unexpected times to see that fields are in top condition to produce high-quality seed. Each field is checked for insolation distances; that is, each edge of the field is examined to see that no other grains of the same variety are close enough to be mixed in with the seed to be certified.

Primary noxious weeds such as Canada thistle, quackgrass or leafy spurge are noted by the fieldmen and must be destroyed. Other weeds are also listed.

Fields are also examined to see that other crops and varieties of the same crop are not mixed in with seed to be certified. If mixtures are found, the grower must pull foreign plants before the field can be certified.

Robinson says this is the fist step in production of seed of known, high quality. Fieldmen list all conditions found in fields, and the certification agency knows whether it can pass a field as high-quality certified seed or not. All seed that passes field inspections and late seed inspections carries an official blue tag.

A town must have a population of 12,000 before it can be a city.

CITY DUMPS CAN BE BANISHED

From open garbage dumps and other trash disposal areas all over Iowa squadrons of flies rise each day during the summer to spread out over the countryside.

They may end up as uninvited guests at your dinner table, said Paul Henderson, Hancock County Extension Director today. When they come, they'll wade in the gravy, wipe their feet on the bread, and leave a trail of filth over the meat and potatoes, he pointed out.

To get rid of neighbors with such annoying habits Henderson advocates getting rid of the dumps. When you destroy fly-breeding places, the fly population drops in a hurry.

Fortunately, there is a fairly simple way of wiping out all public dumps, together with the flies, rats, vermin and odors that go with them. The Iowa State Department of health says the sanitary land fill method of garbage and trash disposal can be practiced by any community without a great deal of expense.

The only equipment necessary is a bulldozer, road maintainer or other heavy equipment such as most cities and towns possess. An open stretch of wasteland must also be available. To dispose of refuse a shallow ditch is dug with the equipment available. Each day's accumulation is placed in the ditch, and compacted by running over it with a bulldozer or heavy equipment. Then the ditch is covered, and the earth pressed down over it.

This method was used by the United States army during World War II, and is now being considered or tried by a number of Iowa cities. Health officials says an acre of ground will take care of the garbage from 10,000 persons.

Oldest Dies

Iowa lost its oldest resident recently, in the death of William Mort, 106, at the home of his daughter in Cantril. His birthday had been observed on June first, just prior to his final illness.

Found Ring

While H. A. Anderson of Hawarden was helping load shelled corn he lost his daimond ring in a truck load of corn. When he unloaded his truck the corn was run through a wire screen and the ring was recovered when about half the corn had been unloaded.

Caught

When Eugene Slocum decided to dig his way out of the Guthrie County jail, the noise he made caused some children to become suspicious and they called the sheriff. When Slocum finished making a hole in the brick wall, he slid out of the jail into the handcuffs of Sheriff J. C. McCool.

Escaped

Three year old Susuan Murphy of Waverly fell from the car in which she was riding recently, as the family drove home from Shell Rock. She was unconscious for a time but is recoving.

Still The Same

A wedding gift list for a ceremony held in Belmond fifty years ago shows that wedding gifts are still much the same; towels, dishes, etc. But one item seldom shows up among the wedding gifts any more; a "cuff and collar box."

Hurt

At Sutherland, 81 year old Mary McGraw is recoving from an injury received when she caught her hand in a washing machine wringer. And at Swea City, little 2½ year old Theresa Mullis, at the other end of the age scale, received a bruised hand which became caught in a pump jack.

Moth

A nocturnal visitor kept bumping into the screened porch of the Gilman Hegon home at Eldon one night recently. Investigation revealed that the would-be intruder was a lovely pale green Luna moth, measuring five inches across its wings.

To Guatamela

Richard Delong of Lamoni, Ames undergraduate, will spend the summer in Guatamela. He will work in the Iowa State college tropical research center. He's the first undergraduate to make the trip. The research center was set up in 1946.

NEW GULLIES SHOW NEED TO SAVE SOIL

Contouring And Strip Cropping Cut Losses

New gullies in Iowa fields since the recent hard rains show the need for more and better soil saving, observes M. A. Anderson, Iowa State College extension agronomist.

He explains that the hard, driving rains each year usually come in May and June when fields in row crops have very little cover. This means the soils in fields in row crops planted up-and-down the hills are exposed at a time when erosion is most likely.

Takes Combination

Research studies show that soil losses can be cut in half on Iowa crop land by contour planting. Contour listing will cut soil losses by 75 percent, while terracing will reduce losses by 95 percent.

Strip cropping is another effective way to hold soil on slopes, especially during the season when rains are heaviest. While no one farming practice will completely stop soil erosion during and following hard rains, a combination of several of these practices will reduce losses to a very small amount, Anderson says. He thinks farmers will be wise to use as many soil-saving practices as are needed to hold the soil in place He points to sod crops in the rotation as one of the best ways to stop erosion A good crop rotation also will help maintain fertility

Pays In Yields

Research has shown that contouring will increase corn yields by 7½ bushels per acre, oats by 5 bushels and soybean yields by 2½ bushels per acre Replanting problems usually are greater in the up-and-down-hill planted fields since small erosion gullies often follow the planter tracks and wash out the seed or the young plants

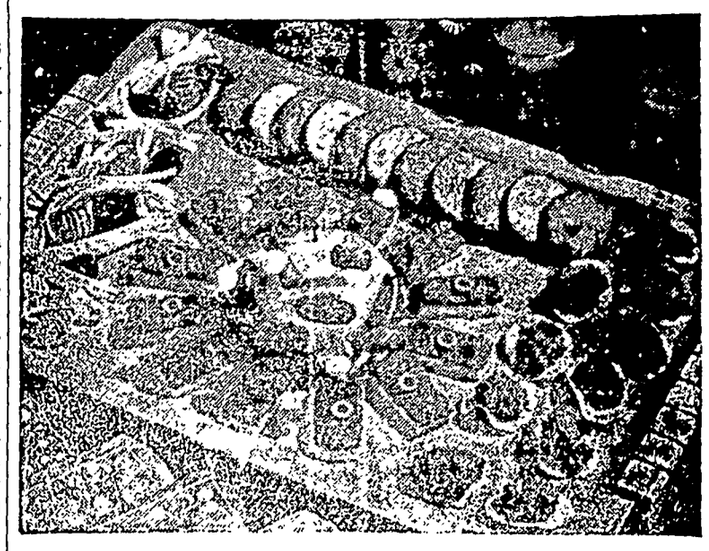
Summer Sets the Stage for-- INFORMAL ENTERTAINING



What's nicer than having your friends in for a chatty tea time, or more enjoyable than getting acquainted with new nighbors over a cold drink and a sandwich?

Summer was meant for catching up a free hour or two in your busy life and asking your friends in The nice thing about entertaining in your home, summer or winter, is that you can make it just as informal and simple as you like. Jewel Graham, nutritionist at Iowa State College, suggests serving sandwiches or cookies and a cooling iced fruit drink.

You'll probably want to have everything ready ahead of time, so there won't be any fuss and bother at the last minute—especially if it's a hot day, says Miss Graham. Choose a comfortable setting — such as a screened-in porch, or a shady corner of a porch or terrace if there aren't mosquitoes and other bothersome insects stirring.

It may be most convenient to serve from a large tray placed on a small sturdy table. If you use a tea table, a bowl of fresh cut flowers will add a special touch. And remember when you're arranging your table that plates, glasses, silver, tablecloth and food should all contribute to the decorative effect.

Use A Favorite Recipe

You may want to stir up your favorite brownie or cookie recipe for your guests. For sandwiches, use nut bread, fruit bread or thin sliced bread. Use both dark and enriched white bread in one sandwich for color contrast. Good sandwich fillings of various kinds of cheese foods and spreads, ground meats, cashew butter, peanut butter, fish and chicken salads, cream cheese and jelly, and honey spreads. Another idea suggested by Miss Graham is to serve big pototo chips spread with a special meat or sandwich filling.

If the teen-agers in your family like to have their friends over, help them out by setting the stage for a tea or party they can whip together themselves. Miss Graham suggests that you provide a special snack shelf for the youngsters. Stock it with sandwich spreads, flavorings for drinks and a full cookie jar. This way they can make their own refreshments on short notice and have fun doing it. If your daughter likes to bake, her contribution to these parties might be to keep the cookie jar well filled.

Help Themselves

Youngsters like to sit around a table with everything within reach and help themselves. If you have a lazy susan, they could use it for "dunking" mixtures, sandwich fillings, olives, potato chips and a variety of crackers and wafers.

Here's an idea for a sandwich spread that usually goes over big with grownups as well as teen-agers. Use soft American or cheddar cheese as a base, add cream cheese and a bit of roquefort or blue cheese and whip it up together with the mixer. Form it into a ball the size of a grapefruit or orange and roll it in chopped nuts. Then put it in the refrigerator to blend the flavors and firm for about 24 hours. You could serve this in the middle of a big tray with crackers and rye or pumpernickel bread arranged around it. The youngsters help themselves, armed with bread and butter knives.

Take time out this summer for occasional informal get-to-gethers now and then. They'll pay you dividends in fun, relaxation and both new and renewed friendships.

RACING PIGEONS MISS DISASTER IN SPIRIT LAKE

Fourteen banded racing pigeons were rescued from a watery grave in Spirit Lake last week by Conservation Fisheries Biologists The birds landed on the surface of the lake in heavy fog at Templer Park, were taken to the state fish hatchery, fed, dried out, watered and released on the hatchery grounds. The birds took to the air, circled the south shore of Sprit Lake, and headed northeast

The birds, part of those entered in an unknown race, have probably reached the safety of their home lofts. The band numbers have been recorded and the Conservation Commission will attempt to secure information on the banded birds from the American Racing Pigeon Union.

Commission biologists are anxious that all the banded birds found in the wild be reported to the Conservation Commission It is not necessary to return the leg band, however, a post card stating all information found on the band, number, date and location of the find, will be greatly appreciated.

1951 HOG CROP SECOND LARGEST

Hancock County hogs moving to market this fall will help make up a 7 percent increase over 1950 marketings, according to June 1 estimates of the nation's 1951 pig crop, reports county extension director, Paul Henderson.

Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates show the 1951 spring pig crop to be the second largest on record, although it's 14 percent below the 1943 peak.

Increased farrowings accounted for only 4 percent of the increase in the spring crop, but a boost in the number of pigs saved added another 3 percent.

In addition, W. A. Pearce, Iowa State College farm economist reports that breeding intentions for this fall show a 4 percent increase in the number of sows bred. If these intentions are carried out and an average number of pigs are saved, the increase in fall pigs will be 3 percent over last year. This makes the combined pig crop about 5 percent larger than 1950 crop, the economist adds.

He thinks the larger 1951 pig crop will about cancel out the stronger consumer demand, and a more normal seasonal decline in hog prices may occur this fall and winter. However, international events and the size of this year's corn crop will be important factors in late 1951 hog market. In any event, pushing hogs for early sale is expected to pay.

FISHERIES BIOLOGIST FINDS PLENTY OF CATFISH

Fisheries investigations on the Upper Des Moines River have proved to fisheries biologists that there are plenty of channel catfish in the Upper Des Moines River and many of large size.

In spite of high water, biologist Harry Harrison has trapped and tagged hundreds of the channel catfish in the vicinity of Estherville, Emmetsburg, Rutland, Bradgate and Humboldt on the Upper Des Moines River. The fish were weighed, measured and tagged for indentification on subsequent recapture.

In some nets as many as 500 channel catfish from 8 to 15 inches in length have been caught in two days' fishing. In one net three channel catfish between 15 and 20 pounds were caught. In other nets as many as 20 catfish averaging 5 pounds each were taken.

Harrison reports the big catfish feeding on large minnows and other food fishes.

Anglers in the Upper Des Moines River are asked to watch for tagged channel catfish and report any such fish taken, to the State Conservation Commission, East 7th and Court Avenue, Des Moines 9, Iowa.

SUDAN GRASS WILL GRAZE 2 TO 3 COWS PER ACRE

Sudan grass for summer pasture will carry two or three cows an acre at time bluegrass is dormant.

It offers a quick, nutritious summer pasture at a time when native grasses are hard and unpalatable, says Ralph Krenzin, Iowa State College extension agronomist. Under the normal growing conditions, sundan grass is ready for pasturing 6 to 8 weeks after planting.

This temporary pasture is easy to grow, it thrives in hot weather and grows rapidly on fertile soil.

Krenzin recommends rotation grazing of sudan grass. Planting dates can be staggered by a week or 10 days. Then when the early-planted field is grazed down, the second planting will be ready.

Rotation grazing is also necessary so that small plants will not be eaten by cattle or sheep. This short growth is occasionally high in prussic acid, but there is little danger of prussic acid poisoning when plants are 18 inches or more in height.

HERE'S A QUIET WAY TO REMOVE STUMPS

There's a way to remove ugly tree stumps that's as quiet as dynamite is violent. It's not as fast as dynamite, but it can be used in back yards and other enclosed areas where dynamiting is too dangerous.

Here's how E. P. Sylwester, Iowa State College extension plant pathologist, suggests doing the job.

Drill several holes into the stump as deeply as possible. These holes should be at least ½ inch in diameter, one hole for every 4 inches of tree diameter. Fill the holes loosely with sodium chlorate or potassium nitrate (saltpeter). Repeat this filling two or three times as rainwater disolves the chemical. This chemical will permeate the wood and make the stump more inflammable.

In late July or August when the stump is dry, soak some kindling wood or cobs in oil and build a fire around the stump. It will slowly smolder into the ground, Sylwester says.

DON'T LET WEEDS GET HEAD START IN GARDEN

Iowa gardeners who let summer weeds take over the garden are throwing away a lot of spring work as well as chances for good yields from vegetable crops, says M. W. Reger, Iowa State College horticulturist.

He says vacations and busy summer days often give weeds a running start, and the result is undersized tomatoes and potatoes at harvest time and disappointing yields from other garden crops.

Reger recommends keeping down summer weeds by raking between the rows as often as weed seedlings appear. Weeds can be removed from the rows by hand along with extra vegetable plants that are too crowded to give top yields.

For families who will be vacationing away from home with no one to look after the garden this summer, Regres suggests using a mulch of light material such as straw or grass. A mulch will hold down weeds and will prevent evaporation of moisture from the soil surface during the hot, dry days of July and August.
